Steamer Is Driven Ashore on Island and Will Be a Total Loss.

Vessel Goes to Rescue, But Is Forced to Leave Eighty-eight to Die.

Two Hundred and Five Are Taken Off—Many Passengers Victims.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SANTIAGO (Chile) Feb. 12.—The Pacific Navigation Company's steamer Lima is ashore on one of the islands of the Humblane Passage of the Straits of Magellan, and probably will be a total loss.

The chief pilot and fifty passengers were drowned.

The British steamer Hatumet rescued 205 of the persons aboard the steamer, but was forced to leave eighty-eight persons, which is was impossible to rescue.

BRINGS SURVIVORS TO PORT.
[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ANCUD (Chile) Feb. 12.—The British steamer Strathurst arrived here with 188 men and women, and seventeen of the crew of the steamer Lima, which is on the rocks in West Huambiin Passage, Straits of Magellan, where the steamer went aground in a storm on February 5. The steamer officials report having left eighty-eight persons aboard the Lima, their rescue being impossible. There is no drinking water, the tanks having burst. The first mate of the Lima and fifty passengers were drowned.

There seems some doubt, according to the dispatches from Santiago and Ancud, respectively, as to the steamer which rescued the 205 persons from the stranded liner. The Hatumet is given in the Shipping Register, while the steamer Strathurst is not listed there.

The stranded steamer Lima is a British vessel owned in Liverpool, and plying between that port and ports of South America. She was last reported as sailing from Bahia Blanca, Argentina, on January 26, and was on her way to Chilean and Peruvian ports.

The Lima is 401 feet long, registers 3115 tons and was built in Glasgow in 1907.

The place where the steamer was wrecked probably is Humblane Passage, located between the south shore of San Pedro Island and Chile. It is a narrow passage full of dangers and difficult of navigation. Humblane rocks, two in number and sixty-five feet high, mark the entrance to the passage.

EXPLOSION OF POWDER MAY HAVE SUNK SHIP.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARSEILES, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A terrific explosion of powder, blowing the ship into a million pieces, may have caused the loss of 156 lives and the French trans-Atlantic steamship Gen. Chanzy, Wednesday night.

As these dispatches told yesterday, this vessel bound from here to Algiers and laboring in a frightful storm, struck a reef between the Islands of Majorca and Minorca in the Mediterranean near the Spanish coast. The ship sunk before a boat could be lowered and of all on board only one man survives.

The Gen. Chanzy carried thirty tons

ELEANOR ROBSON AND AUGUST BELMONT ENGAGED.

Formal Announcement Is Made of Approaching Nuptials—Actress Bids Stage Comrades Informal Good-by. Despite Former Denials, Friends of Couple Are Not Surprised.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Formal announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Robson to August Belmont was made today to a wide circle of intimate friends. With the fall of the curtain in the Majestic Theater, Brooklyn, tonight, Miss Robson closed her artistic career and will be seen no more on the stage. She has been playing this season the role of Glad in Mrs. Burnett's drama of cheerfulness, "The Dawn of a Tomorrow."

Without any formalities or ceremonies she bade good-by tonight to her company and returned to her home in this city, where she will remain until after the marriage.

Mr. Belmont's attentions to Miss Robson for more than two years, and the efforts of mutual friends to bring them together on every favorable opportunity, resulted last spring in reports of an engagement, which were denied. But in spite of these denials, the engagement has been expected for a long time and today's announcement created no particular surprise.

Miss Robson was born in England in 1880, but was brought to America by her parents when a child, and she has made New York her home ever since. At the age of 7 she was placed in a convent school on Staten Island, where she remained until 17. Her early desire was to be a painter, but accident turned her to the stage for a career.

Miss Robson's first appearance was in 1897. When with her mother at the California Theater, San Francisco, a BUSINESS MUST OBEY LAW, SAYS PRESIDENT.

Wall Street and Cry of Panic Answered Firmly in Masterly Way.

Present Methods, If Inconsistent With Legal Requirements, Will Have to Be Changed, Declares Nation's Chief at Lincoln Day Dinner in New York—Defends Tariff Emphatically and Proves His Contentions.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—"If the enforcement of the law is not consistent with the present method of carrying on business, then it does not speak well for the present methods of conducting business, and they must be changed to conform to the law."

This was President Taft's answer to Wall street, and its cry of "panic." It was made to a cheering audience of hundreds of prominent Republicans gathered tonight at the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the Republican Club of this city, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Taft adhered to his purpose of discussing platform pledges and how they should be kept. It was at the conclusion of a detailed argument as to how the Republican party is redeeming its pledges that he came to party or danger to future success in the insurgent movement and other dissensions.

Republicans, who feared defeat at the polls in November, he declared, however, should take courage from the demoralized condition of their opponents, the Democrats.

"It was Grant," said the President, "who banished his own fear in battle by thinking how much more afraid the enemy was."

DEFENDS TARIFF BILL.

Mr. Taft again came to the defense of the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Bill. He did not hesitate, he said, to repeat that it substantially complied with the party pledge for tariff regulation, and, that through this bill, the party had "set itself strongly in the right direction—toward lower tariffs."

a discussion of the anti-trust law and Wall street, on which his utterances had been awaited with the greatest interest.

The President declared the administration "would not foolishly run amuck in business and destroy values just for the pleasure of doing so."

DISCUSSES ATTACKS.

"No one," he continued, "has the motive as strong as the administration in power to cultivate and strengthen business confidence and prosperity. But there was no promise on the part of the Republican party to change the anti-trust law except to strengthen it. Of course, the government at Washington can be counted on to enforce the law in the best way calculated to prevent a destruction of public confidence in business, but that it must enforce the law goes without saying."

President Taft did not hesitate to discuss the attacks that have been made upon the administration, and the Reviewing the party platform, the President spoke of postal savings banks, amendments to the interstate commerce law, the anti-injunction plank, Statehood for Arizona and New Mexico, and the conservation of natural resources, bills to carry all of which promises into effect, were pending in Congress, and he believed would be passed.

PRESIDENT'S STRONG ADDRESS IN FULL.

President Taft said:

Mr. President, gentlemen of the Republican Club and fellow-guests: The birthday of the man whose memory we celebrate tonight is an appropriate occasion for renewing our expressions of respect and affection for the Republican party, and our pledges to keep the part which it plays in the history of this country as high and

COUNTESS GOES AFTER REVENGE.

BARON BUDBERG MUST FACE SERIOUS CHARGES.

Titled Austrian Woman, Formerly a Resident of Chicago, Goes to Russia to Complain Against Chief of Bureau of Petitions for Misusing Authority of the Czar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA (Austria) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A cable dispatch received here today announces that the Countess Gizycky, formerly Miss Eleanor Patterson of Chicago, is leaving America for Warsaw to meet Baron Budberg, Chief of the Bureau of Petitions in St. Petersburg, who, as announced a few days ago, is accused of misusing the authority of the Czar in ordering the Count to deliver to the Countess their child, which he had kidnaped from her. The Countess will go from Warsaw to St. Petersburg.

Count Gizycky is furious over the conduct of Baron Budberg, who subjected him to arrest and imprisonment for forty-eight hours on two occasions, when the Count crossed the Russian frontier. The Baron, it is said, charged the Count with high treason for having entered an agreement with the Countess to leave the child, who is a Russian subject, under the protection of persons in Austria. Count Gizycky's friends managed to inform the Czar, who, they say, was ignorant of the whole affair, Baron Budberg having made unwarranted use of the Czar's name.

The Countess is said to be determine to have revenge and Baron Budberg, it is reported, is certain to be dismissed from his high position. He may also be imprisoned when the pending investigation ends.

BAN ON METHODISM.

FAIRBANKS LAUDED BY VATICAN INSPIRATION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ROME, Feb. 12.—The Weekly Review of Rome, the organ of English-speaking Catholics, today publishes a long editorial on Charles W. Fairbanks, former Vice-President of the United States, which is believed to have been inspired by the Vatican. It says:

"Mr. Fairbanks's Protestantism is broad and liberal, and allows him to put his stalwart shoulder to the wheel to help on every good cause. Though a strong party man in politics, his devotion to party does not make him desire the disappearance of all parties but his own, and he has the same theory with regard to religion. He is a Methodist, but he has no wish that Methodism should be the only religion in America.

"Mr. Fairbanks is a type of millions of good Americans, friendly to the Catholic church and believing that it makes little difference what a man's religion is, provided he does his best to live up to it."

After reviewing the incident between Mr. Fairbanks and the Vatican, the Review emphasizes the tolerance of the Vatican and points out that a man may pass his whole life working in the Vatican archives and galleries without even being questioned as to whether he is a Turk or an atheist. He may even be a diplomatic representative to the Vatican without being a Catholic.

"But even the all-embracing liberality of the Vatican," continues the Review, "cannot include the Methodist organization here, which entered Rome through the breach made September 8, 1870, with Garibaldi's red shirts. Many animosities have resulted, but they have made no change in the spirit or the system of the Methodists. Their organization does not minister to the wants of visiting Methodists here, but is directed toward perverting the faith of the people.

"Not only that, but the Methodists have always been bitterly and avowedly anti-papal, eagerly welcoming every opportunity to discharge their venom against Catholicism. Statistics, compiled by themselves, show that the cost of making a single Roman a Methodist averages 7000 francs, ($1400). In the last forty years they have spent 12,000,000 francs in this unholy work of proselyting Catholics, especially Catholic children.

"Mr. Fairbanks did not know these facts, or he would not have given his promise to speak in the Methodist church twenty-four hours before the time fixed for his audience with the Pope. Otherwise he would have understood how incompatible was his presence in this hotbed of anti-Catholic proselyting, with an audience with the Pope.

SPEAKER CANNON ON PARTY'S FIRST LEADER.

DUBS LINCOLN FATHER OF REPUBLICANISM.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, eb. 12.—Abraham Lincoln, as Speaker Joseph G. Cannon knew him—as the young lawyer, traveling horseback through the frontier of Illinois; then the commanding figure in the memorable debates with Douglas, the Presidential nominee of the new-born Republican party, and finally leader of the nation through four years of Civil War and the starting of reconstruction—was pictured on the screen of memory tonight before the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce at its Lincoln memorial dinner.

Once the reference to politics entered the Speaker's words and that was when he declared the Republican party of today was the party of Abraham Lincoln, and that Lincoln was one of the founders of the party, and its first great leader.

"The principles embodied in the first platform are still the principles of the party," said the Speaker. "Lincoln always will be known as the first and foremost Republican. He was a party man, battling for principles which his party represented and which he believed to be of vital interest to the American people.

"When Lincoln returned from the Black Hawk war and became a candidate for the Illinois Legislature, though the State was overwhelmingly Democratic, he published his platform —'I am for a national bank; I am for a high protective tariff and the system of internal improvements. These are my sentiments and my political principles.'

"Those became the cardinal doctrines of the Republican party."

SENSATION GROWS.

MORE POISON FIGURES IN DEATHS OF SWOP

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 12.—That poison had been found in the contents of the stomach of Miss Margaret H. Swope, and that Chrisman Swope went into convulsions, according to Miss Anne Houlihan, his nurse, a few minutes after she had given him a capsule at the direction of Dr. B. C. Hyde, were two startling statements made under oath by John G. Paxton, executor of the Swope estate, today.

These new and important features in the Swope mystery were revealed by Mr. Paxton only after he had been threatened with commitment if he refused to answer the questions asked him by Frank P. Walsh, Dr. Hyde's attorney.

Mr. Paxton was giving his deposition in the slander suit for $100,000 brought against him by Dr. Hyde.

Miss Swope is a niece of the late Col. Thomas H. Swope. On December 1, she was stricken with typhoid fever and Dr. Hyde cared for her.

"Poison was found in marked quantities in the contents of Miss Swope's stomach by Dr. Victor Vaughn," said Mr. Paxton.

Attorney Walsh eagerly demanded of the witness:

"Did any one tell you of any medicine that Dr. Hyde gave Chrisman Swope?"

CHRISMAN GETS CAPSULE.

"I do not remember the exact words," answered Mr. Paxton, "but Miss Houlihan told me that Dr. Hyde had given her a capsule to give to Chrisman Swope. She gave the capsule, and a few minutes later he went into convulsions."

The story of the stormy scene in the Swope homestead on December 18, when the nurses threatened to leave if Dr. Hyde were not dismissed and another physician obtained to care for the ill members of the family, was told by Mr. Paxton. He told of the vague suspicions of the nurses which eventually led up to the ope

THAT HONEYMOON IN AN AEROPLANE IS OFF.

aviator, autoist and clubman, who yesterday was sued for $100,000 damages for breach of promise.

HEART IS BROKEN.

tion of his sojourn in the West and that Miss Broumel had determined to enter suit.

GIRL ILL TWO WEEKS.

After the postponement of the wedding Miss Broumel is said to have been ill for two weeks.

Mr. Gill is well known as an automobilist and has won several cups in competitions on local and out of town tracks. About a year ago he purchased a balloon and turned his attention to that sport, making several ascensions. Afterward, with H. S. Dosh, he constructed an aëroplane and it was in connection with the flight of this machine at Los Angeles that Mr. Gill went West.

Mr. Gill was found last night at the Hotel Bachelor, No. 320 West Fifth street, and informed that Miss Broumel had filed suit against him. When told that the former bride-to-be had asked $100,000 as a partial salve for her wounded affections, he went "up in the air" higher than his biplane did in its most successful flight. He at first insisted that there was nothing which could be said in regard to the case which would come within the bounds of propriety, but as he thought of how much money $100,000 really is, he relented, and spoke with strong feeling. He said:

"It is true that I was engaged to Miss Broumel, and we were to have been married January 5. The engagement was broken by my fiancée, for reasons which I would not care to state at the present time. Her announcement of her intentions was conveyed to me in the latter part of December, shortly before I left Baltimore. This breach of promise suit is, indeed, very much of a surprise to me. I cannot understand it.

COULDN'T PAY JUDGMENT.

"Because of my desire to perfect my invention, I have remained in this city since the aviation meeting, and have worked in company with Mr. Dosh and Mr. Beachey. Our stay is made because we desire to take advantage of the ideal climate of this region, where we can continue trying out our flying machine, without being hindered by adverse weather conditions. We are now engaged in preparing for flights at the Motordrome track.

"My success is not in any way attributable to Miss Broumel or her friends, and although I have a modest competence, I could not possibly obtain enough money to pay her half the amount demanded if the suit should be decided against me. I mention my activities here to show that I am not a man who has fled from his responsibilities, and staying several thousand miles away from home in order to thwart the law. I have to work here when I can, in company with Mr. Dosh, who is a joint inventor with me, and who has paid part of the money with which our aëroplane was built. I was formerly interested chiefly in the Motor Car Company of Baltimore. I was an automobile dealer of that city, and was born and raised there. My capital was obtained through my own efforts, and any success I may have had is due to hard work. I have no private family fortune on which I can draw for money with which to settle breach of promise suits."

When he was told that eastern dispatches mentioned the fact that he and his intended had planned to take their honeymoon trip in an aëroplane, Mr. Gill became indignant at the implied satire.

"Of course, I have not made any record flights," he said, "but our machine did fly and made a fair showing. What do they think? Can any one imagine that a man could pass a lengthy honeymoon in an aëroplane?"

The aviator tried to maintain his composure while he was talking, but he narrowly missed burning his face with a cigarette when embarrassing questions were asked. A request for a picture of the plaintiff and ex-fiancée was met with polite hints that a man who is "ditched" by the object of his affections always returns her pictures, etc.

"I will return to Baltimore in time to answer the suit," he said, "I expected to go there soon, any way. I am at a loss to figure out how Miss Broumel could go to such an absurd length as to sue me."

STATE TO INVESTIGATE CITY.

SULLIVAN SAID TO BE BACK OF MOVE TO LEXOWIZE CHICAGO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A big plan is under way to Lexowize Chicago. Political and official circles of the city were deeply stirred today when it was revealed that a legislative inquiry into graft in the municipal government, and especially the police department, is in sight.

The probe proposed has all the airs of the Lexow inquiry that startled New York, and recalls the Baxter Legislative Committee that came from Springfield years ago, and caused excitement for a brief spell.

The resolution will be introduced by Representative John O. Hruby, a Sullivan Democrat. It is said to be the result of a brush between Sullivan and Mayor Busse.

Representative Hruby has a resolution drawn and ready to be offered in the lower house at Springfield, Tuesday, calling for the appointment of a special committee. Hruby stands sponsor for the move and declares he is ready to "clean out the City Hall," if he can.

The resolution is sensational in the preamble, and recites rumors and charges of official corruption.

Speaker Shurtleff is on friendly terms with Mayor Busse and the city administration. Men close to the Speaker declare that he will not permit the resolution to come in if he is convinced there is any attempt to use the Legislature to embarrass the City Hall.

One report had it that the motive behind the resolution was the recent transfers and shifts in the police department.

A rumor that Roger C. Sullivan was interested in the Hruby resolution was denied emphatically by the Representative.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] High society here is having an object lesson in the way an American woman of spirit can turn a deaf ear to the dictates of good form when she thinks there is a scheme to impose upon her.

Mrs. James Henry Smith furnishes this example by refusing to redeem effects of the Duke of Vizen who recently married her daughter, Anita Stewart, from creditors, whose demands she deems usurous. The critical have intimated that the affair is scandalous, but that opinion doesn't budge Mrs. Smith.

Much sarcastic comment is afloat concerning the skill with which the young Prince Miguel of Braganza, now wearing the title of Duke of Vizen, contrived to hold at bay his creditors until he married this young woman with millions. Mrs. Smith evidently has her own views on the subject. Her present attitude shows she regards the creditors as vultures intent on preying on her daughter's fortune.

WILL FIGHT.

ASQUITH WILL PUSH BATTLE.

Most Aggressive Policy Is Decided Upon.

Redmond Protests Against O'Brien Tactics.

Principles Laid Down Cover Whole Ground.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Premier Asquith, after consultation with the chief Liberal whip, has decided, according to the Liberal journals, on his programme of Cabinet changes and Parliamentary procedure, and will face the new House of Commons with an aggressive policy.

His plan is to force the fighting along the whole line, instead of following a weak opportunism, such as the heterogenous character of the coalition groups of Radicals, Laborites and Irish Nationalists might tempt a feebler statesman to prefer. So far as the relations of the government with the Nationalists are vital to Mr. Asquith's projects the air is clearing rapidly.

John Redmond's reëlection as chairman of the "regulars" developed a very decisive protest on their part against the tactics of the O'Brien-Healy faction.

Redmond's declaration that "Irishmen, or at all events the Irishmen who think with me, do not ask for separation, but simply a Parliament to deal with purely Irish affairs, in which all parties and classes would be represented," has had an excellent effect in Great Britain and, even if designed shrewdly as a sop to the Unionist Cerberus, it is bound to diminish the unreasonable fear of Ireland by which so many sensible Englishmen are possessed.

Another coup of Redmond's was his sweeping repudiation of the statement by O'Brien that Asquith had modified his promise to Ireland after securing by means of it the Irish vote in Scotland.

This does not prevent O'Brien, however, from maintaining that "the Asquith promise of home rule is really not a bogy to England because England knows it is bogus to Ireland."

Like Healy, one of the cleverest politicians modern Ireland has produced, O'Brien insists that "the Irish party bosses," as he styles Redmond and his lieutenants, are trying to drive from public life every patriot who has dared to oppose their policy of blocking land purchase.

On the government side it is pointed out that whenever Mr. Asquith has gone into details regarding his Irish designs he has laid down two principles to cover the whole ground—namely, that whatever body is to be set up in Dublin its power of self-government would not extend to the fiscal question, and that the imperial government must control absolutely everything not agreed on in advance as "purely Irish affairs."

Austen Chamberlain says there is not the least doubt that the Irish would adopt protection if given control of fiscal concerns.

SHAW PLAYS PROPHET.

Former Treasurer Says Central Bank Means Only Unlimited Power to Standard Oil.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—"I do not think there can be any doubt in the mind of any one who studies the question in the light of admitted conditions, that if a central bank is established in this country, it will be owned or controlled by the Standard Oil Company," said Leslie M. Shaw, former Secretary of the Treasury today at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association in this city. His topic was "The Central Bank."

"There are two diseases prevalent in this country, either of which is liable to prove fatal," he continued. "One is Wall street mania and the other Wall street phobia. I do not think I have been badly inoculated with either, but I am frank to say that it seems to me quite un-American to place with any group of men the power to contract or expand our currency at will, and to grant or withhold credit to any bank, to any merchant and to any corporation at pleasure.

"I thoroughly believe that the Standard Oil Company and the United States Steel corporation could afford to pay the national debt for such a charter and I say this in spite of whether such a bank would be independently profitable or otherwise. The control of it would be valuable beyond the power of man to conceive to any group of men who had independent financial interests large enough to justify it, and the ability necessary for its operation."

The Duke and Duchess of Manchester, accompanied by the father of the Duchess, Eugene Zimmerman, arrived in Cincinnati yesterday.

DEATHS OF SWOPES.

would, he said, simply read the jurors law on the duties of grand juries and then insist that the present body go into the case with the utmost thoroughness.

Paxton in testifying, related the dramatic departure of Dr. and Mrs. Hyde from the Swope home, the wife indignant at the charges that had been made against her husband.

HEARS FIRST RUMOR.

"It was on this day," Mr. Paxton said, "that for the first time poison was mentioned in connection with Colonel Swope's death. It was on this day that for the first time I was aware of the awful story of the nurses and their suspicions. It was on this day that the open breach occurred between Frances Swope Hyde, a good, faithful woman, who had charge of the home during the trying scene of illness and her mother, Mrs. Swope.

"About 6 o'clock the night of that significant day, I was going down the street with my wife when Dr. Twyman came up behind and asked to see me. I said: 'I'll come right over to your office as soon as I take Mrs. Paxton home.'

"But he replied: 'No, I must see you at once.'

"And he asked Mrs. Paxton to go home with his driver, so that I could talk with him about the Swope illness. Then he told me of the action of the nurses and the suspicions of Mrs. Swope.

"I was thunderstruck, hit squarely between the eyes when he told of the nurses going in a body to Mrs. Swope and telling her her children were being murdered and that they wouldn't stay in the house any longer. I couldn't believe it at first, but Dr. Twyman went from one peculiar circumstance to another as the nurses had related to him.

DEFENDS MRS. HYDE.

"But I still believed Dr. Hyde innocent," Mr. Paxton said, "and when they were leaving the Swope home under that awful charge that night I shook Dr. Hyde's hand to show Mrs. Swope that I did not believe her suspicions could be true."

"By them, do you mean that Mrs. Hyde left under a cloud of suspicion, too?" Frank Walsh interrupted.

"No! No!" Mr. Paxton almost screamed. "She is a sweet, pure girl and has been doing her duty, helping take care of her sisters in their illness."

"Then why didn't you ask her about the conditions in the home during the illness? Why didn't you ask her to explain the queer things which you said made up those awful charges before you accepted them as truth?" asked the persistent Walsh.

Paxton declined to answer.

GREAT STRUGGLE.

SALOON BATTLE GROWS INTENSE.

FIGHT AGAINST LIQUOR IN CHICAGO MAPPED OUT.

Anti-Saloon League Plans to Open Headquarters from Which Place the War Will Be Directed While the Whisky Dealers Arrange to Wrestle Unceasingly With Their Opponents.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the beginning of next week the battle over the existence of the saloon will be on, to continue with increasing intensity until April 5, when the final test of strength will be made at the polls.

On Monday the Anti-Saloon League will open headquarters, and from there the army of men and women who will be in the field constantly until election day will be directed in their efforts.

The general campaign committee met in the offices of the Anti-Saloon League this afternoon to map out the work that is before it. Action was taken looking to the harmonious coöperation of all the forces which will be engaged in the fight to abolish the saloon in Chicago.

The endeavor to secure the united effort of all the reform organizations of Chicago in the present fight for a "Dry Chicago" have been successful except as to a single organization, according to information that was given out today.

The one organization that has thus far seemed lukewarm toward the campaign is the Chicago Law and Order League, of which Arthur Burrage Farwell is secretary in charge. In a conference between Mr. Farwell and James K. Shields, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, it was formally announced that the Farwell organization will not actively assist the campaign.

Opponents of the local option proposition will make a double-headed campaign, but there will be no clashing of interests.

The breaking out is accompanied by a sore throat, but both disappear in a few days and very few of the patients are compelled to take to their beds.

There are a score of cases in the city at present and the physicians say there have been more than fifty cases within the past two months. One peculiar feature of the disease is that while it is undoubtedly contagious, all exposed to it do not take. On the other hand, none of the other eruptive diseases tends to make one immune, for some of the patients have had all three of the other diseases.

Unusual Surgical Operation Saves Woman's Life and Effects Reconciliation.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Feb. 12.—The intervenus transfusion operation performed here yesterday on Mrs. Lucy Wood has resulted in reuniting Mrs. Wood and her husband, who have been separated nearly two years. As a last resort the young wife's mother wrote to the young husband in Vancouver, and asked him to submit to the operation, telling him it was the only way of saving his wife's life. He hurried to Tacoma, and eagerly presented himself at the hospital. The blood from his arm was allowed to flow into his wife's body for thirty minutes. Today it is said she will recover. A reconciliation between husband and wife was effected when she regained consciousness.

BOLD HIGHWAYMAN SHOOTS AT INTENDED VICTIMS.

Robber Rides to Farm House, Demands Money from Owner, Who Escapes; Holds Up Hired Man, and, Becoming Angered at Not Getting Much Money, He Shoots Horse.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VANCOUVER (Wash.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A highwayman on horseback who held up successively a woman and three men, fired several shots at two who fled from him and finally, disappointed at his failure to get more than a small sum, shot a horse belonging to one of his intended victims, is being searched for by the Sheriff and a posse near here.

The robber appeared at the home of B. Befino, near town, last evening and demanded of Mrs. Befino, who was alone at the home with her children, that she give him money. She said she had none, directing the horseman to her husband who was at the barn with a hired man. The highwayman rode to the barn with the same demand, but Befino and his assistant sprang through a hole in the side of the barn and fled, the man firing after them three or four times, but missing.

He then held up a second hired man from whom he took some money. Then he went to the house, but Mrs. Befino had taken her children and fled into the brush whence she did not emerge until the danger was past. After making his round, the stranger returned to the barn and fired a bullet of 32 caliber into the left front shoulder of one of Befino's horses, after which he rode away. The alarm was sounded promptly and pursuit given, but the robber has not been found.

COUNTIES FALL OUT.

Were Once One and the Proprietorship of Taxes Will Be Thrashed Out in Court.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] There is a scandal among the Northern California counties. Two respectable neighbors, Glenn and Colusa counties, have fallen out, and have decided to go to law about the matter. The two were one once, but were divided in 1891.

It has been discovered that taxes on property now situated in Glenn county, but formerly in Colusa county, were delinquent to a considerable amount when the division was made, and are still delinquent, so far as the Colusa county treasury is concerned. If they were ever paid they were not paid to Colusa county. Of course, if these taxes had been paid when due they would have gone to Colusa, and having never been transferred to another, to Colusa they still belong.

The Board of Supervisors have instructed W. K. Scarborough, abstractor and searcher of records, to institute suit against Glenn county.

PLANS BIG TIN SMELTER.

ALASKA HAS HUGE DEPOSITS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A plan to establish a tin smelter and tin plate mill on the Pacific Coast, preferably on Puget Sound, has been laid before the owners of the Seaward Peninsula tin mines, north of Cape Nome, by John D. Field, a former United States mining expert. Field says that the Seaward Peninsula is capable of producing large quantities of both tin and graphite. Extensive tin deposits are found in several places. Those adjacent to Port Clarence Bay are most valuable because more accessible to transportation. Ten or a dozen prospectors who have had nerve to develop their tin prospects are now shipping here about a hundred tons of tin concentrates, an amount sufficient to make 7500 tons of tin plate. The tin is now sent to England and Germany, costing $35 per ton for treatment and $17 for freight.

Puget Sound and Alaska are now using 200,000,000 tin cans yearly for salmon, milk and fruit. Two years ago the United States imported 83,000,000 pounds of tin, valued at $24,000,000, and 27,000,000 pounds of graphite. The graphite can be brought south for manufacturing into paint, lubricators and crucibles.

ONE WILL PROBABLY DIE.

MORE THAN SCORE INJURED IN OAKLAND TROLLEY WRECK.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

OAKLAND, Feb. 12.—More than a score of people were injured and probably one may die as the result of a wreck on the long trestle of the Key Route line leading to the pier about 7 o'clock this morning.

Because of the heavy fog, the crowded car, which left the Twenty-second-street depot at 6:40 o'clock, was flagged at what is known as the second fog station, about midway on the trestle of the line. It was given a three-minute headway. Following the train was the Berkeley train, supposed to reach the pier at twenty minutes after 7 o'clock. Failing to catch any signals, Motorman Martin of this train ran along at his usual rate of speed, and because of the fog did not see the standing train until he struck it. The first car of the Berkeley train telescoped the rear car of the Oakland train. It was providential that neither of them fell into the water.

Superintendent Potter and other officials of the road, with ambulances and doctors, at once went to the scene, and the injured were taken to Oakland hospitals and others across the bay to San Francisco. Among those hurt were:

At the Merritt Hospital, Oakland:

Arthur D. Thurston, No. 1645 Market street, installer for Home Telephone Company; slightly bruised.

John D. Diggs, No. 1573 Franklin street, salesman, Baker & Hamilton Co.; bruised.

Asa Bennetts, No. 1356 Sixteenth street, iron wrker, Dyer Bros.

Michael W. Harnish, No. 1105 Fourteenth street, salesman, City Hardware and Steel Company.

Harry Chapman, No. 697 Sixth street, bruised.

W. R. Appleton, No. 716 Sixth street.

Joseph W. Gerard, No. 573 Twenty-eighth street.

John Fitzsimmons, conductor, Key Route.

—— Roberts, address unknown.

Joseph Levy, No. 560 Twenty-eighth street.

At Harbor Hospital, San Francisco:

H. F. Stone, No. 578 Sixty-first street, manager O'Reilly Cloak and Suit Company, fractured skull; will probably die.

George Fensky, No. 685 Sixty-second street, lacerated wound of scalp, contusions and abrasions of body.

Edward King, No. 1028 Adeline street, machinist, fingers smashed, body bruises, shaken up.

ONE OF THREE MAY DIE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—Three of those injured in the collision on the Key Route pier were brought to the Harbor Emergency Hospital in this city. They are:

H. E. Stone, Oakland, fractured skull; may die.

George Fensky, bruises and abrasions.

Edward King, Oakland, fingers crushed.

STRENUOUS.

PROSECUTING ATTORNEY AND ANGRY LITIGANT DO BATTLE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In an exciting fight in the corridor of the Melhorn building today, Prosecuting Attorney George F. Vanderveer ejected S. B. Parlier from his office after giving him a thorough beating, and settled out of court a long contested case that has given himself and office no end of trouble. Vanderveer has been in the limelight of late through the conviction of two of his deputies of blackmail on a Los Angeles automobile dealer.

"You can't insult me in my office," shouted Vanderveer as he kicked Parlier out of the door.

"You can't put me out," answered Parlier as the two men clinched.

They whirled through the swinging doors, fighting like demons and clinching, fell to the floor. Here with a well-timed toe hold and a half Nelson on his adversary Mr. Vanderveer soon gained the upper hand.

"I'll go," cried Parlier, but Vanderveer's anger increased and the pommeling continued until Parlier, not waiting for the elevator, ran down the stairway.

Parlier had loaned his room-mate, D. C. Hudson, a suit of clothes to wear to a dance. Hudson pawned the suit after the dance and Parlier had him arrested. The case dragged along through the courts for a long time until Parlier growing tired of the delay, went to Vanderveer to remonstrate.

BURNS IN HIGH CHAIR.

Charred Body of Bakersfield Infant Is Taken from House by Courageous Neighbor.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BAKERSFIELD, Feb. 12.—Strapped in a high chair in his home, little Joseph Alexander Malins was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the house last night. The charred body of the infant was dragged from the flame-swept house by a neighbor after Mrs. Malins had been severely burned in an attempt to rescue the child. Previously the father had dashed into the house, and blinded by smoke, returned with only an empty chair. Several neighbors also made futile attempts to reach the tot.

The fire was caused by the explosion of an oil lamp not ten minutes after Mrs. Malins had left her home to get a pail of water.

ICE CARNIVAL DELIGHTS.

SKI JUMPING FEATURE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TRUCKEE, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Crowds of excursionists from the East and West enjoyed the opening day of Truckee's Snow and Ice Carnival today. The weather was ideal and the snow and ice were in good condition for sleighing, skiing, tobogganing, skating and other amusements. Three additional Norwegian ski jumpers were pressed into service today and their exhibition alone was worth the many miles the crowds traveled. William Lundquist, Charles Parson and the Lund brothers this afternoon gave the spectators the best exhibition of genuine Norwegian skiing ever seen here.

Amateur riders and women ski jumpers form an amusing feature of the carnival. Sleighing to Lake Tahoe and surrounding points was never better. This morning many parties went to Lake Tahoe and skating on Donner Lake is being enjoyed.

Tomorrow will be the greatest day, and hundreds from Sacramento, San Francisco and Reno will swell the throngs already here. There is from four to eight feet of snow on the ground.

AGED WOMAN BURNED.

INJURIES MAY BE FATAL.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. P. Selling, mother of Ben Selling, a millionaire merchant, was severely and perhaps fatally burned this morning as the result of an accident. Mrs. Selling, who is 69 years old, had lighted a gas heater in her bathroom when her clothing caught fire, and in an instant the flames were smothered, but not until her right side from the head to the knees had been terribly burned. Mrs. Selling is the widow of P. Selling, one of the most prominent early pioneers of Portland.

"Imitation is The Sincerest Form of Flattery"

If this old saying be true then Edwin Cawston the founder of the Cawston Ostrich Farm at South Pasadena, 24 years ago this month, has every reason for feeling flattered.

During the 24 years in which he has been growing ostrich feathers and manufacturing them into plumes and boas he has had many imitators.

Each one in turn has tried to adopt his methods, some even going so far as to imitate the Cawston Trade Mark; Cawston being the originator of the idea of attaching his name to every plume and boa he turned out.

This trade mark is the Cawston guarantee of quality and value.

The rock upon which so many of Cawston's imitators have been wrecked is their inability to live up to the Cawston guarantee.

Inferior Goods Cannot be Guaranteed

Cawston's Repair Department is as famous almost as his factory for new goods. He is at present doubling the capacity of this department to enable him to handle the enormous increase of repair business.

In the window of the Cawston Store, 313 South Broadway, can be seen some willow plumes made by the repair department from a customers' old feathers which she had put aside as useless.

We can redye to match any costume.

UP AND DOWN THE VALLEY.

PITH OF THE NEWS FROM OUT THE MIDDLE WEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] This was a typical winter's day. Although the sun shone at times, it was not for long. In the meantime it snowed and blowed, at times assuming the proportions of a small blizzard. To make matters worse, a raw, cold wind from across the lake was much in evidence. The maximum temperature was 22 deg., with a minimum of 12 deg. BOY DISCIPLE OF SIMPLE LIFE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Walter Keever, 16 years old, is no ordinary boy. That was shown today when Municipal Judge Going ordered him to eat real food and wear warm clothing. He was also ordered to return to his mother's home and eat what she prepared for him. Walter, pale and emaciated, has been an apostle of the simple life and has been trying to live "close to nature." He has been receiving large quantities of literature on the simple life. When Mrs. Keever intercepted some of the mail and tried to keep the boy from going barefooted in zero weather and rolling about the snow, a quarrel arose and the boy is said to have struck his mother, who forthwith had him arrested and appealed to the court to do what it could to make him lead a normal life.

Judge Going read the boy a lecture and ordered his release.

MRS. FORD GETS RESPITE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CINCINNATI, Feb. 12.—Mrs. Jeanette Stewart Ford will not be tried a second time on the indictment charging her with blackmailing Charles L. Warriner, defaulting local treasurer of the Big Four Railroad, until the Ohio Supreme Court passes upon the point raised in the first trial concerning the use by the defense of the transcript of testimony given by Warriner before the grand jury. This decision was made by Judge Swing today.

EACH DESIGNS OWN FLAT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—An apartment building which will bear the impress of individuality of eight men is to be erected on the fashionable Lake Shore Drive. These eight men are to be tenants and owners of the structure. Each will design his own apartment, deciding upon all details of number, arrangement of rooms, style of finish and decoration. The result is expected to be a striking departure from the uniformity prevailing throughout apartment houses in this city. The building is to be nine stories high, and will cost $250,000, of which each of the eight men will pay an equal share. The first floor will be fitted up with billiard, lounging and reading rooms and other accommodations of a clubhouse. The owners will be a lawyer, a wholesale grocer, a broker, a lumber merchant, a steel manufacturer, a dry goods merchant, and a capitalist.

TROLLEYS 1749 MILES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—From Syracuse, N. Y., to St. Louis by trolley is the achievement of A. J. Littlejohn, an eastern traction company official, who arrived here yesterday. Littlejohn took a roundabout course, and traveled 1749 miles. The trip back to Syracuse, which he began last night, will cover only 1009 miles. Mr. Littlejohn traveled sixty-eight miles on steam roads. Between Kalamazoo and Niles, Mich., a distance of forty-eight miles, and between Paris and Ridge Farm, Ill., twenty miles, he abandoned the interurban electric lines. Of the total distance of 1749 miles, 1689 of them were over electric railways.

NO POISON FOUND YET.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

COLUMBIA (Mo.) Feb. 12.—The chemical analysis of the viscera of Prof. J. T. Vaughn, which began Wednesday morning, has brought no results. Before locking his laboratory door four days ago, Dr. Paul Schweitzer, professor of chemistry in the University of Missouri, announced that he could not discover poison, if present, in less than a week. Since then, he has refused to discuss his work. He will permit no one to enter his laboratory, a small room, 12x16 feet.

JUDGE LECTURES DETECTIVE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—"Mugging," as the system of photographing prisoners for the rogues' gallery is sometimes termed by police officers, received severe condemnation in the municipal court yesterday, when Judge Gemmill ordered Detective James McCarthy to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for having caused Roy Whitmore, a student who had been fined $5 for disorderly conduct, to be photographed and measured in the Bureau of Identification, using the words "outrageous and damnable" in referring to some of the methods resorted to by the police in the treatment of prisoners. Judge Gemmill said: "The rule laid down by your superiors is that no person should be taken to the Bureau of Identification unless fined more than $50. In photographing that boy, and perhaps sending the picture throughout the country as that of a rogue, I do not believe you acted right. I will enter a rule against you to show why you should not be adjudged in contempt of this court."

MANGLED HERO WARNS TRAIN.

OPERATOR WITH FOOT CUT OFF SOUNDS WARNING.

Telegrapher Who Falls Under Cars, Crawls Half a Mile to His Office, and Sends Telegram That Probably Saved Two Hundred Lives, Then Faints from Injuries.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MANKATO (Minn.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With one foot cut off and both legs so badly mangled he could not walk, Rudolph Elmquist, an 18-year-old telegraph operator, crawled half a mile, bleeding and faint, to his station and sounded a warning to Mankato, which probably saved the lives of 200 persons aboard the Great Western train.

"My foot is cut off," said Elmquist over the wire, "and No. 271 is coming back to pick me up. She will have to look out for No. 124, which is due in Mankato in a few minutes."

Then Elmquist fainted dead away from loss of blood and the torture, but he had saved the train. Elmquist had followed his custom of boarding the evening freight train caboose from Benning, his station, to Mankato. This time he slipped, fell under the train and was fearfully mangled from the knees down.

Members of the freight crew saw him fall and stopped the train to investigate. Elmquist was too badly hurt to make himself heard and in the darkness the crew could not see him. They proceeded on their way, believing Elmquist had not been hurt, and had returned to Benning. That is exactly what he did, but not until all hope of warning the crew of the freight train had been lost. The track was supposed to be clear for passenger trains.

WESTON GETS OVATION.

Cross-Continent Pedestrian Is Greeted at Kingman, Arizona, With Popular Outpouring.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KINGMAN (Ariz.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edward Payson Weston, world-famous cross-continent walker, reached Kingman yesterday morning and was met outside of town by the entire school population of the town and hundreds of other people. The old fellow was greeted all along the line with enthusiasm and when he reached town the juvenile band was brought out and serenaded him while he rested at his hotel.

Weston met with a mishap just before reaching town by slipping into a trestle and injuring one of his knees, but on examination it was found that the injury would not inconvenience him. After partaking of a frugal repast and resting an hour he again proceeded on his journey. He was accompanied by a Santa Fé motor car and his secretary.

He was enthusiastic over the great desert country through which he has passed during the past five days, and the ever changing scenes of mountain and plain, the pure desert air and the balmy spring day seemed to rejuvenate him and make him years younger.

He started off with the old springy step that all the old eastern fellows remember so well and soon disappeared to the east, behind the jutting mountains. Last night he reached and tonight he is at Seligman, a division point of the Santa Fé.

The trip from Los Angeles to Kingman was uneventful and the grand old walker reeled off a daily mileage averaging close to forty-six miles.

CHARGES PASTOR WITH THEFT.

PORTLAND (Or.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Rev. George E. Strayer, founder and operator of a mission at Albina, was arrested today on a charge preferred by Mrs. Lydia Hallis, an elderly member of his congregation. The woman accuses the minister of misappropriating her jewelry, valued at $350, and $125 in money. Mrs. Hallis became acquainted with Mr. Strayer by attending the mission, and left the money and jewelry with him for safe keeping, she says. When she wanted money for living expenses she declared he refused to give it to her. He was placed in the County Jail in default of $5000 bonds. The preacher denied having the money or jewelry. Mrs. Hallis came from the East a year ago. Rev. Strayer is one of the most widely-known mission workers in Portland.

ference, first, as to whether it is a revision downward and, second, as to its capacity for producing revenue, for it must be borne in mind that the passage of the law was downward not only for the purpose of changing rates in their effect upon the industries of the country, but also for the purpose of increasing trade and revenues, and the success of the measure is to be judged by its results in both these respects.

AMOUNT OF REDUCTION.

The Bureau of Statistics is authority for the statement that during the first six months of the operation of the Payne law, which has just ended, the average rate of duty paid on all dutiable imports was 21.9 per cent. ad valorem. The average of duty paid on all imports for the same six months for the four preceding years under the Dingley law was $24.2. This would show that the reduction in the Payne law is 2.94 per cent. of the value of the goods or the reduction below the previous tariff rates is 12 per cent., showing a downward revision to this extent in those goods which are dutiable.

But this is not all. Under the Payne law 51.6 per cent. of the gross imports for the last six months have been entered free, while under the four years preceding for the same six months the free list amounted to 45.4 per cent. of the total importations, so there was not only a reduction of duty on dutiable imports of about 12 per cent., but also an enlargement of about the same percentage of the free list.

For the production of revenue, the Payne law is even more of an improvement on the Dingley bill. During the six months that the Payne law has been in force, from August 5 to the night of February 5, the customs receipts amounted to $166,002,856.54. Under the Wilson-Gorman tariff the semi-annual average was $83,147,625.90. Under the Dingley tariff the semi-annual average was $130,265,841.84. Under the Wilson tariff the monthly average was $13,857,937.65. Under the Dingley tariff the monthly average was $21,710,973.64, while under the Payne tariff the monthly average has been $27,677,142.75, or 100 per cent. greater than the monthly average under the Wilson tariff and 26 per cent. greater than the monthly average under the Dingley tariff.

PROOF IN OPERATION.

Of course, as the country increases in population, the customs receipts increase, but even considering the population the increase in the tariff receipts has been marked. Under the Wilson tariff the annual average customs receipts per capita were $2.38; under the Dingley law, $3.23; while under the Payne tariff they are $3.71.

For the six months that the Payne tariff has been in force the total receipts, both from customs and internal revenue, have been $322,899,231.91, while the disbursements have been $332,783,283.08, showing that the expenditures exceeded the receipts by only $9,884,051.17, with no collection as yet from the corporation tax. For the corresponding period last year the expenditures exceeded the receipts by over $40,000,000. This showing indicates that under the present customs laws the deficit will be promptly wiped out, and that to meet our normal expenditures we shall have ample revenue.

I, therefore, venture to repeat the remark I have had occasion to make before, that the present customs law is the best customs law that has ever been passed, and it is most significant in this that it indicates on the part of the Republican party the adoption of a policy to change from an increase in duties to a reduction of them and to effect an increase of revenues at the same time. The act has furnished to the executive the power to apply the maximum and minimum clauses in order to prevent undue discrimination on the part of foreign countries and this is securing additional concessions in respect to the impositions on our foreign trade.

This act has done justice to the Philippine Islands by giving them free trade with the United States.

NEW TARIFF BOARD.

More than all this, the new tariff act has provided for the appointment of a tariff board to obtain impartial evidence upon which, when a revision of the tariff shall seem wise, we shall have at hand data from which can be determined with some degree of accuracy the difference between the cost of producing articles abroad and the cost of producing them in this country.

The great difficulty in the hearing and discussion of the present tariff bill was the absence of satisfactory and credible evidence on either side of the issues as to lower or higher tariffs. The importer on the one hand and the manufacturer on the other were present to give their fallible judgments affected by their own pecuniary interests as to the facts under investigation. Men who were struggling to find the truth were greatly perplexed by the conflicting testimony.

The tariff bill authorizes the President to expend $75,000 in employing persons to assist him and the government in administering the tariff law.

I have construed this to mean that I may use the board appointed under this power not only to look into the foreign tariffs, but also to examine the question with respect to each item in our tariff bill what the cost of production of the merchandise is, and what its cost is abroad. This is not an easy task for impartial experts, and it requires a large force. I expect to apply to Congress this year for $250,000 to organize a force through which this investigation may go on and the results be recorded for the use of the Executive and Congress when they desire to avail themselves of the record. In this way, any subsequent revision may be carried on with the aid of data secured officially and without regard to its argumentative effect upon the question of raising or lowering duties. Taken as a whole, therefore, I do not hesitate to repeat that the Republican party has substantially complied with its promise in respect to the tariff and that it has set itself strongly in the right direction toward lower tariffs and furnished the means by which such lower tariffs can properly and safely be fixed.

POSTAL BANK IS NEXT.

An investigation by the tariff board of the sort proposed will certainly take a full two years or more. Meantime, the operation of the present tariff promises to be consistent with the prosperity of the country and with the furnishing of sufficient funds with which to meet the very heavy but necessary expenditures of carrying on our great government.

The Republican national platform contained the following:

"We favor the establishment of a postal savings bank system for the convenience of the people and the encouragement of thrift."

A bill has been introduced to establish a postal savings bank. The great difficulty in the bill seems to have been to make proper provision for its management and investment of the money deposited.

The great advantage of a postal savings bank is the encouragement to thrift of those whose fears of the solvency of any depository except a government depository tempts them away from saving. A government promise to repay seems to be specially effective in leading people to save and deposit their savings. The machinery of the postoffice department with its 60,000 postoffices and 40,000 money order offices offers an economical and far reaching machinery in places remote from banks and among people who fear banks, which but for spend. The low interest offered, that of 2 per cent., prevents such postal savings banks from interfering with regular savings banks whose rate of interest always is in excess of 2 per cent.

In the present stage of the Senate bill there have been inserted amendments drawn apparently for the purpose of having money deposited as savings in government postoffices, distributed through the locality where it has been deposited in the State and national banks and so deposited as to make it impossible for the trustees of the fund appropriated under the law to withdraw money for investment in any other form.

WITHIN FEDERAL POWER.

I regard such an amendment as likely to defeat the law. First, because it takes away a feature which ought to be present in the law to assure its constitutionality. If the law provided that the trustees to be appointed under the law for the funds thus deposited could meet the financial exigencies of the government by purchase or redemption of the government two per cent. and other bonds, the measure would certainly be within the Federal power, because the postal banks would then be an instrument of the national government in borrowing money. We have now about $700,000,000 of 2 per cent. bonds with respect to which we owe a duty to the owners to see that those bonds may be taken care of without reduction below the par value thereof because they were forced upon national banks at this low rate in order that the banks might have a basis of circulation. This implied obligation of the government, the postal savings bank funds would easily enable it to meet.

Secondly if the funds are to be arbitrarily deposited in all banks, State and national, with national supervision over the State banks and a panic were to come, it is difficult to see how the government could meet its obigations to its postal savings bank depositors, because with every bank suspending payments the funds of the postal savings banks would be beyond the control of the government and we should have a financial disaster greater than any panic we have heretofore met. A provision that when the money is not needed to invest in government bonds or to redeem the same it may be deposited in national banks in the neighborhood of the place of deposit, will avoid the great danger of a panic and will strengthen a banking system which is an arm of the Federal government.

I sincerely hope that before the measure is hammered into its final shape it may take on these characteristics, which shall give it a constitutional validity and sound financial strength and usefulness. Those who insist upon the elimination of these two necessary characteristic features of the bill will pull the party into position where it cannot hope to escape the charge that it is not in good faith in seeking the passage of a postal savings bank act, and is not seeking therefore to comply with the promise of the Republican platform in that regard.

ON SUBJECT OF RAILROADS.

On the subject of railroads, the Republican platform says:

"We approve the enactment of the railroad rate law and the vigorous enforcement by the present administration of the statute against rebates and discriminations as a result of which the advantages formerly possessed by the large shipper over the smaller have subsequently disappeared, and in this connection we commended the appropriation by the present Congress to enable the Interstate Commerce Commission thoroughly to investigate and give publicity to the accounts of interstate railroads. We believe, however, that the interstate commerce law should be further amended so as to give railroads the right to make and publish traffic agreements subject to the approval of the commission, but maintaining always the principle of competition between naturally competing lines and avoiding the common control of such lines by any means whatsoever. We favor such national legislation and supervision as will prevent the future overissue of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers."

A bill to carry out these declarations has been introduced in both House and Senate and is now being considered before the appropriation committee of these two bodies, and there is every hope that the bills thus introduced in substantially the same shape as introduced, will be enacted into law.

Indeed, this railroad measure goes further than the promise of the platform, for, while it subjects the issue of stock and bonds to the restrictive supervision of the commission and prevents further watering of securities and forbids the acquisition by a railroad company of stock in a competing line, it also puts very much more power into the hands of the commission for the regulation of rates and it facilitates in every way the ease of supervision by the commission of the railroads to secure a compliance by the railroad with the rights of the public and of the shipper.

The bill was prepared by the Attorney-General after a full conference with the Interstate Commerce Commission with representatives of the shippers and with representatives of the railroads and while it was not the result of an agreement between all parties in interest, it was drafted with a view to meet all the fair objections and suggestions made by every one of them.

WILL UPHOLD LAW.

The platform further says:

"The Republican party will uphold at all times the authority and integrity of the courts, State and Federal, and will ever insist that their powers to enforce their processes and to protect life, liberty and property, shall be preserved inviolate. We believe, however, that the rules of procedure in the Federal courts with respect to the issuance of the writ of injunction should be more accurately defined by statute, and that no injunction or temporary restraining order should be issued without notice, except where irreparable injury would result from delay, in which case a speedy hearing thereafter should be granted."

A bill to carry out exactly this promise has been introduced in both the Senate and House and will doubtless come up for consideration and passage. The bill does not go as far as Mr. Gompers and the Federation of Labor demand, but it goes as far as the Republican convention was willing to let it go, and it was so drawn as to make the abuse of the injunction writ, without notice, very improbable. It provides no injunction shall be issued without full notice and hearing, unless to prevent irreparable injury, and that in such cases the court shall make a finding from the evidence adduced, pointing out what the injury anticipated is, and why irreparable, and why there is not time to give notice, and if the injunction shall be issued without that notice, it is provided that injunction shall lose its force at the expiration of five days unless a hearing is had.

STATEHOOD IS ASSURED.

The platform also promised Statehood to Arizona and New Mexico, and the bill providing such Statehood has passed the House and has been favorably considered by the committee of the Senate, so that there seems to be no reasonable doubt that this promise will be fully kept.

The Republicans in their platform

"We indorse the movement inaugurated by the administration for the conservation of natural resources; we approve all measures to prevent the waste of timber; we commend the work now going on for the reclamation of arid lands and reaffirm the Republican policy of the free distribution of the available areas of the public domain to the landless settler. No obligation of the future is more insistent and none will result in greater blessings to posterity. In line with this splendid undertaking is the further duty, equally imperative, to enter upon a systematic improvement upon a large and comparative plan, just to all portions of the country, of the waterways, harbors and the great lakes, whose natural adaptability to incoming traffic of the land is one of the greatest gifts of a benign providence."

CONSERVATION UNDER WAY.

In accordance with this plank, measures for the conservation of the public domain, for the reclassification of lands according to their greatest utility and the vesting of power in the executive to dispose of coal, phosphate, oil and mineral lands, and of water-power sites in such way as to prevent their monopoly, and union of ownership in syndicate or combination, have been already introduced and will doubtless, in a form approved by Congress, be made into law. The subject has attracted the widest interest and its importance is becoming more and more impressed upon American people.

The river and harbor bill, which has just been reported by the River and Harbor Committee of the House, has been framed with a view to complying with the plank of the platform which I have above quoted.

It has taken the plan for the improvement of the Ohio River from Pittsburgh to Cairo as a project to be carried out in a certain number of years and it has treated similar projects for improvement of the Missouri from Kansas City to St. Louis; of the Mississippi from St. Paul to St. Louis, and the same river from St. Louis to Cairo, and, by continuing contracts and appropriations, these projects will go on until they are completed. This is a change from the previous plans and is the result of an extended popular agitation in favor of such a system.

ARRANGES TO MEET DEFICIT.

Following the panic of 1907, the government revenues fell off and the expenditures continued as before, leaving a deficit for the years 1097, 1908 and 1909. There was, however, no deficit in the whole administration of Mr. Roosevelt when the expanses are compared with the revenues. Indeed, it will be found that under the operation of the Dingley Bill, which covers most of his administration and the first six months of the present administration, the surplus, on the whole, was about $250,000,000. At the beginning of this administration, however, it was perfectly evident that with expenses increasing and revenues decreasing, there would be a continuous deficit, and this the Republican party, with its majority in Congress and the responsibility placed upon it, has proposed to meet by reducing expenditures and increasing revenues.

I have already shown what the increase in revenues has been. The present administration, in estimates for the year ending June 30, 1911, cut them some forty-odd million dollars below the actual appropriations of the year before, and now it is proposed to appoint a join commission consisting of Congressmen, Senators and members appointed by the Executive who shall examine the organization of the various departments and bureaus and by the elimination of duplication, the construction of bureaus and the increase in efficiency of the individual civil servant, shall decrease the regular permanent cost of governmental operation.

ENFORCES ANTI-TRUST LAW.

With respect to trusts, the Republican party spoke as follows, in its platform:

"The Republican party passed the Sherman anti-trust law over the Democratic opposition and enforced it after Democratic dereliction. It has been a wholesome instrument for good in the hands of a wise and fearless administration. But experience has shown that its effectiveness can be strengthened and its real objects better attained by such amendments as will give to the Federal government greater supervision and control over and secure greater publicity in the management of that class of corporations engaged in interstate commerce having power and opportunity to effect monopolies."

Since this plank was adopted, prosecution of the tobacco trust and the Standard Oil trust, begun in the last administration, have gone on and have resulted in decrees in the Court of Appeals of the Second and Eighth circuits, which are now pending on appeal in the Supreme Court. The decrees in each case tear apart the congeries of subordinate corporations, which, united by holding companies, make up the trust in each case and enjoin individuals from a further maintenance of the illegal combination of such corporations to carry on the business for which it was organized.

NO PROMISE WAS MADE.

It has been said the Republican party made a promise so to amend the law as to ameliorate and soften the application of the trust law in its interdiction upon business as conducted by the greater corporations, but I find nothing in the platform to justify such a construction. The principle of the anti-trust law is that those engaged in modern business, especially of manufacture and transportation, shall pursue the policy with respect to their competitors of "live and let live," and that they shall not use the business of their concerns to frighten exclusive patronage from customers and the elimination of smaller concerns from competition and thus control output and fix prices.

The Attorney-General has prepared a bill which he thinks, and I think, will offer the means of easily doing so, to those who wish to pursue a lawful interstate business under the protection of a Federal charter, which while it will subject the business of the concern to the closest scrutiny of the government officers, will save the business from harassment by State authorities and will give it that protection which its peaceful pursuit of its business as a Federal corporation will necessarily secure it.

THINKS BILL EFFICIENT.

This measure has met the approval of those who fear too great concentration of power in the Federal government, of those who deny the right of the Federal government in such cases to grant incorporation. I believe the act to be constitutional, and I believe that if enforced, it would furnish a solution of our present difficulties, but as it was not specifically declared for in the Republican platform, I do not feel justified in asking the adoption of such an act as a party matter.

I have brought it forward, however, as a suggestion for meeting the difficulties which are likely to be presented in the prosecution of suspected illegal trusts as a means by which they can put their houses in order, and take their places among those engaged in legitimate business.

party pledges of the Republican party performed, there would seem to be no good reason why the party should not receive renewed approval by the electors of the country in the coming Congressional campaign.

REFERS TO REBELS.

But there are signs which many construe as an indication that the Republican majority in the present Congress will change to a Democratic majority in the next. This is based chiefly on the dissensions in the Republican party and upon the severe attacks made by a great many newspapers having Republican tendencies upon the party and its leaders in Congress and in the nation. I am glad to say that so far as the legislation which I have indicated above is concerned, there seems to be a clear party majority in both Houses in favor of its passage and the redemption of the party pledges. There is, however, a decided difference as to the proper rules to prevail in the House and as to the Senate personnel of the leadership.

It would seem as if these questions were questions that might well be solved within the party lines, but they have been so acute as to produce what has been called an insurrection and to awaken the country over a controversy between the insurgents and the regulars, so-called. I am hopeful that as we approach the lines of battle for the next year the settlement of these internal questions can be effected without such a breach of the party as to prevent our presenting an unbroken front to the enemy.

We among the Republicans may be discouraged when we consider our own dissensions, but when we look to the possibility of any united action on the part of the Democrats for any policy or any line of policies, we must take courage. It was Gen. Grant, who said that when he first went into battle, he had a great deal of fear, but he overcame that fear by maintaining in his mind the constant thought of how much more afraid his opponent was.

DEMOCRATS IN SAME FIX.

And so we who find ourselves at times given over to the thought that Republican control is at an end should not forget to consider not only our own factional strife, but also that of our ancient enemy. If the Democratic party were a solid, cohesive organization, guided by one principle, and following the same economic views, the situation would be far more discouraging than it is.

The Republican party has been the party responsible for the government for the last seventeen years. It has discharged those responsibilities with wonderful success. The troubles growing out of the Spanish War and those which have come from the rapid accumulators of fortune, it had fallen to the party to meet, and while they have not yet all had a perfect solution, the record is one of which we have no reason to be ashamed.

Mr. Roosevelt aroused the country and the people to the danger we were in of having all our politics and all our places of governmental authority controlled in corporate interests, and to serve the greed of selfish but powerful men. During his two terms of office, by what almost may be compared to a religious crusade, he aroused the people to the point of protecting themselves and the public interest against the aggressions of corporate greed, and has left public opinion in an apt condition to bring about the reforms needed to clinch his policies and make them permanent in the form of enacted laws.

DECRIES DEMAGOGUERY.

But as an inevitable aftermath of such agitation we find a condition of hysteria on the part of certain individuals, and on the part of others, a condition of hypocrisy manifesting itself in the blind denunciation of all wealth and in the impeachment of the motives of men of the highest character and by demagogic appeals to the imagination of a people greatly aroused on the subject of party and honesty in the administration of the government.

The tendency is to resent attachment to party or party organization, and to an assertion of individual opinion and purpose, at the expense of party discipline. The movement is toward factionalism and small groups rather than toward large party organization, and the leaders of the party organization are subjected to the severest attacks and to the questioning of their motives without any adequate evidence to justify it.

I am far from saying the Republican party is perfect. No party which has achieved such power as it has achieved for the last seventeen years, could be expected to maintain either within its rank and file, or in its management,

If you suffer from catarrh, consumption, or any throat or lung trouble, you can get relief by breathing the air in the forests of pine in the Adirondack mountains.

You can get quicker relief and absolute cure by breathing the soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams thrown off by the wonderful eucalyptus trees in inland Australia.

But how many of us can afford to take a trip to Australia? Not many to be sure. But Mr. R. T. Booth, known to fame as the discoverer of Hyomei, and one of the world's greatest humanitarians, said: "If I cannot take the catarrh sufferers of the world to breathe the germ killing, health giving air of the eucalyptus forests of Australia, I will bring the air to the catarrh sufferers," and he did.

PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

men of the purest and highest motives, and I am the last one to advocate any halt in the prosecution and condemnation of Republicans, however prominent and powerful, whose conduct requires criminal or other prosecution and condemnation.

NO HALT POSSIBLE.

It should be well understood by the Republican party that in its present condition, with the various divisions subjected to the crossfire of its own newspapers and its own factions, any halt or failure on the part of those in authority to punish and condemn corruption or corrupt methods will properly be visited upon the party itself, however many good men it contains.

We shall be called upon to respond to the charge in the next campaign that the tariff for which we are responsible has raised prices. If the people listen to reasonable arguments it will be easy to demonstrate that high prices proceed from an entirely different cause and that the present tariff being largely a revision downward, except with respect to silks and liquors, which are luxuries, cannot be charged with having increased any prices.

But this will not prevent our Democratic friends from arguing on the principle of "Post Hoc, Propter Hoc," that because high prices followed the tariff, therefore they are the result of it. And we must not be blind to the weight of such an argument in an electoral campaign.

WHY LIVING IS HIGHER.

The reason for the rise in the cost of necessities can easily be traced to the increase in our measure of values, the precious metal, gold, and possibly in some cases to the combinations in restraint of trade.

The question of the tariff must be argued out. The prejudices created by the early attacks upon the bill and the gross misrepresentations of its character, must be met by careful presentation of the facts as to the contents of the bill and also to its actual operation and statistics shown thereby.

I believe we have a strong case if we can only get it into the minds of the people. Should disaster follow us and the Republican majority in the House become a minority in the next House, it may be possible that in the Democratic exercise of its power the people of this country will see which is the party of accomplishment, which is the party of arduous deeds done, and which is the party of words and irresponsible opposition.

I only want one more word. From time to time, attacks are made on the administration, on the ground that its policy tends to create a panic in Wall street and to disturb business. All I have to say upon that subject is this:

NO RUNNING AMUCK.

That certainly no one responsible for a government like ours would foolishly run amuck in business and destroy values and confidence just for the pleasure of doing so. No one has a motive as strong as the administration in power to cultivate and strengthen business confidence and business prosperity.

But it does rest with the national government to enforce the law and if the enforcement of the law is not consistent with the present methods of carrying on business, then it does not speak well for the present methods of conducting business and they must be changed to conform to the law.

There was no promise on the part of the Republican party to change the anti-trust law except to strengthen it, or to authorize monopoly and a suppression of competition and the control of prices, and those who look forward to such a change cannot now visit the responsibility for their mistake on innocent persons.

Of course the government at Washington can be counted on to enforce the law in the way best calculated to prevent a destruction of public confidence in business, but that it must enforce the law goes without saying.

I am glad to be present and meet your distinguished Governor, whose name is such a power before the people of this State and of the country that to lose him as a candidate for Governor by his voluntary withdrawal is to lose the strongest asset the Republican party has in the State to enable it to win at the next election.

HUGHES LAUDS PRESIDENT.

Gov. Hughes made an address, in which he said:

"The American people are fair enough to recognize a great President, filling a great position, and doing his duty with absolute fidelity. For that reason, Mr. Taft will be renominated and reëlected."

Gov. Fort of New Jersey said: "There is room in the Republican parey for advanced thinking. Senator Dolliver, Senator Nelson and Senator Beveridge are not thoughtless men. They know their people and they are familiar with conditions in the Middle West. They are only a little in advance of the rest of us. But they are no more so than was Lincoln in his Springfield speech in 1858."

tinued: "In political crises of , Ohio has always been con- for her loyalty to country and here is a rapidly-growing de- the part of the electorate of try that the national plat- f the great political parties resent the respective issues h these parties contend; that atforms shall say what they nd mean what they say, and that ambiguous or disingenuous planks shall be no longer tolerated as devices to obtain votes; and further that the President elected by either party, having subscribed to the principles enunciated in the platform of that party, is pledged to the people of the country to exercise his utmost endeavors to secure the enactment of the promised legislation and he becomes therefore not only the titular but the responsible head of the party by which he is elected.

"In view of these facts, the National League of Republican Clubs recognizes President Taft as the responsible head of the Republican party.

"The name of William Howard Taft of Ohio, supplied the enthusiasm for the campaign work of our clubs in the recent national election. The name of President Taft and the policies for which he stands will supply the National League of Republican Clubs the requisite enthusiasm for effective service whenever Republican party supremacy is threatened."

FLAG WAVES AT BANQUET.

Companions of Loyal Legion and Ladies There.

Lincoln Day Celebrated in Toast and Song.

Charming Spectacle Under Tri-Colored Lights.

Lincoln's Birthday was celebrated by the Southern California Association of Companions of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, with a feast last night in the banquet room of the Hotel Alexandria. In addition to the array of distinguished veterans, there was a brilliant assemblage of ladies, adding charm to the scene and piquancy to the conversation.

The banqueting room was elaborately decorated with flags, palms, flowers and tri-colored electric lights. The head table extended along the entire north side of the room, the officers and speakers of the evening being seated along one side. Running along the opposite side was a solid hedge of fragrant flowers among the foliage of which were hidden myriads of red, white and blue electric lights. In the center played an electric fountain, while near it, fluttering in the breeze of a hidden electric fan, the Stars and Stripes waved unceasingly throughout the evening. The other members of the company sat at small tables, in the center of each of which was a huge bowl of pink sweet pea blossoms.

The scene was strikingly beautiful. The general effect was heightened by a band of musicians, the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by J. A. Foshay, and of many of the well-known patriotic songs by the entire company.

At the close of the feast, Gen. O. H. LaGrande arose and proposed a toast to "The President," which was drunk in silence, following which brief responses were made to the following toasts: "Abraham Lincoln," Maj. Ben C. Truman; "Battle of South Mountain and Antietam," Gen. Harrison Gray Otis; "The Ladies," Companion George H. Stewart; "The Commandery of California," Col. W. R. Smedberg. Lieut. Horace Wilson, Commander, was to have responded to the toast, "The Loyal Legion," but was not present. Silent toasts were also drunk to "The Army" and "The Navy."

TO LEARN ROOSEVELT PLANS.

Emperor William Is Anxious to Get Information as He Desires to Act as Host.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BERLIN, Feb. 12.—The Foreign Office has endeavored for some weeks to learn just when former President Roosevelt expects to be in Germany, but is still in the dark as to his plans. It has been widely published that Mr. Roosevelt will be in Berlin on April 28, but if this is so, it is not officially known and the situation is somewhat embarrassing, as Emperor William's spring plans cannot be definitely arranged in the meantime, because His Majesty purposes to be in the capital when his guest arrives.

Official messages have now been addressed to Mr. Roosevelt with instructions that they be forwarded with the greatest dispatch. A reply from him making known his intentions, is expected any day.

It is understood the Emperor has invited Mr. Roosevelt to be his personal guest and whether he will be accorded the honors usually bestowed upon the head of a government is a question which is frequently suggested by paragraphers in the press. One editorial commentator suggests that the Emperor must have consideration for President Taft and not exhibit too demonstratively his regard for the President's predecessor.

SAILORS PREPARE VALENTINE.

Members of Atlantic Fleet Will Hang Helen Gould's Picture in Naval Y.M.C.A.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four thousand sailors of the Atlantic fleet, who look upon the Naval Y.M.C.A. building in New York as their "home" are perparing to present themselves with a valentine in the form of a new likeness of Miss Helen Gould. The building, which is in Sands street, was presented by Miss Gould for the sailors, and her contributions largely support it. Hence the mariners are great admirers of the woman whose philanthropy has brightened many lives. Within the last week a new photograph of Miss Gould came into existence—the first she has had taken in ten years—and some of the sailors conceived the idea of having an enlargement made and hanging it in the messroom of the "home" as a "Valentine."

The photograph is said to be an excellent likeness of the woman, who, during the Spanish War, won the title of "Angel of the Army." It is from a snap shot taken in New York while Miss Gould and a companion were walking about on some philanthropic mission.

GET BUSY, BOYS.

STILL YEARNING FOR SOUL MATE.

MISS GAZZAM BLUSHINGLY ADMITS SHE WOULD WED.

Undaunted by Her Escapade With Marshall Clark, Palmist, to Whose Wife She Paid $25,000 for Alienating His Affection, Rich Heiress Longs for Coming of "Mr. Right."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Miss Antoinette Elizabeth Gazzam, the romantic young heiress whose personal fortune is estimated at $3,000,000, announced today that she will devote her life to a campaign for the advancement of her ideas on matters of the heart, religion and society.

She has worked out these interesting problems for herself in a most practical way, all but marriage. And blushingly she admitted she had no desire to remain single any longer than was necessary to find her soul's counterpart in the opposite sex.

This means that on the top of Storm King Mountain, near Cornwall-on-the Hudson, where stands the marble palace in which Miss Gazzam lives, a young woman not yet 20 years old, endowed with beauty, intellect and the income of a dozen European princesses, awaits the coming of the man who can measure up to her ideal of what a husband should be. Her one secret is a detailed statement of her ideal man.

The young heiress herself made this frank admission, employing the same candor and directness with which she told some weeks ago of her escapade with Marshall Clark, the palmist, into whose clutches she fell while using "spirits" to find her soul mate. She paid Clark's wife $25,000 to drop an alienation suit for $150,000, when she discovered Clark to be a faker and a mere fortune hunter.

"True love," said Miss Gazzam, "is not stagnant acquiescence, but the improvement by comparison of ideals seen with the same eyes from different standpoints. I mean to say that if a husband does not like the color of his wife's gown she need not throw it away to show that she loves him, but should use a little diplomacy and only wear it when he is not around.

"I believe that a well-balanced man will seek as a companion a well-balanced woman, but that a stubborn and domineering man will find his counterpart in a shallow-minded, erratic woman; that to wait and watch for one's true mate, or to serve for them is a primary obligation men and women owe to their personal well being."

WRONGED BARON FEARS DIVORCE.

LONDON SOCIETY GETS FRESH MORSEL OF GOSSIP.

Husband of Baroness Arnold De Forest, Who Eloped With Lieut. Ashton, Does Not Care to Try Legal Separation, Fearing It Might Ruin Chances to Be Peer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Baroness Arnold de Forests's elopement with Lieut. H. C. S. Ashton of the Second Life Guards continues to furnish society with food for gossip. Spice has now been added to the abundant rumors in a fresh report that the Baron had expressed willingness to open his home again to the erring wife.

There is no pretense that motives of affection lie behind his attitude. Political ambition is said to explain it. He is eager to become a Peer, having with that view attached himself to the Liberal party and contributed lavishly to its campaign funds. He seems to fear that appearance in a divorce court, even in the capacity of a grievously wronged party, would spoil his career and he would rather take chances with the alternative form of obloquy.

Return this time is apparently off the cards. The Baroness has in effect so declared. Both her family and that of the Baron are Catholics, but she is intent upon divorce by any means that it can be brought about. She hopes the Baron will take the initiative, in which case she will not defend the action. Just now the indications are that he cannot be persuaded to accommodate her.

Her wish is to marry Ashton, who is a man of large wealth. His mother is the Countess of Scarborough, having when widowed married the present Earl. Ashton and the Baron had their race horses trained in the same stable at Newmarket this winter. Indeed, Ashton rode the Baron's horses in some steeple chases. He is a clever amateur jockey.

BRYAN WANTS COUNTY OPTION.

Declares Democracy Must Divorce Itself from the Saloon and Party Split Is Expected.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LINCOLN (Neb.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] William J. Bryan has come out flat-footed for county option in Nebraska. He takes a step in advance of this, and declares Democracy must divorce itself from the liquor interests, because an alliance with the saloon generally is regarded as an alliance with vice.

The saloon, he says, is constantly used to debauch politics, and to prevent the intelligent consideration of public questions. The liquor interests, he declared, made themselves odious at the last sesion of the Nebraska Legislature by preventing the submission of the initiative and referendum.

Mr. Bryan declares the right of the government to regulate the saloon cannot be denied, and the right to make the county the unit of regulation is just as plain. Mr. Bryan's pronouncement, which will appear as an editorial in the forthcoming issue of his Commoner, under the heading "The Liquor Question in Nebraska," is regarded here as epoch-making and as almost certain to split the Democratic party in this State, at least, and probably to deprive him of its leadership.

UNCLE SAM AFTER COAL MONEY.

George F. Peabody of New York Is Alleged to Have Taken Utah Land Illegally.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

UTICA (N. Y.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Papers were filed in the United States Court here today in which George F. Peabody, banker and financier of New York, is sued by the United States government to recover more than half a million dollars. It is alleged that he illegally took possession of government lands in Utah, mined coal therefrom and sold it, using the proceeds for his own use.

The complaint declares that the government is owner of lands in Carbon county, Utah, stated to comprise 1,292.76 acres. It is alleged that at various times between January, 1899, and June, 1900, the defendant entered these lands and mined and conveyed away merchantable coal to the extent of 362,000 tons of the value of $543,000 to the plaintiff; that he converted the same to his own use and benefit. Therefore the United States asks judgment in the sum of $543,000 with interest from January, 1899.

The suit is filed in the United States Court for the Northern New York district, whose headquarters are in Utica, because Mr. Peabody has a legal residence at Lake George, where his country home is located.

BATTLE CREEK "BIFFED."

Because Court Taxes It, Famous Kellogg Sanatorium Will Be Moved to New Jersey.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BATTLE CREEK (Mich.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Battle Creek Sanatorium, famous the world over, is lost to Battle Creek. Judge Parkinson this morning handed down a decision of unconditional ouster for non-payment of taxes.

Dr. Kellogg recently announced that in case the court decided against him he would close the institution and establish a new one in the East. Plans for two of them already have been practically completed. Both will be in New Jersey, one at Lakewood and the other at Atlantic City. In New Jersey such places are not taxed.

The legal fight to establish the status of the sanatorium as a charitable institution and exempt it from taxation has been in progress for ten years.

WANTED IN CHICAGO.

Walter Woelffer, wanted in Chicago for wife abandonment, was arrested last night by Detective Louis Rico, who met him at the corner of Seventh and Olive street. Woelffer, an envelope maker by trade, has been here for some time and was employed in a grading outfit when arrested.

While loosening a small mountain of prepared coal, which had become frozen in the storm, from the yards of the Philadelphia and Reading company at Logansville, Pa., yesterday, six workmen were buried by a sudden slide of one thousand tons, and one of their number, Samuel Piscoe of Logansville, aged 25 years, was crushed to death. The other five were rescued, badly injured.

then decided to keep the doors open until 4 o'clock, but even at that hour only $46,000 had been withdrawn. There was a long line in front of the bank at the opening hour this morning. Announcement that all Oregon Trust Company depositors who came would be paid today brought claimants in droves. None were uneasy because of the difficulty the German American Bank had encountered in finding the loan with which to liquidate the claims. The sight of the money set at rest all fears and checked the rush materially.

Pomona Schools Hold Lincoln Exercises—Church Service Today Will Be of Patriotic Nature.

POMONA, Feb. 12.—By reason of the fact that Lincoln's Birthday came this year on Saturday, the usual anniversary exercises were held in the grade schools throughout Pomona and at the High School yesterday afternoon. There were patriotic recitations and songs by the pupils in the grade schools and at the High School Prof. A. H. Adrian of Pasadena addressed the students upon the life of Lincoln. Today the banks and public library were closed and the postoffice observed holiday hours.

Charles G. Williams, who was convicted by a jury here of giving minors intoxicating liquors at his home on Caswell street, was sentenced by City Recorder Lee to serve sixty days in the City Jail.

Mrs. Arturo Bandini of Pasadena lectured before the Ebell Club at the Unitarian Church here yesterday afternoon upon the early Spanish settlers and life in California in the early days. Mrs. Bandini was entertained while here by Mmes. F. De Witt Crank and Ferdinand Davis.

William B. Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Casey of this city, and Miss Sylvnia E. Stewart, were married in Los Angeles yesterday and will make their home in Phoenix, Ariz.

Owing to the great increase in the number of public school pupils here during the past month it has been necessary to provide another grade schoolroom. Quarters have been secured in the Odd Fellows' building until one of the new buildings is completed.

The one hundred and first anniversary of Lincoln's birth will be fittingly observed with a special programme at Pilgrim Congregational Church tomorrow morning. The members of the local G.A.R., W.R.C. and the Boys' Brigade of the Congregational Church will be present by invitation. The entire service will be of a patriotic nature and the address will be delivered by Rev. Albert P. Davis upon "Lincoln's Enduring Memory."

CLOSE SECOND POOLS.

Glendora Orange Growers Ship Fruit Under Guarantee of no Damage by Frost.

GLENDORA, Feb. 12.—The Glendora Citrus Association closed the second pool with a record of eighty-five carloads of oranges marketed for the season. The average price for the December pool, including fancy, choice and standards, was $1.20. The price for the January pool is not known at this time as the returns are not all in, but it is believed will make a higher average. The exceptional sum obtained, in view of the large quantities of inferior and damaged fruit dumped upon the market, was based upon the splendid condition of the fruit. The association guaranteed that the oranges were free from frost damage.

The Glendora Heights Orange and Lemon Association closed its second pool with a shipment of forty cars, for which practically the same prices were realized. It forwarded only first-class fruit with no damage guarantee.

It is expected that the growers will move their crop more freely during the present pool, since the rush of damaged fruit will soon be over.

Now that sufficient time has elapsed to determine whether the orange crop in this district was injured by the recent cold weather, the growers and experts are fully convinced that there was no damage. The most convincing evidence of this is found in the young and tender nursery stock which was not hurt in the least.

MONROVIA.

MONROVIA, Feb. 12.—At the annual meeting of the Visiting Nurses' Association today all officers were reelected for the ensuing year, namely, Mrs. John H. Bartle, president; Mrs. M. L. Butts, vice-president; Mrs. Snows, secretary, and Mrs. James J. Renaker, treasurer. Mrs. Hugh H. Raven was appointed chairman of the Relief Committee and Mrs. Andrew Dugan reappointed resident nurse. The financial affairs of the association are in a healthy condition.

Mrs. Montague H. Graham was hostess this afternoon to the D. D. Club, a literary association that includes the majority of educators of the city. A formal musical and literary programme was followed by a supper party. Mrs. Graham was also hostess yesterday at a luncheon given to the members of the P.E.O.

MURDERED FOR REVENGE.

Wiltshire Probably Victim of Italian Vendetta.

Caused Arrest of Two, One Being Convicted.

Wife and Daughter Incriminate Accused Man.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Revenge is now believed to be the motive for the murder of Charles Wiltshire, the wealthy glove manufacturer who was found dead last night in his factory with thirty-seven stiletto wounds in his body.

About a month ago Wiltshire caused the arrest of two Italians for having sold him stolen property. One was sentenced to serve a term in the House of Correction and the other was dismissed. It is the belief of the police that the freed man, who is now in custody, planned to murder Wiltshire for revenge. This belief is substantiated by the identification of the stiletto sheath which was found near the body as the property of a brother of the suspect. The brother is said to have gone to Milwaukee, where the authorities have been asked to assist in the search for him.

Wiltshire's body was discovered near the front door of his factory. The door, padlock and keys were found near by. This indicated that he was attacked while closing his factory and the police are working on the theory that the murderer planned to slay Wiltshire while no aid was near.

The men under arrest are Lorence Bartel, 24 years of age, and Frank Ebbole, 27 years old. The police are searching for the latter's brother, Chris Ebbole. The police say the stiletto sheath found by Wiltshire's body is the property of Chris Ebbole. Neither of the men arrested would make a statement.

Chris Ebbole was drawn into the case when his wife and daughter, unaware of the murder, identified the stiletto sheath as belonging to him. His daughter told the police she had found the stiletto and sheath some time ago and gave them to her father. Both said that Ebbole carried the stiletto in its guard when he left home last night.

Chris Ebbole, the third suspect, was arrested shortly before noon. He denied any knowledge of the murder and claimed he was out of the city at the time the crime was committed.

MINISTER LEADS A DOUBLE LIFE.

MARRIED PREACHER ATTENTIVE TO YOUNG WOMAN.

Sensational Disclosure Is Made When the Rev. B. F. Parkington Is Expelled from Iowa Church After His Alleged Perfidy Is Exposed by His Wife and Victim.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MUSCATINE (Iowa) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A sensational disclosure of the dual life led by Rev. B. F. Parkington, pastor of the Nichols Methodist Church, today resulted in his expulsion from the church, following a hearing, during which charges were lodged against him. Parkington, who has a wife residing with him at Nichols, has been paying attentions, it is said, to a young girl, said to be Etta Trent, at Cedar Rapids, whom he courted in Grand Rapids, Mich., where both formerly resided. It was the testimony of the girl at the hearing which resulted in the pastor's dismissal.

She alleged that Parkington had courted her for several years, and she believed he was a single man, and had consented to become his wife. Parkington since his arrival at Nichols frequently visited at Cedar Rapids, but gave the impression that he was forced to make trips to Iowa City on business. On last Monday he left Nichols, presumably for Iowa City, and did not return until Wednesday, although he was to have conducted revival meetings on both nights on which he was absent. His absence and frequent departures occasioned suspicion, and members of his flock instituted an investigation.

At the conference, at which time the charges were preferred against him, his wife appeared and claimed that she traced her husband to Cedar Rapids, and after meeting the girl to whom her husband was attentive, and telling her of his marriage, gained her consent to accompany her back to Nichols and appear against him.

CONVICTED OF FORGERY.

FAILS TO DUPE RENO BANK.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] J. E. Raymond, who tried to dupe the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank of this city out of $5860 by means of a forged check, was this morning convicted of forgery and will be sentenced by Judge Pike Thursday, February 17.

Raymond presented a check to the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank for payment, drawn on the Wells-Fargo National Bank of San Francisco in favor of Raymond and signed by J. R. Cavanaugh. The cashier of the bank was suspicious and refused payment, but shortly after doing this received a telegram bearing the alleged signature of the cashier of the Wells-Fargo National Bank, saying that it was a good check. More telegrams were exchanged and developed more forgeries.

The jury convicted Raymond on the first ballot.

SALOON IS ROBBED.

HIGHWAYMEN MISS BIG SUM.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JACKSON, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Last night about 8 o'clock two masked robbers held up the saloon of Boro and Guilini, on Sutton Hill, between here and Sutter Creek, and forced the young man behind the bar to give up the contents of the cash register, about $15, and a gold watch.

One minute before the robbers entered, Mr. Boro, one of the proprietors of the place, had taken $1200 from the cash till and removed it to his residence, a few doors away, for safekeeping. Had the robbers been a moment earlier they would have found this money. This is about the time that some of the mines in the vicinity of Sutter Hill pay off, and Boro had $1200 on hand in cash to accommodate those who might ask to have their checks cashed.

Over-Eating Worse Than Starvation

SEVEN DEATHS ARISE FROM THIS CAUSE TO ONE OF LACK OF FOOD.

A Trial Package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Sent Free.

An English medical observer claims that for one death to starvation there are seven from over-eating.

His investigation is appalling and leads one to believe that among the Anglo-Saxon race over-eating is a national crime.

This investigation proves over-eating to be the cause in ten cases out of twelve of dyspepsia indigestion and stomach trouble.

These diseases bring on decay and decline of the other organs and death ensues because of an inability of the system to furnish proper nourishment to the dying and afflicted parts.

When one over-eats, one exhausts the gastric fluids, throws undigested food into the intestines where it creates poison and germ life and is finally absorbed in a putrid state or thrown from the system in a decaying form.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will overcomme the ill effects of gluttony and irregular eating. They will digest an abnormal amount of food and will not leave the stomach until everything has been digested.

A single one-grain ingredient of these tablets will digest 3000 grains of food and in this proportion is seen how even gluttony can be overcome or at least its most harmful effects removed.

Make up your mind to try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for one week. Take a tablet after each meal and upon retiring at night. Every druggist carries them in stock; price 50c. If you have a druggist friend ask his opinion. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package free by mail. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

ADVOCATES GRAPE GROWING.

James J. Hill Tells Washington District It Can Compete With California If It Will.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James J. Hill has outlined a plan whereby southern Klickitat and Skamania counties in Southern Washington, along the Columbia River east of the Cascade Mountains, are to be planted to vineyards.

His object is to create a grape-growing district like that along the Rhine in Germany. Consummation of the plan will put this district in competition with California for the production of raisins and wine-producing grapes. Experiments have shown the soil and climate to be well adapted for grape raising. Part of the land will be irrigated. The district named slopes gradually down to the Columbia River, having a long southern exposure.

Hill's plan was announced at a "booster meeting" held yesterday by the Klickitat Development League at Goldendale, the county seat of Klickitat county. Hill was represented by President French of the North Bank Railroad. He said that Hill first outlined his idea of raising grapes along the Columbia ten years ago.

James J. Hill and Samuel Hill, his son-in-law, have laid out the new town of Maryhill in the irrigated section of Klickitat county. The town is named after the wife, daughter and granddaughter of James J. Hill.

SEPTUAGENARIANS SCRAP.

Aged Beau Resents With Fists Rival's Slights to Equally Ancient Sweetheart.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James Lawless, 78 years old, an inmate of the Home for the Aged, proceeded to pummel one of his fellow-inmates, who, he said, had made "uncalled-for remarks concerning the girls" in the house. He was taken to jail on a warrant served by Patrolman Padrick. Lawless is held on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The police say Lawless and Thomas Bruin, also a septuagenarian in the charitable institution, were rivals for the affection of an inmate of the home, whose age is 72. Recently the patriarchs became bitter enemies.

The apathy toward each other came to a sudden climax yesterday when Bruin, it is said, slighted the woman in an argument with Lawless. In the fistic encounter that followed, Lawless bested Bruin. Bruin subsequently cooled his bruises, but not his passion, and swore out a warrant charging his adversary with disorderly conduct.

A GOOD THING

When It Comes Along, Don't Let It Get Away From You.

"I really feel that it is hardly possible to say too much in favor of Grape-Nuts as a health food," writes a Chicago woman.

"For 9 or 10 years I had suffered from indigestion and chronic constipation, caused by the continued use of coffee and rich, heavy, greasy foods. My ailments made my life so wretched that I was eager to try anything that held out a promise of help. And that is how I happened to buy a package of Grape-Nuts food last spring.

"That ended my experiments. For in Grape-Nuts I found exactly what I wanted and needed. From the day I began to use it I noticed an improvement and in a very few weeks I found my health completely restored.

"My digestive apparatus now works perfectly and my chronic constipation has been entirely relieved. I have gained in weight materially, and life is a very pleasant thing to me so long as I use Grape-Nuts once or twice a day. I have found by experiment that if I leave it off for a few days my health suffers.

"A physician in our town has great success in treating stomach troubles, and the secret of it is that he puts his patients on Grape-Nuts food—it always brings back the power of digestion."

A Heavy Cold

Samuel McKinley, 1309 Askew Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member of the Society of the United States Jewelry Auctioneers, writes:

"I can honestly say that I owe my life to Peruna. After some of the doctors in the country gave me up and told me I could not live another month, Peruna saved me.

"Traveling from town to town, throughout the country, and having to go into all kinds of badly heated stores and buildings, sometimes standing up for hours at a time while plying my trade as auctioneer, it is only natural that I had colds frequently; so when this would occur I paid little attention to it, until last December; when I contracted a severe case, which, through neglect on my part, settled on my lungs.

"When almost too late, I began doctoring, but without avail, until I heard of Peruna. It cured me, so I cannot praise it too highly."

Nasal Catarrh, Coughs.

Mr. Emil Pickart, 310 Indiana ave., Hammond, Ill., writes:

"I am entirely cured of catarrh of the nose, and my stomach is in good condition, also. I only used about five bottles of your great medicine, although I had catarrh so bad and for so many years that I thought I would not live much longer. I had to consult doctors right along. Now all my friends say I never looked as well as I do now.

"I can also say that it is a great remedy for coughs, because I give it to my children. I never will be without it. I used enough other medicine to know how valuable Peruna is.

"You are at liberty to use my name in spreading the merits of Peruna."

Settled on Lungs.

Mr. Charles A. Schafer, Nebraska City, Neb., Ex-President Local Brotherhood of Bookbinders, writes:

"I am pleased to give my experience with Peruna.

"Some years ago I contracted a heavy cold which settled in my body and finally resulted in catarrhal trouble of the lungs and stomach.

"I tried many remedies, but I found nothing effective until I tried Peruna. In a very few days I was feeling much better, and as the result was so promising I was glad to keep on using it. In about a month the soreness had entirely left my joints, I felt much better, and the catarrh was being carried out of my system.

"I used Peruna for about 2 months before I was able to say that I was entirely well, but I have never FINDS NEW LAND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

VALPARAISO (Chile) Feb. 12.—The French Antarctic expedition under Dr. Jean M. Charcot reached latitude 70 degrees south, longitude 126 degrees west and discovered 120 miles of new land to the west and south of Alexander Island.

EXPEDITION A SUCCESS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PUNTA ARENAS, Feb. 12.—The French Antarctic expedition appears to have been a success from a scientific point of view. Dr. Charcot, the commander, is present, having arrived on the steamer Pourquoi Pas. New land was discovered far south, the coast lines surveyed and maps made.

During the first Antarctic summer, 1908-09, the expedition, in spite of difficulties which threatened to imperil its success, was able to complete the French map as far as Adeline Land and of the north entrance of the Strait of Magellan and the westernmost group of Queen Adelaide Islands and a stretch of new land 120 miles long was surveyed.

The expedition ultimately reached Alexander Island. The region was explored, and proved to be barren and covered with icebergs, glaciers and masses of rock. It afforded no shelter to the explorers, who wintered at Petermann Island.

The season was comparatively mild, but bad enough to cause considerable sickness in the party. Numerous interesting excursions were made among the glaciers.

During the subsequent Antarctic summer, the expedition explored Deception and Dudgman islands, in South Shetland Archipelago. Following this the explorers continued south, discovering land south and west of Alexanderland and Petermann Island. The expedition navigated as far as latitude 70 deg. south, longitude 120 west.

Alexander Island, or, as it is sometimes called, Alexanderland, is a small island in the South Atlantic Ocean in latitude 69 deg. south, longitude 75 deg. west, and is considered to be a part of the so-called Antarctic Continent. It was discovered by Bellingshausen in 1821.

AGREEMENT NOT REACHED.

JURY IN BINGER HERMANN CASE MAKES NO DECISION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Or) Feb. 12.—The fate of Binger Hermann, former Congressman from Oregon, and ex-Commissioner of the General Land Office, whose trial for conspiracy to defraud the government in connection with the establishment of the Blue Mountain forest reserve in this State has just closed, is in the hands of the jury.

Following the reading of lengthy instructions by Judge Wolverton, the jury retired at 11:05 this morning, and up to a late hour tonight there was no indication that the jury was approaching an agreement.

The trial of Hermann has been the longest of any of the so-called land fraud cases, having consumed five weeks.

Today ends the last day of the fifth year since the indictment was returned against Hermann on February 13, 1905. His was the last important case to be tried growing out of the famous fraud investigations. Hermann was a member of Congress at the time of his indictment, and since the expiration of his term has lived quietly in Roseburg, although he was tried three years ago in Washington, D. C., on the charge of destroying official correspondence, but was acquitted.

In the present case Hermann was charged with conspiring with United States Senator Mitchell, deceased; ex-United States District Attorney Mays, ex-State Representative Jones, State Representative Smith and George Sorensen, to acquire school lands fraudulently from the State and have them included in a forest reserve in the Blue Mountains.

All of the others indicted with Hermann have been tried and found guilty, with the exception of Smith, who is dead.

DIPLOMAT HERE ON LEAVE.

Man Who First Sent News of Togo's Victory to the World Is Enjoying Our Climate.

The man who first sent to the waiting world the news of Togo's victory over Rojesvensky, in the Russo-Japanese War, is a guest at the Angelus. He arrived last night, and is Charles B. Harris, who registers from Goshen, Ind., but who has not lived there except on vacations for twelve years.

He is now United States Consul at Reichenburg, Bohemia, and is in this country on leave. He came here because he wanted another stay in California's glorious sunshine among old friends, he said.

When he flashed the news of the great Japanese naval victory to Washington, from which point it was transmitted to the world, he was Consul at Nagasaki, Japan. He was at that station for nine and a half years, and his administration covered the period of the war with Spain, and the Japanese war with Russia. His career is inseparable from parts of the history of these two great events.

Because of a total loss of hearing, Mr. Harris was granted a change from the arduous station at the foot of the Japanese empire and transferred to the Reichenberg post. When he was chosen for Nagasaki, the post was not deemed important, but even then the appointment was criticised because Harris was chiefly known as an agricultural promoter of Northern Indiana, and had been conspicuous only in the membership of the State Board of Agriculture, and one of the chief managers of the State fairs.

But his long career at the Japanese port during critical periods and his conspicuous success in handling many delicate diplomatic situations, show him to be an able representative of the government.

ORDERS LUELLA SMITH REMOVED

SANTA ROSA (Cal.) Feb. 12.—The removal of Luella Smith from the Burke Sanatorium, where she and her baby were injured last week by a mysterious explosion of dynamite, was ordered today by Dist.-Atty. Clarence Lea. The woman and her child were taken to the County Hospital. The District Attorney is at the sanatorium this afternoon interviewing the attachés of the institution in an effort to clear up the mystery.

A POEM OF PENELOPE

WHO HAD PIMPLES BUT WAS MADE PRETTY BY THE SIMPLE USE OF STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS

A Trial Package Sent Free

Every one speaks of Penelope now—
As Pretty Penelope Brown;
And you see every day the people who say,
"She's the prettiest girl in town."
Her skin is so fair and golden her hair,
And her face never harbors a frown.

There was a time no one ever spoke
Of Pretty Penelope Brown,
Although she had dimples, she likewise had pimples,
Which made her continually frown
And she never was gay but would cry every day,
Would poor Miss Penelope Brown.
But she read in a paper one day,
Did sad Miss Penelope Brown—

She read in a paper of the CALCIUM WAFER,
And her face wore no longer a frown.
And now every day you can hear people say—
"That pretty Penelope Brown."

Every pimple has gone from the face
of pretty Penelope Brown;
STUART'S CALCIUM WAFER, showed the pimples a way for Escape by the road of the frown.
For frown and the pimples no more mar the dimples,
Of pretty Penelope Brown.

It is a disheartening task to try to be pretty with the face pimpled and blotched with unsightly eruptions. The very sweetest and prettiest face must always be at a disadvantage with such untoward conditions and it is too bad. Powder and lotions deceive no one. The pimples they are there, and are bound to be in evidence.

Of course, the blood is out of order and the one and only thing to do is to put in order. THE CALCIUM WAFER is a blood cleaner, purifier and invigorator, and when it has once done its work, the whole system is bettered and the skin has participated in the betterment and become smooth, pimpleless and satiny.

It does not take so very long to see the beneficial effects of the STUART WAFERS; even the free trial package makes a fair showing for improvement and better things. This followed by a few more packages, sometimes one or two are enough—results in a complete cure. There is nothing mysterious or magical about these wafers; they are simply a powerful, forceful blood purifier which accomplish only what they are made to do.

If you are troubled with pimples, blotches, breaking out either on face or body, it is a plain indication that your blood needs treatment; these are the signs, the flags of distress that the most obtuse are able to interpret.

After the trial treatment, which will give you an idea what they are—what they look like and what they taste like—get your further supply from your druggist; he will charge you 50 cents a box, but for the trial package address F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Building, Marshall, Mich.

member of the company having been taken ill, suddenly, and no understudy being available, she volunteered to play the role. She went on without previous experience and only a few hours' study of the part. Her success was so marked that she abandoned art for the stage, and during the succeeding five years she played a number of roles, classical and comedy.

Aside from the stage, Miss Robson has deep interest in literature and enjoys a distinctive place in the literary and artistic circles of both New York and London, counting among her friends Bernard Shaw, Zangwill, Pinero, Lewis Parker and Barrie.

Mr. Belmont is one of the noted bankers of the country, the builder and financial promoter of the New York subway system. He is a widower, 57 years old. His wife died in Paris in September, 1898. She was the daughter of Edward Morgan, a member of one of the foremost old families of New York.

Mr. Belmont has three sons, August, who in 1906 married Miss Alice de Colcuria of this city, and was recently admitted into the firm of August Belmont & Co.; Raymond, recently graduated from Harvard and a clerk in the banking house, and Morgan, now at St. Mark's Boarding School, Southboro, Mass.

The armored cruisers North Carolina and Montana, now on the Atlantic, which have been ordered to Buenos Ayres to represent the United States at the centennial celebration there in June, will come to the Pacific with the cruisers Tennessee and Washington after their stay at the South American port is ended, according to advices received at the Puget Sound navy yard in Seattle. With the addition of the Montana and North Carolina, the Pacific fleet will contain ten first-class armored cruisers.

of powder for the French troops in Algiers. The steamship company's officials here cannot understand how Capt. Cayol, a most experienced and cautious navigator, lost his course even in the storm, the worst that has swept the Mediterranean in many years.

Some shipping men and sea captains here believe the Gen. Chanzy's boilers exploded, and this was followed instantly by the powder explosion.

The steamship officials received nothing during the day to encourage the hope that more than one person survived.

Mariel Rodel, an Algerian customs official, who alone survived the catastrophe, had a marvelous escape. He was thrown on the rocks and remained there unconscious all Wednesday night. The sun's warmth revived him Thursday morning. All that day and night he wandered searching for a human habitation. It was not until Friday that he arrived at Cindaela, Minorca, where, half frenzied, he told the inhabitants what had happened.

Rodel, whose mind seems unbalanced by his sufferings, can give no clear idea of the cause of the wreck.

BODIES FLOAT ASHORE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PALMA (Island of Majorca) Feb. 12.—Bodies were floating ashore today from the wreck of the steamer Gen. Chanzy. The authorities posted men along the coast to recover the bodies and also to watch for small boats in a desperate hope that some of those aboard might have escaped.

Marcel Rodel, the Algerian customs official, and the only known survivor, was still unable today to give a lucid account of the disaster. From his rambling story the authorities first learned of the disaster and rushed help to the nearest land point. They found only a mass of wreckage piled upon the coast.

The villagers say that if the small boats had been launched they could not have lived in the sea that raged Wednesday night. The Spanish officials state that a powerful light will be immediately located on the north of Minorca, in the hope that further wrecks at this dangerous place may be avoided.

Owing to the difficulties of communication between the villages in the absence of telegraph lines, few additional details of the wreck reached here today.

The route of the Algerian boats is particularly treacherous in bad weather. The steamers Ville De Rome and the Isaac Pereire were wrecked on the same forbidding shore.

The Gen. Chanzy missed the pass between the islands of Minorca and Majorca, being either blown out of her course or rendered helpless by the breaking down of her engines or the loss of her propeller.

The place where the vessel struck is known as "Llosa."

THREE AMERICAN VICTIMS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

MARSEILLES (France) Feb. 12.—It is believed today that the only Americans aboard the ill-fated French steamer Gen. Chanzy that went down off the northern coast of the Island of Majorca on Wednesday, were Miss Elsie Henry, aged 28 years, address unknown; Leon Derenda and possibly Derenda's partner, a man named Green, though there is doubt whether the latter was an American or an Englishman. Derenda is said to have come from San Francisco, but is a native of Portland, Or.

The three Americans were members of a vaudeville combination bound on a tour of the colonies. Derenda and Green are described as jugglers and acrobats. Among the other performers in the combination were several Englishmen, including a man named Nestor, and the two Strakleys, bar performers.

Flexible Rubber Plates ....
A Good Rubber Plate, only..........

The reason of our great success is due to the uniform high grade work done by us.

Flexible Rubber Plates

Have many advantages over the old thick, cumbersome, ordinary rubber plates and even over gold pl thinner. These plates are flexible, only a trifle thicker than heavy writing paper, fit closer and adhere Particles of food and small seeds cannot get under them. They will last longer, are stronger than any they will give first, being flexible. Dr. Schiffman's own process and made only by us.

I have always heretofore shared with most people the dread of a dentist's chair. But now am sure I shall not dread the ordeal again, for at your office I can truthfully say, "I was not hurt at all." Even the bridgework which I had dreaded was painless and most satisfactory.
MRS. EARL ROGERS.

It gives me great pleasure to state that Dr. Schiffman extracted an impacted wisdom tooth for me, which has been giving me great annoyance for years. It was extracted absolutely without a particle of pain to me. It was easily worth 100 times the amount paid.
ROBERT MARSH.
Of Robert Marsh & Co., Security Bldg.

Dr. Schiffman placed bridgework in my mouth which has proven, after five years' use, to be a perfect piece of work and durable. Is now quite as serviceable as original teeth. A very difficult tooth was pulled before this bridgework was put in, and "It didn't hurt a bit."
C. S. SPRECHER,
Printer and Publisher, 115 Winston st.

Dr. Schiffman extracted twenty teeth for me, and did it absolutely without pain. I have had a great deal of experience with other dentists, and can truthfully say that Dr. Schiffman's method is best of all. I highly recommend him to everyone.
T. B. ROSECRANS,
Soldiers' Home.

For all the past fourteen years Dr. Schiffman has been doing my dental work. In all they extracted and replaced by means of crown and bridgework some twenty odd teeth. The work is very satisfactory and I highly recommend him.
H. A. WITTICK,
81 Mary st., Pasadena, Cal.

Have had molar tooth extracted by Dr. Schiffman. It was a complicated task, but work was done very successfully and I heartily recommend Dr. Schiffman to any needing dental work.
REV. W. E. BLAIR.
District Supt. Children's Home Society of California, 134 Daisy ave., Long Beach, Cal.

Have had several teeth extracted by Dr. Schiffman without any pain.
M. E. MASON,
With Fairbanks-Morse & Co., 114 S. Los Angeles st.

Dr. Schiffman did some crown work for me, four years ago, which proved satisfactory. I came in today and had my teeth examined and found that everything was just like new.
MRS. A. SCHILLING,
544 W. 52nd st.

I have had two plates made by Dr. Schiffman and after a three months' trial can truthfully say that they are entirely satisfactory.
T. H. BREWSTER,
President Santa Monica Oil, Gas and Mining Co., 326 West 41st st.

I have had teeth extracted, plate and bridgework done by Dr. Schiffman. I am delighted with the work and advise nervous women to go to Dr. Schiffman.
MATHILDE M. PHELPS,
1220 S. Figueroa st.

Dr. Schiffman I consider expert. By experience I find his work painless and perfectly satisfactory.
H. C. ROYER, M.D.,
102 S. Spring, Los Angeles.

Dr. Schiffman has just filled a tooth for me and he also put in a crown and a bridge about five months ago, all of which has given me complete satisfaction. My work was all done painlessly.
S. E. MILLS,
No. 120 Ave. 23.

Dr. Schiffman extracted two worthless teeth for me and replaced them by bridgework, which was done to my entire satisfaction and without any pain whatever.
MRS. JUSTICE J. ROESE,
213 E. 48th st.

I have been treated by Dr. Schiffman for years. I have tried all the different methods, and I can say unhesitatingly no dentist or physician has ever operated with such success or skill. In extracting my teeth he did it without any pain to me. It is a great pleasure to me to recommend him and his methods of treatment.

It is being paid out f a municipal fund appropriated for hat purpose and two members of the City Council and many citizens seri- usly object to the public money be- g expended for Sunday afternoon and concerts. An effort will be made of the Council and Board of Commissioners out to the concert to see what kind of crowds attend.

SON SAYS NO.

The report from San Diego that J. H. Holmes, formerly manager of the Hotel Green, may take over the Grant Hotel at San Diego is branded as a canard by J. D. Holmes.

St. Andrew's Catholic parish has decided to build a new $10,000 parsonage on the lot just north of the church on Fair Oaks avenue, at the corner of Walnut street. The building will be two stories high. Plans are being made in Los Angeles, and will be completed next week.

The tennis team of the Pasadena High School defeated the team of the Monrovia High School yesterday afternoon by a score of 23 to 0. This victory places the Pasadena High School team in line for the interscholastic championship.

A merry hay ride party, composed of the members of Raymond Thompson's Sunday-school class of boys and Mrs. Frank Duncan's class of girls spent the day yesterday in Millard's Cañon.

FOR BRIDE-ELECT.

Miss Cora Hill of No. 378 North Raymond avenue entertained informally yesterday in honor of Miss Vera Curl, who will be married on the 24th inst. to Dr. Ralph Welsch of Kansas City. Present were Misses Edith Chambers, Roberts, Mrs. Charles Hill, Miss Carrie Young and Mrs. Bert Hill.

Mrs. Thomas C. Marlow of No. 466 Euclid avenue gave a five hundred party yesterday afternoon in honor of Lincoln's Birthday. Those who attended were: Mmes. SOLDIERS' HOME.

Semi-Military Associations Unite With Those of Sawtelle for Their Lincoln Celebration.

SOLDIERS' HOME, Feb. 12.—The celebration of the anniversary of Lincoln's birthday was observed today by a half holiday to employés. In the evening the combined semi-military associations of the Home united with those of Sawtelle, and, with the women's auxiliaries, celebrated the natal day of the great war president in Memorial Hall. A programme of speeches and music was the order of exercises.

Among the G.A.R. Posts present were Uncle Sam post, No. 177; Burnside Post, No. 183; John A. Martin's Post, No. 153; U. V. L. encampment, No. 138; Camp Hamilton A. Hawkins, Spanish-American War, and the W.R.C. of the first three, also Ladies' of the G.A.R. Columbia Circle, of Sawtelle.

Lieut.-Col. H. G. Stratton, whose death in Los Angeles took place on the 9th inst., while at no time a member of the home, was accorded a military funeral and burial at this place yesterday. A widow and one daughter reside in Los Angeles.

J. L. T. Harris, late second United States engineer corps, (Spanish-American War), is appointed commissary clerk, vice West, resigned.

A. F. Briggs, late Company E, Twentieth Michigan Infantry, who was admitted temporarily at post January 4, died February 10. He was a native of New York and aged seventy-five.

PATRIOTIC.

CITIZENS SHOW MUCH INTEREST.

SOUTH PASADENA PEOPLE WILL AID CELEBRATION.

Liberally Respond to Funds for Flag Day Fete—Invitations Extended to Officials of All Cities in County—School Board Assists and Children Are Eager to Help.

SOUTH PASADENA, Feb. 12.—Citizens are taking a lively interest in the preparations being made under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce for the celebration of Flag Day on Tuesday the 22d inst. The indications are there will be few homes in the city that day that are not decorated with American flags. There also has been a liberal response to the request for funds.

Invitations have been extended by C. B. Boothe, chairman of the Trustees, on behalf of the board, to the officials of all the cities and towns in Los Angeles county to attend the celebration. A number of acceptances already have been received. The Trustees have appropriated $50 toward the expense of decorating the streets and in addition to this have made provision for suitable decoration of the City Hall.

The school trustees have appropriated $150 to assist the various schools of the city in arranging floats and for the decoration of the buildings. Some of the fraternal orders also are prepared to take an active part and the Rebekah Lodge will have a float in the parade.

The members of the Women's Improvement Association are urging their friends and neighbors to decorate their homes and have promised to make a thorough canvass of the city for this purpose. The plan proposed, aside from its novelty, is one that arouses a considerable degree of interest by reason of the fact that it makes a patriotic observance of the day and is calculated to instill lessons of patriotism in the minds of the people, especially of the younger generation.

PATRIOTIC SPEECHES.

The speaking will take place on the El Centro-street school grounds and John D. Reavis will preside as chairman. He will take for his subject, "The Patriotic History of South Pasadena.". Frank G. Tyrell will deliver an address on the general subject of patriotism, and Dr. John Willis Baer on "Patriotism and Women." The exercises will close about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, which will give ample time for those who wish to do so to go to Pasadena to witness the sports in Tournament Park.

The route of the parade has been practically decided upon. It will be about six miles long and will give visitors an opportunity to see the beautiful residence section. This parade will be one of the principal features of the celebration. A pleasing novelty will be introduced in the way of pictures of the Presidents of the United States, suspended across the streets. The Presidents will be in the order of their election, from Washington down to Taft, and this part of the celebration will be known as "The Procession of the Presidents." The parade will start at 10:30 a.m. sharp and the head of it is expected to reach the speaker's stand not later than noon. The speaking and singing will probably take up an hour and a half, and the remainder of the day will be given over to sports. The High School boys are arranging for several interesting track events and there will also be a baseball game with a team from one of the other High Schools in this county.

FLAGS DISPLAYED.

The flags purchased by the Chamber of Commerce arrived last week and are now on display in a storeroom on Mission street. They are of all sizes and may be purchased at cost, bringing the expense of decorating a home down to a minimum.

Headed by Prof. George C. Bush, the work of preparing the floats and decorations, representative of the schools, has steadily progressed. The teachers and pupils are taking an active interest and a great deal of good-natured rivalry is manifest. Each school hopes to capture the first prize for the best float.

The committee in charge of the celebration comprises John D. Reavis, chairman; C. B. Boothe, G. C. Bush, John Sharp, G. F. Trask, L. L. Washburn, W. F. Axtman, W. D. Newerf, R. W. Pridham, R. D. List, Dr. F. S. Taylor and H. E. Thomas.

ACTIVITY AT LANKERSHIM.

Los Angeles and Local Capital Interested—Substantial Buildings Are Being Erected.

LANKERSHIM, Feb. 11.—Much activity is apparent here. The big plans outlined by Los Angeles capitalists to advance the interests of the district have given encouragement to others to invest here. Local and Los Angeles people have formed the Lankershim Development Company, and are erecting an elaborate real estate building opposite the postoffice. They have purchased fifteen acres at the corner of San Fernando avenue and Fourth street, from Weddington brothers, five acres adjoining from J. S. Palmer, and also all the property of C. M. Wilcox, which they expect to improve and subdivide. A surveyor is now on the ground, and work will be pushed rapidly.

Speaking of the activity the local paper, the Laconic, records the sale of two lots on the C. M. Wilcox tract on San Fernando avenue, opposite the postoffice, to the Bank of Lankershim, recently organized, with a capital of $25,000, all paid up.

It also announces that the bank has plans drawn for a fine pressed brick building to be erected on the corner just bought. Weddington brothers will also put up a brick building, to contain four large storerooms, for their general merchandise business.

Bakman Bros. and H. L. McCabe have purchased thirteen acres on the corner of San Fernando avenue and Fourth street from J. B. Brokaw, as an investment.

TO EXTEND BEACH WALK.

Contract Is Signed at Santa Monica for Twenty-eight Thousand Dollar Promenade.

SANTA MONICA, Feb. 12.—The contract has been signed for the building of the ocean front promenade. Within a few days J. D. Kneen will have the material on the ground and a large force of men at work. The walk, which is to have a width of twenty feet, will extend from the new concrete pier at Colorado street to the wooden pier at Hollister avenue. The construction work is to cost $28,800 and the job will be completed within ninety days. This improvement will complete the ocean front promenade from the municipal pier to Venice.

DENIES HE IS DEAD.

Herbert E. Bradley of Columbus, O., makes personal denial of the truth of a dispatch which found its way into the daily press of his home city. According to it, Mr. Bradley suddenly departed this life last Sunday, being hied hence by an attack of heart failure. The Columbus papers printed his obituary and photograph in double column first page stories. Mr. Bradley insists that he is not dead, did not die, is not afflicted with heart trouble and is not sick.

SAWTELLE.

SAWTELLE, Feb. 12.—The District Attorney has been appealed to for an interpretation of the new direct primary law as relating to nominations to be made for city officers in cities of the sixth class. Upon this decision hinges the fate of elections to be held in April in Sawtelle, Ocean Park and a number of near-by cities. There is a wide difference of opinion, some holding that the new law is not operative, while others are just as firmly of the belief that its provisions are applicable to these cities. There is another opinion that nominations may be made by petition, the same as was recently done at Santa Monica for the December municipal election.

INGLEWOOD.

INGLEWOOD, Feb. 12.—In view of the municipal election in April, the Good Government League has been organized by a few citizens and several meetings have been held at the homes of different members. Candidates for Trustees have already been indorsed by the league. A second set of candidates will be put up between the two factions.

ELECTED CHAIRMAN.

Anaheim Man Appointed Head of Orange County Republican Central Committee.

SANTA ANA, Feb. 12.—J. S. Howard of Anaheim was today elected chairman of the Orange County Republican Central Committee, following the resignation of J. W. Morrison of Orange, who will move out of the State. Howard has been a hard worker in the ranks of the party for many years. He is justice of the peace of Anaheim township.

To fill vacancies on the Central Committee, these appointments were ratified: Bolsa, J. H. Bell; Bay City, Joseph Hatfield; Silverado, A. B. Tiffany; Santa Ana No. 2, R. Y. Williams; No. 4, O. E. Koepsel; No. 6, J. W. Flagg; No. 8, E. L. Vegely; No. 9, H. H. Hossler.

A complaint charging James Toland with insanity has been sworn to by Jailer Lacy. The man is before the Superior Court on a charge of burglarizing Bert Ryssman's house at Anaheim. He has acted irrationally for several days.

Judgment was given in the Superior Court yesterday in favor of the plaintiff in the suit of H. C. McCulley against C. N. Gary and B. H. Loveless. McCulley sued to rescind a transaction in which he traded twenty acres in this county for equity in a Los Angeles apartment-house. He asserted the trade was accomplished through misrepresentation. This suit attracted more than usual attention here for the reason that it was brought at about the time Gary was shot by Edward Reinert, who accused him of defrauding him out of $4000 on a real estate deal. Gary recovered from the serious wounds inflicted by Reinert.

GREAT SINGER BUYS A RANCH

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK SELECTS HOME SITE.

Becomes Owner of Five Hundred Acres in Beautiful El Cajon Valley Near San Diego—Hope of Capturing Postoffice Robbers Given Up—Salt Lake Elks Entertained.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mme. Schumann-Heink, the celebrated singer, yesterday purchased 500 acres of San Diego county land for $20,000. The property lies in beautiful El Cajon Valley, and includes fine lemon and orange ranches, and what is known as the Villa Caro ranch. The property was bought of Col. Ed Fletcher and W. B. Gross of this city, the deal being closed in Los Angeles, last Friday night.

The purchase price was paid in cash, the money being brought to San Diego yesterday. Included in the tract is a magnificent building site, where the singer will erect a home for her children. She does not intend to retire from the concert stage, but expects to spend as much of her time as she can spare in superintending improvements on her newly-acquired property.

NO HOPE OF CAPTURE.

Local officers have given up hope of capturing the Oceanside postoffice robbers, as all trails so far followed have proved to be blind. The searching posse supposed that one of the robbers had stolen a horse and was headed for Del Mar, and started in hot pursuit, only to find on their arrival that a rancher, who had just ridden into the town, was the sole occupant of the extra space in the country store.

Two suspicious characters, arrested here, after being closely questioned, were released. Officers have concluded that the robbers have succeeded in getting out of this vicinity.

MARRIES AGAIN.

Lieut. C. A. Abeles of the United States Navy, the former husband of Elsie Janney of Point Loma, is married again, according to reports from the East. His second bride is Miss Ruth Sanford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Sanford of Bridgeport, Ct., the ceremony being performed secretly. Publicity came through the filing of the marriage record in the City Hall at Quincy, Mass. Lieut. Abeles was divorced last June.

APPOINTED TO STAFF.

S. W. Millichamp, a paint dealer of this city, is in receipt of notice of his appointment as aide de camp on the staff of Commander-in-Chief S. R. Van Sant of the G.A.R. Millichamp was so recognized for his services in behalf of the organization on this part of the coast.

ABANDON MAGDALENA.

Announcement is made that the Navy Department has decided to abandon Magdalena Bay as target grounds. The entire Pacific fleet hereafter will practice in American waters, extending from San Diego to Santa Barbara. San Diego is to be the base of all supplies, and the battleships will make headquarters here while not engaged in active firing. Sailors of the fleet will engage in small arms practice on land while here.

VISITING ELKS.

About 200 Salt Lake Elks came to San Diego this afternoon, and were entertained by the local lodge members and a committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Tomorrow the visitors will be taken to Fort Rosecrans, the Theosophical Homestead and for a ride on the bay. A banquet was the feature of tonight's entertainment.

Take a free ride today to Granada Park. Call at 318 Union Trust Bldg. for tickets from 10 to 10:30. Go see the best suburb around Los Angeles. See what fine bungalows and large lots are being sold cheap on easy terms.

TWO IN AUTO ACCIDENT.

Doctor and Principal of School of San Jacinto Victims—Front of Machine Smashed.

SAN JACINTO, Feb. 12.—Dr. Arnold, formerly of Los Angeles, and Prof. R. B. Jenkins, principal of the public schools, were in an auto wreck yesterday of a kind which has never been surpassed in the valley. Dr. Arnold was called to Moreno. As he knew a few minutes meant life or death of the patient, he drove at full speed. A few miles west of here the steering knuckle broke, and the car became entirely unmanageable. While going at a speed of fifty miles an hour it crashed into a telegraph pole. The latter was split in half and the machine overturned, with its entire front end completely smashed. Prof. Jenkins was sent headlong for fifteen yards. The doctor was not dashed over the car on account of being behind the steering wheel. He was thrown a few feet, however. Neither was seriously injured.

MRS. CHARLES E. PERKINS IS HERE FOR SEASON.

Widow of Notable Railroad Man Intends to Remain on the Coast Until April, When She Will Return to Boston—Son Presents Cups to Polo Players.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. Charles E. Perkins of Burlington, Iowa, widow of the former president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, has taken one of the Doulton cottages at Miramar for the rest of the season. Mrs. Perkins, who is accompanied by her friend, Miss Mary Batchelder, her maid and chauffeur, has been here many times before, as have other members of the family. Her son, Charles Perkins, and wife are at present occupying the Stevens place at Montecito. Mr. Perkins, also of Burlington, has been here for some time, but Mrs. Perkins arrived only this week. Mrs. Perkins, Sr., is, as she says, "afflicted" with three houses, at Burlington, Iowa; Boston, and Westbrook, Mass., but she stoutly calls Burlington her home. She came here direct from Boston, to which place she will return about April 1. The late C. E. Perkins was one of the most notable railroad men the country has produced. The son, Charles Perkins, is an enthusiastic poloist, and presented four individual cups for the contest at the Potter Country Club this afternoon. They were won by the "White" team, captained by ex-Mayor Boeseke.

POLO GAMES.

The "White" polo team defeated the "Red" 3 goals to 1 at the Potter Country Club on Hope ranch this afternoon in the last game to be played before the local team enters the Riverside tournament. The victory gives the "White" the cups presented by Charles Perkins of Burlington, Iowa, son of the late President of the C. B. and Q. Railway. Mr. Perkins is a winter resident at Montecito. The closeness of the game is not shown by the scores; in fact, the play most of the time was in the "White's" territory, and all four periods were excitingly contested.

The most reliable playing was done by R. C. Rogers of the "Reds" and Dr. E. C. Boeseke of the "Whites." Time and again Rogers saved good chances to score and Boeseke's judgment and spirited dashes down the field were great factors in the victory of his side.

The most brilliant playing was done by Earl Graham of the "Reds," an unexperienced player, but mounted well and today showing extremely good form, especially in long shots and swift riding. The field was in rather poor shape, and some of the ponies not up to form but, as a whole, the play was keen and very encouraging.

The White team was composed of E. J. Boeseke, B. C. Boeseke, Elmer Boeseke, Jr., and Edgar Park. Reds—R. C. Rogers, James Warren, Ernest Wickendon and Earl Graham.

"MUSHROOMS" FATAL.

Assistant Postmaster Frank Miller died at the Cottage Hospital this afternoon as the result of eating poisonous fungi, which he thought were mushrooms. Mr. Miller was 44 years old, and leaves a widow and two children, all of whom have been sick from partaking of the toadstools, but are now recovering.

The Millers went out to the cemetery at Montecito Sunday, and while there picked what they believed to be mushrooms. They had them for supper Sunday night. At 4 o'clock Monday morning they were all taken so sick a doctor was summoned. Mr. Miller got steadily worse. Paralysis set in and medical skill was unavailing. He lived in Santa Barbara from boyhood, and was appointed assistant postmaster in 1902.

WELL KNOWN WOMAN WEDS.

Mrs. Ruth Swift Everez, daughter of Mrs. G. F. Swift of No. 4848 Ellis avenue, Chicago, was married today to J. D. Maguire, of New York. The wedding was a quiet one, being attended only by the bride's mother, her brother, Harold H. Swift, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift. Mr. and Mrs. Maguire will leave immediately for Japan where their honeymoon will be passed. They will make their home in New York City.

Mrs. Maguire met her husband at a reception given at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York something less than a year ago. She had obtained a divorce from her first husband, Ernest Hammond Everez, on February 9, 1909, on the grounds of desertion, and accompanied by her brother, Harold Swift, she had gone East to escape the publicity which her appearance in court occasioned. Mr. Maguire became interested in her at the time and made many visits to Chicago subsequently. Their engagement was announced about a week ago by a member of the family. Mr. Maguire is said to be an official of the American Steam Pump Company.

LAD LOCATED.

Anaheim Boy Missing for Several Days, Is Reported from Whittier—High School Debates.

ANAHEIM, Feb. 12.—For several days John Mitchell, aged fourteen years, has been missing from his home near town. His father, G. A. Mitchell, received a telephone message last night from Mr. Ellis of Whittier stating that the boy was there and that he would look after the young man until arrangement were made to bring him back to his home.

The high school stands fourth in the list in the Southern California Debating League, having defeated Santa Barbara and the Poly High. The Los Angeles High School leads the locals by one-third of a point. The time for the next debate has been set for March 26.

Fritz Yungbluth has sold his residence at the corner of Lemon and Hedwig streets to a newcomer from South Dakota for $4000.

The forty-acre place of Woodworth & Elder has been sold to Mrs. Kersten for $12,000. The property is improved.

erection of a $2000 residence on West Center street.

Earl Miller and wife are here from Minnesota with a view of purchasing property and locating.

J. D. Banker will leave in a few days for Mexico on a business trip.

The body of Mrs. Sarah M. Jones, aged fifty-six, who died in Riverside the 10th inst., was shipped here today for burial.

CORNELL CLUB BANQUETS.

Southern California Members Observe Anniversary of Lincoln's Birthday and Others Give Talks.

The Cornell University Club of Southern California observed the anniversary of Lincoln's birth last evening with a dinner at the Hollenbeck Café. Guests were Profs. W. F. Durand and H. J. Ryan, respectively, of the departments of mechanical energy and electric engineering of Stanford University; Theodore B. Comstock, engineer of the board of public utilities of this city; O. H. Ensign, chief electrical engineer of the United States Reclamation Service; E. F. Scattergood, chief electrical engineer of the Los Angeles aqueduct, and P. M. Johnson, member of the Police Commission.

Addresses were made by the guests, and by S. A. Simons of this city, H. C. Davis and J. L. Newton of Denver.

The newly-elected officers of the club are J. H. Morrow, president; Charles L. Chandler, vice-president; George B. Carpenter, secretary-treasurer; elective members of the Executive Committee, S. A. Simons and Paul Overton.

Lucien Klotz, a Parisian art expert and collector, has in his possession what is claimed to be an authentic autograph of the poet Tasso, appended to a writing, which, translated into English, reads: "I, the undersigned, acknowledge to have received from M. STANFORD FOR SOCCER.

First Game Ever Played by Cardinals Is Lost to Barbarians at San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford met defeat at the feet of the Barbarians of San Francisco in the first soccer game in which the Cardinal has ever competed, this afternoon.

The score was 6 to 0 in favor of the visitors. The Stanford eleven was led by physical Director Maloney and included several Rugby players.

The home players knew little about the game and were easily out-tricked by their opponents. The playing was in Stanford's territory most of the time and the Barbarian goal tender complacently leaned against the goal posts smoking "pills" while the struggle was taking place far down the field.

The Cardinal players were guilty of many fouls owing to their inexperience.

About twenty-five men were tried out. The game is considered an excellent preparation for Rugby and many outside matches are to be played.

JOAQUIN MILLER, the Poet of the Sierras, has recently given his entire collection of original manuscripts to James Carleton Young of Minneapolis, who is credited with possessing nineteen-twentieths of the good works published throughout the world within the last decade, each book characteristically inscribed by the author. The Young library contains some 11,000 original manuscripts, and almost limitless quantities of personal correspondence of various writers.

Henry E. Legler, the librarian of the Chicago Public Library, has for many years made a practice of recommending twenty books each for the different classes of readers who use the library.

Mrs. Anna Robeson Burr, author of "The Autobiography," is a Philadelphian, a daughter of the late Henry Armitt Brown. She is a homemaker, as well as an author, has two small daughters and belongs to no clubs, movements or female agitations of any sort whatever.

Dr. Josiah Strong, an author and speaker, whose words have had much to do with extending the "social" conception of Christianity throughout the churches of this country, is off on a tour of South America, to interest Latin-American business men, educators and philanthropists in the work of the Institute of Social Service.

Among the authors who have again been returned to Parliament in England is C. F. G. Masterman, an under secretary in the Cabinet. He is one of the promising young men in present day English politics, and when his book, "In Peril of Change," was brought out it attracted much attention. J. Keir Hardie is another re-

Free To Women

Mrs. Cora B. Miller is Spending A Fortune In Giving Medical Treatment Absolutely Free to Suffering Women

A 50c Package Will Be Sent Free To Every Woman Who Is Ailing

Thousands of Women Bless Her Name

Grateful Letters From All Over the World Tell of Wonderful Results With Mrs. Miller's Mild Home Treatment

Many thousand women have already accepted Mrs. Miller's generous offer to give free to every sufferer a regular treatment of her mild home remedy. From every civilized country come thousands of kind, grateful letters from ladies whose hearts overflow with gratitude because this pleasant vegetable remedy has restored them to old-time health and strength.

Mrs. Francis M. Harris of Dover, La., writes. "I feel like a new woman and can do my work without having that old, tired feeling. I am happy to know that I am well again.

"It has relieved me of my constant suffering and I have not words to express my gladness. It was surely a Godsend to me, and I thank Him that there is such a wonderful medicine on earth for suffering women."—Mrs. Carrie Bailey, Pickneyville, Ala.

Mrs. Miller asks no one to take her word, but only wants to prove it to any sufferer. Mail the coupon if you are a sufferer from any female complaint to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, Kokomo, Ind. Prove for yourself at Mrs. Miller's expense what this marvelous remedy may do for you. Do not delay; send the coupon now.

There Is Some One Near You Cured By Mrs. Miller

There is hardly a country, city, town or village in which there does not reside some grateful lady who has been relieved after years of suffering by Mrs. Miller's mild home treatment, even after doctors and physicians failed. No matter where you live, she can refer you to ladies in your own locality who can and will tell any sufferer that this marvelous remedy really has relieved or cured women.

Only bear this in mind. Her offer will not last long, for thousands and thousands of women who are suffering will take advantage of this generous means of getting the free treatment. So if you are ailing, do not wait another day, but send the free coupon to Mrs. Miller today.

Room Only For The Well

In this day and age of the world there is no room for the woman who can't take her part in society, the home, school, church or business. If you are dragging out a miserable, feeble, ailing, good-for-nothing existence, you feel that you might as well be dead and done for.

And so you well might in days gone by. Then troubles such as yours meant a living death or the knife, that was often worse than death; but now, thanks to the generosity of Mrs. Miller of Kokomo, the simple home treatment which has relieved so many thousands of ladies in the privacy of their own home is yours for the asking. It's yours to accept or reject. Don't say your case is hopeless. Go on and suffer or try to cure yourself. Many of the cases reported have been given up to die or the knife. Mrs. Miller's treatment benefited them. Can you doubt what it may do for you?

Send No Money—Just Your Name and Address—If You Are A Sufferer From Any Woman's Disease or Piles

In the past few years Mrs. Miller has spent thousands of dollars in sending medicine to afflicted women.

Don't Close Your Eyes, Ears and Mouth. Mrs. Miller Wants to Relieve You of Your Suffering. Fill Out The Coupon and Send Today.

Several years ago Mrs. Miller learned of a mild and simple preparation that cured herself and several friends of female weakness and piles. She was besieged by so many women needing treatment that she decided to furnish it to those who might call for it. She started with only a few dollars capital, and the remedy, possessing true and wonderful merit, produced wonderful results where doctors and other remedies failed. The demand grew so rapidly she was several times compelled to seek larger quarters. She now occupies one of the city's largest office buildings, and almost one hundred lady clerks and stenographers are required to assist in this great business.

Some time ago it was announced that she would give to women who suffered from female diseases another $10,000.00 worth of her medicine. She has fulfilled this promise, but as she is still receiving requests from thousands upon thousands of women from all parts of the world, who have not yet used her remedy, she has decided to continue to give away the medicine to those who are suffering and unable to find relief.

Mrs. Miller's wonderful remedy is especially prepared for the treatment of leucorrhea or whitish discharges, ulceration, displacement or falling of the womb, profuse, scanty or painful periods, uterine or ovarian tumors or growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness and piles from any cause or no matter of how long standing.

Every woman sufferer, unable to find relief, who will write Mrs. Miller now, without delay, will receive by mail free of charge, a 50-cent box of her simple home remedy, also her book with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer and how they can treat themselves at home without the aid of a physician.

Let me try to relieve you of those tormenting and severe pains. The coupon below, dear, may bring you relief. Send it today.

How To Treat Any Case Of Piles

I want to tell you flatly and plainly that any woman or man either, for that matter, who suffers from any form of piles, may place their faith in my treatment and I believe they will not be disappointed. It's intended for piles as well as the diseases peculiar to women. It assists in healing diseased membrane surfaces, no matter where located, and I verily believe that this remedy has cured more bad cases of piles of all kinds than all the so-called "pile cures" and doctors in the country. My remedy acts speedily. It's safe and it's lasting. The purpose is to relieve the intense torture, the burning, smarting and itching is relieved and you should feel better right from the start. Send for my free treatment at once and see for yourself.

Why Men Desert Their Wives

A Large Per Cent of the Wife Desertions and Divorces Due To Female Weakness

I should have taken better care of myself, I suppose. I was sick and suffering. No one but a woman can ever know how I suffered. I was irritable. I couldn't be to my husband the wife that I ought to have been. He, being a man, couldn't understand. We drifted apart. He sought his pleasures elsewhere. Finally there was nothing but the divorce court that could settle our difference.

That's the sad story that eight out of every ten women who have passed through the ordeal of the divorce court, as well as the countless thousands of deserted wives who are not divorced, know deep down in her heart was the real cause of her trouble.

A sick wife, a neglected home and the publicity and disgrace of the courtroom to end it all. There would not be half as much talk of the divorce evil in the world if only every wife and mother would realize her duty to preserve her health and strength.

No woman has the right to expect her husband to devote his leisure hours to his home and her when she is leading a dragged-out, hopeless, down-in-the-mouth existence that would discourage the greatest optimist on earth.

Mrs. Cora B. Miller's marvelous home remedy has done as much to prevent divorce as all the messages to Congress and conventions in the world. The woman who is bright and cheerful and well has a home that reflects her own good feeling and discontent finds no place therein.

Mrs. Miller's aid and advice is as free to you as God's sunshine or the air you breathe. She wants to show to you that her common-sense home treatment may relieve you just as surely as it cured her years ago in her humble cottage.

If you are a sufferer from any female trouble, no matter what it is, send the coupon below to Mrs. Cora B. Miller at once.

Put Your Faith In Mrs. Miller

My word that my home treatment should relieve you of female diseases or piles doesn't necessarily mean anything. But when my word and medicine is backed up by thousands of ladies, that's evidence you cannot doubt. There is hardly a county or small village in the land that does not contain some poor sufferer that was relieved. I didn't force them to use my medicine. They took it of their own free will and it benefited them. You should have faith in that sort of a remedy every time. Just cut out the coupon, send it today and prove what this marvelous treatment will do for you.

This Noted Divine Says:

"I am personally acquainted with Mrs. Cora B. Miller. I most cheerfully and voluntarily testify that myself and family have been greatly benefited by the use of Mrs. Miller's home remedies and heartily recommend them to the general public."—Rev. R. G. Roscamp, 30 Terrace Ave., Newcastle, Pa.

Do not delay. Send the coupon today.

Free Treatment Coupon

This coupon is good for a full sized regular 50-cent package of Mrs. Miller's Mild Home Treatment. Just fill in your name and address on dotted lines below and mail at once to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, 7666 Miller Bldg., Kokomo, Ind., and you will receive the remedy in plain package at once.

LOS ANGELES WORLD'S GREATEST LUMBER RECEIVING PORT TODAY.

Receipts at San Pedro Show Wonderful Activity in Real Estate and Building Throughout the Entire Southwest.

LOS ANGELES today is the greatest lumber-receiving port in the world. The figures of the collector of customs at San Pedro, giving last year's receipts as 511,084,000 feet, place it in the lead over all records obtainable, home or foreign.

The second port in the United States is New York with annual receipts last year of less than 5,000,000 feet. Los Angeles is one of the two great lumber ports of the Pacific, the other being San Francisco. The ports of the Northwest make heavy shipments, but there is no single one where anything like this amount of lumber is handled, according to the statistics of the Department of Commerce.

The figures on the lumber trade at the principal ports in the United States for the past year were as follows:

	Receipts, Feet.
Detroit	65,101,000
Cleveland	70,982,000
Ludington	72,001,000
North Tonawonda	161,295,000
Chicago	318,812,000
Total for Great Lakes	1,096,139,000
San Francisco Bay ports	827,018,418
New York	450,517,185
Los Angeles	511,084,000

It is impossible to get at exact records for foreign ports, but the figures on lumber imported and exported by various countries show that no single port in any of them could handle anything like the amount of lumber that passes through Los Angeles. The only figures that show any comparison are those of all the shipping points on San Francisco Bay. By totaling all of the lumber sent East on the transcontinental lines and that consumed locally the figure is made to reach 827,018,418 feet for 1909. Los Angeles showed a large gain over 1908, while San Francisco showed a decided loss.

The biggest part of the lumber in the United States, outside the Pacific Coast, is yellow pine. The figures for the yellow pine production of the whole country last year were 2,869,711,152 feet. In other words, Los Angeles handles about one-fifth of the amount of lumber produced in the United States east of the Rocky Mountains.

The principal export lumber of the Pacific seaboard is yellow pine. Last year's exports amounted to 184,893,671 feet, but a fraction of the amount of lumber passing through the port of Los Angeles.

The greatness of Los Angeles' lumber business has another significance. It shows in a startling manner the growth of the Southwest. A large part of the lumber handled at San Pedro is for inland points west of Salt Lake and El Paso. Lumber for the East is shipped by the northern routes. The lumber business indicates that Los Angeles is the metropolis and seaport of one of the largest and most flourishing tributary districts in the world.

The lumber yards at San Pedro, Wilmington and Los Angeles cover several thousand acres of valuable land. The capital interested in lumber runs high into the tens of millions. With the improvements in the facilities for handling lumber that are now being made by some of the strongest companies the business promises to increase largely this year.

In the quotation of lumber figures there may be slight discrepancies, but in those given above the relative position of Los Angeles would not be affected. The receipts of ties and poles are not included, but if figured out in thousand feet would increase the Los Angeles total to over 600,000,000.

FUTURE FORESTS.

CALIFORNIA TO FURNISH TREES.

PROPAGATION AND CONSERVATION NATION'S NEED.

Old-Time Forester Declares the Pacific Slope Is Most Logical Place to Produce Big Timber Supply and Care for It, and He Says That the Eucalyptus Will Fill Needs.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TULARE, Feb. 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Recognizing the fact that there is no more powerful medium than the press to awaken the public to the realization of the fact that this nation's future destiny depends largely upon the actions of the present generation, and knowing there is no subject matter of more vital importance looking to futurity's welfare than the forest conditions, it is along this line, an old time forester wishes to express his convictions.

Conservation being the political and social slogan of the day, referring to forests, water and minerals, the most important being forests, would it not be wisdom to see wherein or whereby conservation is going to solve the important problem of leaving to future generation a liberal supply of building lumber? Of course it is natural to infer that conservation implies something to conserve—protect from loss or injury—but if there is nothing to conserve, it is evident there can be no conservation.

We are led to infer that the masses believe that conservation is protecting from all harm a sufficient timber supply to meet the wants of all future generations. But what are the facts in the case?

The timber supply—national and private—east of the Rocky Mountains, being so nearly extinguished, it is scarcely necessary to give it any future prominence. A few short years anl not a tree will be left.

Therefore the entire United States must look to the Pacific Slope for lumber, shingles and poles, etc., and what are Uncle Sam's possessions here over which he has thrown the mantle of conservation?

It has been repeatedly said by the Bureau of Forestry that the government controls less than 20 per cent. of the timber lands of the United States.

This would mean perhaps 100,000,000 acres, but the next and most important question is, what portion of this 20 per cent. is covered with available ever this mountainous country and through the forest reserves.

COMMERCIAL TIMBER SCARCE.

The writer has not only made close observation of many of these national reserves, but was the first petitioner to have the Wichita forest reserve of 58,000 acres withdrawn from settlement, and of this entire reserve there is not ten acres in one body of commercial timber.

This he believes to be a fair sample of all the reservations, except perhaps those in Oregon, Washington and Alaska, and it is natural to suppose that all the lands in these States now held by Uncle Sam are the inferior or isolated tracts that the live lumberman did not care for.

Although we do not dispute the fact that there are some fine timber lands in these States controlled by the government, but the greater portion of these lands are so far removed from railroads or waterways that by the time the lumber is transported to commercial wants, the freight makes is almost prohibitory.

Although the holding and conserving of all the timber lands yet in the hands of the government is a wise move and should not be condemned, this still gives no solution to the timber problem, as the supply is too insignificant even were it available.

The government has no lands near enough to commercial centers that would be profitable to plant with young trees, and the question of reforesting the mountains was well answered by a United States Senator a few days ago when the Forestry Appropriation Bill was under discussion.

This Senator wished to know why so much untimbered lands were included in the reservations. When told that it was for the purpose of reforestry—to set out young trees—"Why," he remarked, "it will take 500 years for a tree to grow to a commercial size planted on those high elevations." This remark showed that he had seen trees growing on the mountains and he struck the keynote regarding forest planting.

It would be greater economy for Uncle Sam to purchase from private parties good land favorably located, to plant with forest trees, than to plant his own mountain tops and arid plains. Good trees grow only on rich, moist land.

Therefore after trying for thirty years to solve the timber problem, we are forced to the conclusion that the solution rests with the present land owners, and unless there is an encouraging or helping hand extended by nation or State, sufficient to influence tree growing on a large scale, this nation will be compelled to hand down to posterity a denuded heritage.

PROPAGATION NEEDED.

We hope the time will soon come when the Bureau of Forestry will divert more of its time, money and energy from conservation to propagation, and by so doing check the onward move of a timber famine.

We notice an able article on tree

European municipalities, where the town forests pay the expenses of city government. This looks like a feasible proposition, but before an American will act, he must be assured of the dollars and cents.

There may be be some excuse for an Eastern or Middle States man to express doubts along this line, for they are compelled to plant slow growing trees, such as black walnut, catalpa speciosa, white ash, black locust, wild cherry, larch and a few others, but the Californian has no such excuse; the eucalyptus expels all doubt—it even solves the timber problem in California, it not only pays its own way, but it makes wealth.

The writer for many years practically demonstrated the paying qualities of the above named slow growing trees in the Middle West. It therefore is an easy matter to show that California's favorite (the fastest growing tree in the world) can be made not only to cut down, but cut off all taxation. "Saying this proves nothing" says the doubter, so we will therefore not only to satisfy Mr. Doubter, but to convince the thinking public that the eucalyptus can be made a tax lifter by a few facts and figures, throw all doubt to the wind.

In demonstrating this fact we want it distinctly understood that there will be no statement of figures that cannot be made good. As the actual facts show such large profits, we will cut all probabilities or possibilities down one-half or more and still the results appear unreasonable. Take 1000 acres on which to base our calculation, worth $100 per acre and an additional $100 will more than prepare the land, furnish, plant and cultivate 700 trees per acre for ten years. We will therefore place an average cost of $200,000 on a ten-year-old eucalyptus grove. As there is always some loss, and some inferior trees, we will count only 500,000 thrifty trees at that age, if these are of the mahogany variety E. Rostrata or E. Tereticornis—they have a superior value for telephone poles or piling—of from $5 to $10 each, but to avoid "kicks" we will place a stump value of only $3 each.

SELECTS SAW TIMBER.

For the purpose of getting valuable saw timber we would select 100 trees on each acre to remain standing thirty years; this leaves 400,000 trees to be cut for poles which can be done every ten years.

Therefore the three cuttings at $3 each we have in thirty years $3,600,000 and 100,000 fine mahogany trees remaining, worth how much?

One pioneer eucalyptus grower says he has a thirty-one-year-old Rostrata tree that will cut 2000 feet of lumber worth $200. That would certainly be the limit, $20,000,000—cut it in two—$10,000,000—cut it in two—$5,000,000. Yes, and again—$2,500,000—and still it looks big.

Suppose we only place a value of $12.50 on mahogany trees thirty years old that will cut 1000 feet of lumber each—cheap as cottonwood—and we still have from the final cutting $1,250,000, or a grand total from all the cut-

$4,500,000 or an annual net income of $150,000.

Is it possible there is a man in the State of California who will say these figures cannot be made good? If so we will sell off all the ten-year-old trees for $1 each and still have over $2,000,000 after paying off the original indebtedness with interest and 1000 acres of perpetual producing trees.

It has not yet been discovered at what age the eucalyptus will fail to produce fast growing trees from the stump, as the oldest trees in California are less than 50 years old. It is impossible to give an approximate value of lumber ten years hence, but there is every reason to expect it will be much higher than it is today.

Therefore do not be afraid to plant trees and plenty of them.

D. S. BURSON.

SUGGESTS CITY HALL SITE.

Area Facing on Plaza Believed by Merchant to Be Ideal Place for Municipal Block.

Business men and residents of the Plaza section of the city have started a small agitation to have the new City Hall built on or near that historical park area. Most of those who have so far interested themselves to any considerable degree in the idea are Mexican, French, Italian and Spanish merchants on the streets immediately surrounding the attractive "north end" breathing spot. All profess motives of pure interest in the feasibility of the project as one beneficial to the entire population of Los Angeles.

G. Piuma, a wine merchant at the north end of the Plaza is the man most active in attempting to arouse interest in the plan. Mr. Piuma is of the opinion that the one best bet in the way of a site for the new home of the City Fathers is the block bounded by Main street, on the west, Los Angeles street on the east, Arcadia on the south, and the Plaza on the north. This block, he argues, is divided by Sanchez street, a comparatively wide thoroughfare, which is already the property of the city.

The sites on the east and west he further believes could be purchased from their present owners for a lump sum so small in comparison with that to be paid by the city for the Temple Block site as to make the former area the desirable one in point of economy. Another argument advanced by Mr. Piuma to those he is trying to interest in the plan, is the fact that the Plaza site would offer the city room for parked grounds, as well as for a larger building than it will be possible to erect at the Temple site.

BUYS NEAR FRESNO.

Ben White, in connection with Clark D. Hall and C. A. Cover of Long Beach, has sold a 320-acre alfalfa and dairy ranch, about five miles southeast of Fresno, together with the stock and implements and a free water right for $80,000, to Jane Thornton.

The same firm has sold 110 feet on Third street in San Bernardino, occupied by the Purity Baths Building, together with ten acres adjoining the city limits of San Bernardino, to J. Driskill for $80,000. Ben White also has sold a house and lot at No. 4056 Normandie avenue, to Mrs. L. E. Tucker for $5500.

PRINTING COMPANY BUILDS.

Architect Scott Quintin has drawn plans for a three-story brick store building which will be erected at once at Nos. 218-220 East Boyd street for the Commercial Printing Company. The structure will be 50x120 feet in size and will have an attractive pressed brick front.

SELL PICO FLATS.

H. G. Cotton & Co. have sold for Gail B. Johnson and M. N. Avery to a local property investor the property at No. 1110 West Pico street. The lot is 52x130 feet and the improvements consist of four flats. The price paid was $25,000.

urchie to Pass Into Hands of Local Men.

CIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EDDING, Feb. 12.—One of the t important deals in the recent his y of Shasta county gold mining was summated last week, when the ening Star property, in the Old Dig gs district, passed into the hands a strong German syndicate for $115,- he foreign capitalists were repre ted locally by George Bayha, for rly manager of the Black Diamond ne, another local property controlled German investors.

he Evening Star is noted for its de its of silicious gold ores, which are great demand by the copper smelt of this district. The Mammoth, lakiala and other immense plants constantly in the market for gold of this character, and immense antities are constantly being re ved from Nevada, Oregon and Cali nia mines. Much of this comes from tant points, and the preference is urally for ore from local proper he Evening Star adjoins the Reid ne, which is one of the great gold ducers of Shasta county, and the atest silicious ore producer in the ate.

he mine was located about twenty e years ago, but attracted little at tion until 1895, when good bodies of were uncovered and important de lopments commenced. The demand silicious ore at the copper smelters come more evident about this time, d since that year the Evening Star s ranked as an important producer. e property has been opened to fair pth, and an underground electric ist was recently installed to facili te more extensive operations. As pth has been gained the ore bodies ve improved, until the property is w considered next to the Reid in the d Diggings district.

Practically the entire payment for e mine has been made in cash. orge Bayha will immediately take arge of the property, and states at operations will be conducted on a rgely increased scale, while every ef rt will be made to keep developments ll ahead of production.

North California Mining.

The North California Mining Com ny, composed principally of eastern, n Francisco and Los Angeles people, arranging for the comprehensive de lopment of its extensive holdings in tte and Plumas counties. For eight ars the company has been carrying work at a dozen properties, and s expended a large amount of money conducting developments.

The holdings embrace both placer and artz holdings, with excellent water ghts, timber lands and other re urces.

In order to centralize its work the mpany has abolished its San Fran sco office, and will direct all future erations from its Oroville headquar rs. E. A. Jackson was recently osen general manager, and has ar ved at Oroville to personally take arge of developments. It is under ood that the directors have decided appropriate several thousand dol rs of the working fund for the pur ase of machinery. The company was rganized by H. H. Yard, one of the est-known mining men in Northern alifornia. Mr. Yard recently retired om the management owing to poor ealth.

Angelenos Examine Murchie.

Engineers representing Los Angeles nd Pasadena people have completed n inspection of the Murchie mine at evada City, and, according to inside formation, are considering taking ver the property. It is reported that efinite arrangements have been de ided on, and that active operations at e mine will be resumed shortly un er Los Angeles management.

A large number of New York people re interested in the property, and it s understood that they look upon the lan of resumption with favor.

The Murchie was for years the lead ng producer in the Nevada City dis rict, excepting the Champion, and the lose down, which occurred about two ears ago, was a complete surprise to ocal mining men.

The pumps have been kept in con tant operation and the lower levels re clear of water.

The ore bodies are about three to five eet wide, with values averaging from 10 to $30 per ton. The main shaft s down over 1500 feet, and large quan ities of milling ore are blocked out in ractically all the levels. The good howing recently made in the lower orkings of the Mountaineer and hampion mines indicates that corre ponding values will be found in the urchie workings.

App Reports Strike.

The App mine, near Tuolumne, is gain in the public eye, with the un overing of a large ledge of milling re on the 1300-foot level. The size f the vein has not yet been deter mined, although developments have een in progress for several days, but t promises to become one of the most mportant ledges in the property. Values range from $7 to $25 per ton, with the ledge well defined. Developments are being pushed with the utmost speed, with three shifts employed.

The rich shoots recently opened around the 1200 level continue to yield excellent grade ore. Several pockets of rich quartz were taken out a few weeks ago, from $20,000 to $50,000 being removed to the surface in a single day. The mill is running steadily on good ore from practically every level, while several men were recently added to the working force. The App mine has been one of the famous producers of Tuolumne practically ever since its location, in the early fifties.

Activity at Burgess.

With the passing of winter the miners of the Burgess district, Inyo county, are preparing for extensive work. The rich strikes that brought this section to the front were made just prior to heavy snow, and but little development work has been performed since.

On the Wells, the principal property, it is asserted that a four-foot vein of ore, running $50,000 per ton has been siderable distance. Several other veins of promise will receive attention.

California Notes.

The Georgia Slide mine, near Georgetown, El Dorado county, has been taken under a long-term bond by W. H. Knowles. The property has been continuously operated since 1853, and has been noted for its production of high-grade ore. Enormous quantities of low-grade quartz are stored on the dumps or blocked out in the workings, and it is the intention of the bonder to erect a 1000-ton mill. Ample water can be secured at a cost of 15 cents per miners' inch. The ore averages from $3.50 to $5 per ton, while the veins are of enormous extent and size. The mine has only been developed to a depth of fifty feet below the main adit.

The Rio Antigua Mining Company of Los Angeles and Pasadena is prosecuting developments at the South Fork mines at Forest with vigor. The raise in the breast of the adit has reached the bedrock of the channel, and drifting is under way to intersect the gravel deposits. It is expected that the channel will be opened within a short time. At the Maple Grove claim the drifts are exposing gravel of good grade. The company has thus far expended approximately $75,000 in explorations and developments. P. W. Kuhfeld is manager.

The new shaft at the Mack mine near Sonora is down 700 feet, and will be continued to the 1000-foot point. Drifts are being run from the 600 and 700 levels to intersect the ledge at these points. In the shaft the vein is six feet wide and the twenty-stamp mill is running constantly on ore from this ledge.

The Enterprise mine in Placer county has been purchased by George H. Chadeayne and will be vigorously worked. It is intended to erect a mill and cyanide plant. The property was located in 1865, but has never been worked in a systematic manner.

The Morning Glory mine at Allegheny reports the intersection of a shoot of rich ore in the drift from the upraise on the second level. Some of the ore is said to run almost solid gold, while a considerable percentage is half gold. The find has not been developed sufficiently to determine its extent. One piece of quartz taken out is valued at over $2500.

ARIZONA.

RICH DISTRICT IS ABANDONED.

OLD COUNTRY NOW IS SHUNNED. WILDCATTING CAUSE.

A. M. Thompson Reports on the Conditions Existing in Central Arizona and Shows Reasons for the Refusal to Develop This Mining Section—Examples.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—One of the most densely mineralized sections of Arizona lies along the northern border of the agricultural Salt River Valley, included within the Cave Creek, Winnifred and Magazine mining districts. Gold and copper croppings are found everywhere, and on them are shallow workings, that in some cases are thirty years old.

The mine nearest to Phoenix is the Union property, about fifteen miles distant. From the Union the mineralized ground stretches away toward the northeast, past the old Phoenix mine, thirty-five miles from Phoenix, to the Verde, connecting with a continuation of the same sort of ground along the northwestern face of the Mazatzal range, with mines as far distant as Payson district, under the great rim of the Mogollon plateau.

The oldest workings of the Cave Creek district date as far back as 1864. The high value of many of the mines is freely acknowledged by any mining man who is familiar with the locality.

Practically no large work is being done at the present time in the district, and it cannot be said to have advanced at all within twenty years. This district is easy of access from Phoenix, over good wagon roads, and is fairly well provided with water.

This backward condition is dealt with in an article by A. M. Thomsen in the last issue of the Arizona Mining Review. After referring to the early prosperity of the Cave Creek section, Mr. Thomsen tells: "But it did not last long. Then 'wildcatters' began their work, and from the disgraceful results of this nefarious traffic the district has not recovered to this day.

"There is probably no district in Arizona less known than this central portion of the Territory, but its shame is known from Flagstaff to Yuma. The lack of transportation facilities has fortunately shielded the upper portion of the district, but the lower was easy of access, enticingly near the city, with perfect roads and an abundance of quartz and specimen rock. The history of Cave Creek can be read in the story of any abandoned 'wildcat field.'"

An immense amount of tenderfoot mining has been done in this district. One notable instance of mismanagement and ignorance was the driving of a tunnel into an immense chunk of ledge matter that had fallen from a hillside and had lodged in the sand of the creek bed. The amateur miners finally ran their tunnel into creek sand and then understood what they had been doing.

This was on a parity with the driving of a tunnel in the Harcuvar country, where the roof for a long distance had to be covered in by the miners with brush and rocks, so shallow was the cutting. On one Cave Creek mine is a fine shaft, sunk by a California promoter to cut the dip of a good-looking copper-stained ledge which had its apex on ground his company did not own. Very appropriately, this mine was named the Panther. It is understood that it was a very profitable undertaking—for the promoter.

NEW MILL ORDERED.

FOR GLORIOSO PROPERTY.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 12.—A ten-foot Lane mill with amalgamating plates and concentrators of a capacity of about fifty tons of ore a day, is being placed on the Glorioso property in the Harcuvar Mountains, twenty miles north of Wenden.

The mine is one of the best in Western Arizona. Though the mine is a copper property, it has a fifteen-foot streak of oxidized rock averaging about $10 in free gold, besides copper concentrates.

The mill has been bought by L. J. Court, manager, with the idea that its operation will more than pay for any development work. An ample supply of water has been developed, a gasoline hoist has been ordered and many other improvements made within the JANUARY.

DIVIDENDS BEING PAID.

Thirty-six Companies Have Paid Stockholders.

Total Amount Distributed Is Nine Million.

Goldfield Consolidated Has the Best Record.

Although not a record month in point of dividends paid by American mines and metallurgical works, thirty-six of these totaled $8,528,485 in the first month of 1910. In addition to this amount are the declarations of four securities holding corporations, of $1,620,781, making a total for the month from all sources $9,803,766.

In comparison with the same period in 1909 this shows an increase of three in the number of mines and works paying dividends and an increase of $931,518 in the total amount paid. As compared with 1908 the 1910 disbursements show an increase of fourteen in the number of companies paying and an increase of $3,730,082 in the amount paid.

Of the thirty-six mines and works paying dividends in January, twenty-five are in the gold-silver-lead classification, twelve operating in the United States, seven in Canada and five in Mexico. The twelve United States companies contributed $3,029,025 and since incorporation $66,024,445; the seven Canadian companies, $1,051,857, and since incorporation, $10,451,303, and the five Mexican companies, $248,750, and $11,397,856 since incorporation. Goldfield Consolidated leads in the United States with $1,779,183, Nipissing in Canada with $450,000 and Esperanza in Mexico with $108,000.

Six copper companies, all operating in the United States, paid January dividends totaling $1,721,022, and these since organization have to their credit, $89,000,750, a return equivalent to 194 per cent. on their combined issued capitalization of $47,735,125. Anaconda of Montana leads with $600,000 and Osceola of Michigan is second with $576,900 and United Verde third with $225,000.

Three metallurgical works paid January dividends totaling $2,183,331 and since incorporation $66,143,605, a 41 per cent. return on the $162,506,750 issued capital. American Smelting and Refining Company leads with $1,375,000, $500,000 going to holders of common stock and $875,000 to holders of preferred.

One metal selling company, the United, contributed $250,000 to the month's total, making its returns since incorporation $10,250,000. One quicksilver company, the New Idria of California, contributed $30,000 to the January total and which makes $1,200,000 for the company since incorporation.

The accompanying table shows the amount of dividends paid during January, the date of payment and price per share:

VULTURE REPORTS.

NEW MILLS ORDERED.

During the last year it is claimed that $150,000 has been expended for the Vulture mine near Wickenberg, Ariz. More than 300 feet of workings have been driven and a lot of new machinery is being brought in.

The operating expenses are said to have been met by the operation of the mill in which the ore has averaged about $10 a ton, and from which the bullion product has totaled $31,393 in gold. Twenty stamps for the new mill are arriving. Each is 1600 pounds in weight, and having a crushing capacity for 100 tons a day, which will be in addition to the capacity of the old mill of twenty-five tons a day.

It is believed that at least 1,000,000 tons of tailings from the old eighty-stamp mill can be worked to a profit.

AJO SHUTS DOWN.

GOOD PROPERTY CLOSES.

The property of the Ajo Copper Company in southwestern Yuma county, Ariz., has just been closed down by order of the head office of the company.

Superintendent Scowden expressed surprise at the order, stating that the property showed ore of high value and in large quantity. This is the property formerly owned by the Rendall Ore Reduction Company, which at one time made plans for building a railroad to the mines from the Southern Pacific near Gila Bend.

In the same district is the property of the Cornelia Company, lately organized by Dan McFarland of Los Angeles, who has agreed to pay $75,000 for it within six months.

GOLD AND SILVER.

WHICH MORE VALUABLE.

SALT LAKE, Feb. 12.—"There are now sixty-seven companies in the Rand, or exactly the same number as ten years ago, but in January, 1909, there were sixty-nine companies, with 9035 stamps treating 1,671,245 tons, yielding exactly 30s. per ton, or 2,514,555 pounds sterling.

"Ten years ago, in January, 1899, sixty-seven companies operated 5325 stamps, crushing 682,974 tons yielding 42s. 9d. per ton, or 1,461,131 pounds sterling."

The above is a condensation of Mr. Mabson's statement.

Now, in 1873, Philip Deidesheimer reported that in the Consolidated California-Virginia bonanza there was of that there was a great flurry in Austria and Germany and the United States and silver was demonetized, the cry being that we should soon be overwhelmed by a vast avalanche of silver. The truth was that the bonanza gave up $119,000,000, 44 per cent. of which was gold.

But if the cry had any sense to it in 1873, would this showing from the Rand, with the tremendous deposits of gold known to exist in West Australia, with what our country, Russia, South America and Mexico are producing—is it not about time to demonetize gold? It is getting so cheap that, measured by butter and eggs, it will soon have to be reckoned by the bushel instead of by the grains.

SMELTER RUNNING.

NEW JACKETS ORDERED.

With temporary repairs complete, the Arizona Commercial smelter at Globe, Ariz., has been started again, and a full force is working both at the mine and smelter. The mine is sending down about 200 tons of ore a day.

During the week, in the Eureka shaft of the Arizona Commercial, has been cut an eight-inch streak of 54 per cent. copper glance, carrying also about twenty-six ounces of silver to the ton. It is reported that no further stoppage of the furnace will be necessary until some new jackets arrive, containing improvements that have been found lacking in the present equipment. During the few months of operation of the Arizona Commercial smelter last year, the copper production amounted to about 1,000,000 pounds, which has been credited, however, to the Old Dominion smelter, where the Arizona Commercial matter has been purified.

CRIPPLE CREEK.

PRODUCTION INCREASES.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Feb. 12.—The Cripple Creek district, during the year 1909, maintained its reputation as the "world's greatest gold mining camp" with a production of 984,513 tons of a gross bullion value of $15,850,113. This brings the total production of the camp, since its discovery in 1891, well past the quarter of a billion dollar mark. Compared to the production of 1908, as estimated by the State Bureau of Mines, 1909 shows an increase of $2,818,129. The average value of all ores subjected to treatment was $21.46.

During the year dividends of record amounting to $1,100,531 were paid by seventeen companies, as against nine in 1908. In addition to dividends of record, profits of the close corporations were between $500,000 and $750,000, while the profits of the leasing companies approximate $1,000,000. Between 3200 and 3500 miners were continuously employed, the pay roll for the year being $4,000,000.

JARBRIDGE REPORTS.

THREE DEALS IN WEEK.

Reports from Jarbidge show that this is probably the rush camp of the year, as far as mining is concerned. Within the week three large deals have been pulled off in this district, and John J. Daly and his coterie of Salt Lake capitalists are leading in the opening of the new camp.

Roberts and Lamb, who have been operating in Nevada, and were among the first of the outside operators on the ground, have bonded the Legitimate group of five claims from Markinson.

This property adjoins the Bourne claims, which have led to the opening of the camp and is expected to be equally good.

They also have obtained control of the Altman group near the Bunker Hill properties.

Another pool of Nevada capital, headed by George Wingfield of Goldfield fame, is said to have bonded the Pavelock group for $100,000.

Castle Dome Rich.

Extremely rich silver ore has been found in the Castle Dome range south of Kofa, Yuma county, Ariz., where a large number of claims have been staked by Don S. Rae and Charles de Corse, Supervisor W. E. Marvin and a number of other Yuma men. In one claim staked out by Rae and De Corse, is an eighteen-inch streak running as high as twenty-six ounces of silver to the ton besides some gold. Old Nevada miners say that the formation is chloride, very similar to that in the Comstock district.

Old Dominion Output.

The Old Dominion copper output for January was 2,130,000 pounds with two furnaces running, handling about 600 tons of 7 per cent. ore a day. The pumps are handling about 2,000,000 gallons of water a day. The number of employés at present totals 812.

Gila Copper Strike.

Last week was reported the strike of a large body of 15 per cent. copper ore in the Saddle Mountain mine by the Gila Copper Sulphide Company at Christmas, Ariz.

Mill Is Building.

A ten-stamp mill is being fitted up on the property of the Lost Gulch United Mines Company about seven miles northwest of Globe, Ariz., and new concentrators have been added. The ore for the mill will come from the old Kellner lode. It is said to run about $25 to the ton in gold.

Arizona Fragments.

About 800 men have been employed by the Ray Consolidated Company at the mines, and at the new Winkleman reduction works.

A payment of $15,000, comprising 10 per cent. of the purchase price, has been made on the Arizona-Michigan property near Globe. The balance is to be paid within two years.

A carload of ore from the Heffern mine, near Courtland, picked from the ledge near the surface and packed on mule back down to the railroad, assays an average of $480 to the ton in gold.

Work Resumed.

Work has been resumed on the Calumet and Arizona mine in Pinal county, Ariz., twenty miles north of Red Rock station. The main shaft has been sunk to about 150 feet, and the workings have shown some small seams of extra rich copper ore, as well as large bodies of low grade ore.

Deal Is Off.

From Clifton comes a report that the deal for the purchase of the Arizona Copper Company's property and smelter is all off. The proposition for purchase was considered, but the amount offered is said to have been about one-half what the Scotch stockholders were willing to accept.

Officer in Trouble.

Deputy Sheriff Franklin P. Nash is under arrest at Globe, Ariz., charged with having by force of arms driven R. H. Cordts and Lee Carson from claims on which they were doing assessment work next to the Live Oak property. Cordts and Carson had jumped a couple of claims on which they tell they have reliable evidence that the 1909 assessment work had not been performed. The Deputy Sheriff drove them from this work and is alleged to have struck Cordts in the

with a fellow director, was sent to Arizona to inspect the property and to negotiate for a change of control.

Just what the result of these negotiations will be has not been definitely determined, but the British stockholders are willing to enter a merger.

It has been the contention of American copper men that the management of the Arizona Copper Company was too slow, and efforts are to be made to bring the property up to the productive basis of which it is capable. A year ago this step was first attempted, for an American, J. G. Hopkins, was made managing director.

During the past year the company has consolidated its preferred and deferred ordinary shares so that at the present time it is capitalized for £703,894, of which £379,974 is in ordinary shares of fives, while £175,210 is in 5 per cent. debentures.

Last July, an interim dividend of 1s., 3d., was declared, while since incorporation $12,030,000 has been paid out in dividends. The company has averaged during the past year a monthly output of more than 1200 tons of copper.

Road Being Built.

A large amount of railroad track has been laid during the past month by the Arizona Commercial Company, as far as Copper Hill, and the entire line is to be finished about April 1. The railroad building around Globe will soon secure a belt line that will take in the principal properties of the district.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY.

To Correspondents:

This Department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not the exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send, also, with the specimen a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address, invariably, The Times.

Rocks.

CLIFTON (Ariz.) Jan. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you please give, through the "In the Earth" column of your good paper the correct names of the inclosed rock, marked sample Nos. 1, 2 and 3, and whether you consider such of any value or worthy of development.

Samples were taken from the country, lying a short distance east of Clifton, Graham county, Ariz., and appear in ledges from three to seven feet wide, course of lode almost north and south, with dip toward the east.

Have shown the rock to quite a number of the "old-time" experts here, but as there is a difference of opinion we thought best to secure further information, and will appreciate such as you feel disposed to give.

Respectfully, C. W. B.

ANSWER. After submitting each of your specimens to cold-blooded chemical analysis, and without comment upon the "rock," we find that sample No. 1 carries silica, 48 per cent.; alumina, 14.40 per cent.; iron sesquioxide, 3.50 per cent.; iron protoxide, 3.50 per cent.; manganese protoxide, 1.50 per cent.; magnesia, 7.65 per cent.; lime, 8.25 per cent.; soda, 3 per cent.; potash, trace; water, 3.70 per cent.; carbon dioxide, 1.40 per cent., which equals 100. In the mass we find augite; the rock is, in part, porphyritic; and it is, therefore, dolerite.

Sample No. 2 carries over 60 per cent. silica; magnesia, 2.35 per cent.; water, approximately, 3 per cent., with manganese (dendritic) on one edge, and iron oxides on two other edges. The sample is impure Rensselaerite (tailor's chalk;) pyrophylite present: as, also, feldspar (microscopical) crystals sparingly throughout the mass.

No. 3 is, in part, "bad rock" of Mexicans and Spaniards, and, mineralogically, is, in part, chrysolite; "it is amygdaloidal as well as chloritic," and part of the mass is porphyritic. The sample is impure melaphyre.

The "rock" is of no value, and it is noted that we have no ore to pass upon, therefore, on the subject of "development," "In the Earth" would respectfully suggest: Prospect for ore, and leave the "rock" in the walls.

Uranium Not Present.

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly inform me what inclosed San Diego county sample contains? Is there any pitchblende present?

Very truly, J. G. R.

ANSWER. Pitchblende is not present in the specimen. It carries iron and manganese oxides; arsenopyrite; pyrite (iron disulphide) and chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore.)

Sienna and Fuller's Earth.

LOMPOC, Jan. 16.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find inclosed a sample, supposed to be ochre-sienna, or whatever it may be. I come to you for a decision of its quality and value. This mineral comes from Honda district, near Lompoc, Santa Barbara county.

Awaiting your grateful reply in the mineral columns of your valued paper, I am,

Yours truly, P. C.

ANSWER. The sample is a peculiar one; it carries low values in iron oxide (sienna,) but not sufficient for value as paint or pigment uses. The chief content is Fuller's earth, and it possesses a very low commercial value owing to the impurities present.

Tungstic Acid Present.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed find a sample of rock. Please advise if it contains tungstic acid or anything worthy of an assay. It is located about four miles from the "tungsten mines" near Johannesburg, Cal.

Yours truly, R. M. E.

ANSWER. Tungstic acid is present in the sample, but in very low per cent.

Crystallized Native Copper.

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Jan. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed herewith sample from deposit twelve miles north of this city. Kindly state what the copper-like substance is, and your general opinion of the rock. Thanking you in advance, I am of gypsum (sulphate of lime,) with glassy feldspar crystals disseminated throughout the mass. Some quartz is present, as also calcite. "The copper-like substance" is in microscopical form, and it is named at the subheading. There is nothing very remarkable about the sample. Copper occurs in a great number of peculiar admixtures with many minerals.

Stibnite and Amphibole.

BODFISH (Cal.) Jan. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times: Will you kindly tell me what the inclosed samples are? They are from the Piute Mountains, Kern county, Cal. No. 1 I call antimony, but thought there might be other metals in it. Nos. 2 and 3 were found on a red-looking hill, and I cannot name them.

Thanking you in advance. Yours truly, G. N. R.

ANSWER. Sample No. 1 is stibnite (antimony sulphide.) Lead is present in low percentage. Quite a per cent. of iron oxides is in the mass. Sample No. 2 is yellow iron oxide (limonite,) with a coating of opal silica. No. 3 is a variety of amphibole, of mineralogical interest only.

Mountain Rats Present.

AZUSA, Jan. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a sample of mineral from a seam in the mountains of San Gabriel Cañon. It may be some sort of oil indications. Please give me some information on the mineral in the "In the Earth" column and oblige me.

Yours truly, L. S.

ANSWER: The substance is a sort of guano and is chiefly excrement from mountain rats.

Tungstic Acid Traces.

TUCSON (Ariz.) Jan. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you two different sets of ore. I think all of the ore is wulfenite. There is a large ledge of the white quartz near where I found the small pieces. (black ore.) Do you think it came from the white quartz The large piece did not come from the same place, but I think it is the same. Wish you would please tell me what you think of the ore?

Very truly, C. R.

ANSWER: There is absolutely no wulfenite in any of your samples; probably you have wolframite in mind. The yellowish-brown (crystallized) large sample is chiefly iron carbonate (siderite,) with traces of tungstic acid. The large quartz sample carries iron oxides (hematite and micaceous iron,) with traces of tungstic acid. The botryoidal specimens are limonitic, chiefly. The locality from which you obtained the last-described samples should be closely prospected for tin ore.

Chromite.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Jan. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herewith a sample of mineral that I take to be pitchblende. It comes from a lead about thirteen miles northeast of San Luis Obispo. Please correct me in the column "In the Earth," if I have failed in my determination of the rock.

Yours truly, C. H. H.

Sodium Sulphate Present.

REDLANDS, Jan. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I inclose to you under separate cover, sample of mineral from the Imperial Valley desert, supposedly sodium sulphate, which please name and inform me if it has any commercial value.

Very truly yours, R. E. F.

ANSWER: The granular earthy material carries sodium sulphate, with lime, and sodium chloride present, as also, magnesia, alumina and traces of iron.

We have mailed to your address part of the—soluble in water—salts recovered by evaporation.

The material has a commercial value provided that it occurs in quantity; water near at hand, means whereby the various salts can be separated, and by-products recovered.

Sulphides and Gossan.

LAKE VIEW (Cal.) Jan. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you herewith five rock samples from near Lassen Butte. (1.) What is the nature of this wall rock? (2.) What is the name of this outcrop? (3.) Is this sample slate (4.) What kind of rock is this casing? (5.) Is this wall rock a porphyry?

I will look for an answer in your mining page.

Yours truly, E. B. M.

ANSWER: (1.) The wall rock is granite. (2.) Outcrop is gossan. (3.) The sample is not slate; it is aluminum silicate carrying iron oxide and manganese dioxide. (4.) Porphyritic, and arsenopyrite (arsenical pyrite;) pyrite (iron disulphide;) chalcopyrite (yellow copper ore,) and some pegmatite (graphic granite,) are distributed throuhgout the mass. (5.) This sample is porphyritic and is made up of quartz and feldspar (graphic granite.)

Not Pitchblende.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 20.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The sample inclosed was sent to me by a prospector from claims near Beaver, Utah. I call it pitchblende, but I can make no name for the silver looking spots. I will be much obliged to you if you will analyze this ore and give answer in the "In the Earth" column.

Yours respectfully, M. F.

ANSWER: The sample carries iron oxides and approximately, 7 per cent. bismuth, (as bismuthinite.) The lead-gray bismuth ore resembles antimony sulphide (stibnite.) It melts in the flame of a candle, and b.b., melts easily, at the same time coloring the flame blue, and evolving sulphurous fumes. It is soluble in warm nitric acid. If to the nitric acid solution you add water, a white precipitate will be thrown down, which precipitate, is a basic nitrate of bismuth.

Native Silver Chloride.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This is a sample of ore that was taken from a stringer in the lode "A" of a claim in the Calico district and near the breast of a tunnel 95 feet in.

As there is some dispute about his ore—some calling it cerussite—will you please refer it to the "In the Earth" department for information and answer? Yours truly, W. L. D.

ANSWER: The sample is chemically named at the subheading. Mineralogically it is known as cerargyrite (protochloride of silver;) the popular name of the specimen is horn silver. It occurs crystalized, "in small cubes and acicular prisms, generally massive, and looking like wax; sometimes columnar; often in crusts; investing other substances." The sample is acicular, and, at sight, the needle-like crystals somewhat resemble cerussite (lead carbonate;) it is of greenish color; opaque; of resinous luster; it is malleable, and can be cut into shavings (horn like.) Streak, metallic shining; cleavage, none; of imperfect conchoidal fracture. Hardness, 1.4; sp. gr., 4.40; yields a metallic silver button on charcoal before the blowpipe, "with evolution of an order of hydrochloric acid; rubbed on a plate of moistened iron, the surface becomes covered with a thin film of metallic silver; on the addition of oxide of copper the b.b. flame becomes blue."

Horn silver is insoluble in water or nitric acid. "This ore, especially the conchoidal sub-species, has an icy or glassy appearance, on which account it was called vitreous or glassy silver by the older mineralogists. The vit-

The Verdict of the People.
$75,000 Sold Opening Day

THE SUPREME TEST of every public enterprise is the test of public opinion. One man may be prejudiced. One dozen, or even one hundred interested men may be prejudiced, but when an enterprise goes to the cold-blooded criticism of the public mind, stripped of its advertising and the printed claims of its sponsors, and wins even the mildest approval, it takes genuine merit. What then does it take to win not only their entire approval, but their admiration, enthusiam and loyal support in a single day?

February 8 was Yucaipa Day. It marked the Official Opening of the great Yucaipa Valley and the newborn Yucaipa City. From the beautiful city of Redlands, all roads led to Yucaipa City. People came by hundreds, in automobiles, carriages, motorcycles, wagons, bicycles, on horseback, and even on foot. They started at daylight, and from that on they came in a never-ending stream, until on the new townsite of Yucaipa City, on the great mesa overlooking the fertile valley, they were massed over one thousand strong. They breathed the pure air, gazed in admiration upon the valley's background of gently sloping emerald foothills and towering, snow-capped peaks. They heard the silvery song of the meadow lark mingle with the click of hammers and the buzz of saws, and beheld a city rising out of a fertile field. In the making of this city they saw town lots sold and resold in a single day at advances of from $25 to $100, while double this profit was refused for other choice locations. They marveled at the vast extent of the great valley, and the fertility and exceptional productiveness of the soil.

The valley was its own advertiser, and to the men and women who stood upon its broad acres and saw with their own eyes its wealth of soil and scenery, and experienced the delights of its perfect climate, it told an indisputable story of opportunity, and extended an irresistible welcome to all.

This list of bona fide buyers tells an eloquent and forcible story of the merits of the Yucaipa Valley:

Remember this, even the record-breaking opening of the Yucaipa Valley is only a beginning. Today, stamped with the seal of public approval, the developments only fairly started, the opportunities are far better than on the opening day. Yucaipa City and Valley needs men and women of strength and character. Its 11,000 fertile sheltered acres call to the homeseekers and the home lovers, and it offers them an opportunity seldom equaled anywhere in the world.

Come and see for yourself. To see is to believe. If you cannot come, write for free literature that tells in detail a truthful story of the Yucaipa. One, two, three or five years hence investments in Yucaipa City town lots and Yucaipa Valley lands will be safe and profitable, but the larger profits, and the better locations will be taken by the early buyers.

Some reports had it that the well at first was flowing at the rate of 15,000 barrels a day, but this is thought to be an exaggeration. The well is No. 28 and is the first one brought in by the railroad company in that section. A CALL.

AGENCIES OUT IN AN ADDRESS.

PRESENTATION OF THEIR CASE MADE BY COMMITTEE.

Final Action Will Be Taken at a Meeting to Be Held at Bakersfield on March First Next—Oil Men Are Urged to Attend Gathering That Is Considered Important.

The committee appointed at the meeting of the Independent Agencies held at Bakersfield on January 22, 1910, has prepared the following address, which is being sent to all oil producers of California:

"Gentlemen:—At a meeting held January 22, 1910, in Bakersfield, California, composed of members of the Independent Producers' Agency (of Kern county,) and the Coalinga Producers' Agency, it was declared that the sense of the meeting was that the two Agencies should close their doors to all producers not now affiliated, except under conditions: First, that all companies now producing should become members on or before the first day of April, 1910. Second, that each individual company becoming a producer subsequent to that date should make application before, or upon, the completion of its first well.

"Unless a new state of facts is presented, the foregoing will, undoubtedly, be the action taken at a second meeting to be held in Bakersfield on March 1, 1910, notice of which meeting is hereby given and to which meeting all individuals, firms and companies having to do with the producing of California oil are hereby invited in order that the fullest opportunity be given to all to discuss this proposition in all its bearings, to the end that the wisest course may be taken and that the most nearly complete justice combined with the fairest possible treatment of all shall be attained under such circumstances as exist.

"The committee, whose individual names are affixed hereto, desire to submit the statement that in its opinion the conclusion arrived at by the Independent Producers in the aforesaid joint meeting assembled, was against the preference and personal wishes of a majority of those present and was reluctantly accepted; but that the action was finally unanimously decided upon as the result of a discussion which disclosed good and sufficient reasons for the adoption of this policy. This committee further asserts that if it can be shown that there is a method of procedure by which the members of the Producers' Agencies can be protected, and which will yield to them a full measure of the profits to which they feel and believe all producers are entitled, that method will be adopted. The meeting to be held in Bakersfield, Cal., on March 1, is for the exact purpose of determining whether or not such a method does exist. All persons in anywise interested in this matter, whether within or without the agency organizations, are strongly urged to be in attendance and to come prepared with all facts, figures and data that may have a bearing upon the question. It is desired that the closed door policy shall have the widest and freest discussion and consideration.

"It should be remembered that at the time of the establishment of the agencies the price of oil was such as to give only a small, if any, profit from its production. Owing to the efforts of the agencies the price of oil at the well has risen from about 15 cents, to at least 50 cents per barrel, and for the last two years has held above 60. We fell justified in asserting that this rise in price has been wholly, due to the efforts of the agency members and officers, and the general prosperity enjoyed by all oil producers in the State, organized and unorganized, has been brought about through the faithful, consistent and uninterrupted application of energy by the Kern county and Coalinga producers, working with a single purpose. For this reason we regard ourselves to be entitled to the gratitude of those who have not endured the labor nor shared the cost made necessary in bringing about this result. And we further believe that all those who have been benefited by our work should join with us in maintaining the future.

"The Independent Agencies by united and intelligent effort have accomplished what a few months since seemed impossible, and now have independent pipe lines reaching from every field of importance in the State to tidewater, with ships to carry the oil to every market on the entire Pacific Coast. The Union Oil Company of California, with its perfected organization, has been employed to act as selling agent and members of the agencies are now not solely producers as they were last year and the years before, engaged in the sole struggle of wresting what they could in the way of a fair and reasonable price from the marketers—they are the marketers themselves, and not only does their object embrace the production of oil, but it also embraces the placing of that oil in all markets to the best advantage of their members. Such a state of affairs, we submit, must lead irrestistibly to the conclusion by any fair-minded man that the best interests of all producers will be subserved in the fullest degree by joining the agencies to the end that all shall reap the greatest profits, and we frankly state to you that we confidently expect that during the period of ten years, the term for which we are bound together, the average price of Agency oil will greatly exceed the average received by those who stand on the outside and deliver their production to those institutions whose best endeavors have been and at all times will be exerted to force down the price of oil at the well.

"Again we urge that the invitation herewith extended be accepted by all to whom it is addressed. We feel confident that a thorough examination of the question at issue will terminate in the adoption of the wisest procedure, and we realize that the closed door policy may be modified by the presentation of facts and views with which we are not now acquainted. We realize also that every argument advanced at our recent meeting was submitted by members of the organization, and hence may have been given in a spirit animated by a feeling of desire for the continued success of the organization, rather than by serious consideration of a plain business proposition.

Respectfully submitted.

[Signed.] L. P. ST. CLAIR.

PRODUCTION OF WELLS IN STATE.

FIGURES FROM VARIOUS FIELDS FOR DECEMBER.

The Settled Output Is Given in Each Instance, Not the Usual Estimate—Coalinga Leads in the Number of New Wells for the Month, Though Others Make Good Showing.

The list of new wells finished in the California field during the month of December, 1909, with estimated production, depth of wells and gravity of oil—settled production being given —is as follows:

Sunset Feld—Muscatine Oil Company's No. 3, section 1-11-24, at 1555 feet, production 15 bbls. per day, gravity 11.5. Golden West Oil Company's No. 2, section 12, at 1110 feet, 30 bbls., 12.4 gravity. Ruby Oil Company's No. 9, section 2, at 1070 feet, 20 bbls., 14.8 gravity. Monte Cristo's No. 14, section 1, at 1356 feet, 100 bbls., 16.5 gravity. Wellman Oil Company's No. 5, section 36-12-24, at 1440 feet, 150 bbls., 17.5 gravity. Ethel D. Oil Company's No. 1, at 940 feet, 1500 bbls., 19.7 gravity.

Coalinga—William Graham, No. 6, section 2-19-15, at 1500 feet, 100 bbls., 18 gravity. K. T. & O. Oil Company, No. 22, section 3, at 1494 feet, 50 bbls.; well No. 23, at 1546 feet, 80 bbls., 18.5 gravity. Good Luck Oil Company, No. 2, section 22, at 1250 feet, 35 bbls., 18.2 gravity. Caribou Oil Company, No. 21, section 22, at 1280 feet, 21.2 gravity. Associated Oil Company, No. 6, section 22, at 1162 feet, 100 bbls., 21.2 gravity. California Oil Fields, No. 62, section 27, at 1845 feet, 50 bbls., 21 gravity; No. 14, at 2370 feet, 300 bbls. American Petroleum Company, No. 5, section 13, at 1760 feet, 300 bbls.; No. 8, at 1980 feet, 150 bbls., 16.1 gravity. B. & B. Oil Company, No. 6, section 12, at 1359 feet, 70 bbls., 16.5 gravity. Premier Oil Company, No. 9, section 24, at 1768 feet, 400 bbls., 15.9 gravity; No. 10, at 1756 feet, 300 bbls., 16.2 gravity. Blue Moon Oil Company, No. 1, section 6, at 2680 feet, 45 bbls., 25.6 gravity. Jefferson Oil Company, No. 1, at 2385 feet, 75 bbls., 15 gravity.

IN MANY FIELDS.

Santa Maria—Union Oil Company (Newlove lease,) No. 32, at 3300 feet, 250 bbls.; No. 33, at 3500 feet, 250 bbls., 25 gravity.

Lompoc—Pacific Oilfields Limited, No. 5, section 29-8-34, at 2750 feet, 180 bbls., 21 gravity.

Ventura—Bard Oil Company (Ojai Road,) No. 22, at 1170 feet, 100 bbls., 13.4 gravity.

Salt Lake—Pacific Petroleum Company No. 49, section 26-1-15, at 2784 feet, 500 bbls., 20.2 gravity. Salt Lake Oil Company, No. 249, section 22-1-14, at 1055 feet, 40 bbls., 14 gravity. McDor Oil Company, No. 1, section 18, at 1800 feet, 40 bbls., 14 gravity. Rancho La Brea Oil Company, No. 25, section 15, at 1350 feet, 60 bbls., 14 gravity.

Los Angeles City—Union Consolidated Oil and Refining Company, No. 10, at 1600 feet, 10 bbls., 16 gravity. This well was suspended at 1400 feet in February, 1909, on account of sand trouble, but resumed operations in July and finished at 1600 feet. It will probably be the last well to be drilled in this field, as drilling is prohibited in the city limits.

Whittier—The Home Oil Company, No. 20, on section 22-2-11, has finished at 2047 feet, 30 bbls., 20 gravity. This well has been drilling almost eight months.

Kern River—San Joaquin Oil Company, No. 27, section 5, at 958 feet, 20 bbls.; No. 28, at 948 feet, 15 bbls.; No. 29, at 950 feet, 20 bbls., all 15.5 gravity. Reed Crude Oil Company, No. 62, section 32, at 937 feet, 30 bbls.; No. 63, at 917 feet, 30 bbls.; No. 64, at 935 feet, 20 bbls., all 15 gravity. Santa Fé (P. D.) on section 2, six wells, at depths ranging from 400 to 500 feet, averaging 5 bbls. each, 13 gravity. Kern Four Oil Company, No. 10, section 4, at 890 feet, 10 bbls.; Enos Oil Company, No. 7, section 6, at 1020 feet, 20 bbls. Michigan Oil Company, No. 4, section 4, at 834 feet 20 bbls. Walker & Keck, No. 2, section 30, at 1025 feet, 20 bbls., 13 to 14 gravity a total of 17 wells.

NEW IDEA IN DRILLING.

IT IS USED IN ILLINOIS.

Operators who recently have visited the Illinois fields bring back information of a new idea in drilling. In the lower end of the Illinois field, where oil is found in paying quantities, in three or four formations, a novel plan has been adopted for securing the production from two or more of these by drilling two wells at the same location.

The first well is drilled to the first sand that shows for a paying producer. It is not drilled below that sand, but the rig is shifted and a new hole started. When it reaches the depth at which the first well got its production the oil is cased off and drilling continued to the lower formation, and when completed both wells are put on the pump. It is claimed that this method is more satisfactory than any other.

IN COALINGA FIELD.

MUCH DEVELOPMENT WORK.

There are many indications, with the approach of spring, of much new development in the Coalinga field. Already many contracts are being made by local lumber dealers and almost every company operating in that section is planning new work. This tends to the conclusion that Coalinga will hold its own for some time to come as the largest producer among the various fields of the State.

Not only are the lumbermen kept busy, but the oil well supply firms are working overtime in filling orders.

Big Offer for Property.

value of surrounding oil territory. B. H. Sill of Bakersfield, who owns the west half of section 16, 32-24, adjoining the Honolulu's property, has just been offered $1500 an acre, or $480,000 for the 320 acres, and is now negotiating with Los Angeles parties for the sale of the property at a higher figure, said to be $2000 an acre. Sill has been in possession of the property for a number of years.

The bringing in of the Honolulu well has developed a large territory of heretofore undeveloped land.

OIL EXPORTS IN 1909.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

According to a just-issued summary of our foreign trade in 1909 calendar year, by the Bureau of Statistics, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, our exports of mineral oil in that year totaled 1,571,103,373 gallons, worth $103,838,590—$5,000,000 less than in 1908, for 23,700,000 gallons more oil.

California Oil Briefs.

The annual meeting of the Fresno-San Francisco Oil Company recently was held in Fresno. This is the company in which Los Angeles capitalists are largely interested, having purchased the interests recently of a number of Fresnans. The directors elected were: W. K. Washburn, J. R. Hickman and C. J. Craycroft of Fresno, G. F. Patterson, Bruce Smith, C. M. Boles and Albert Rubenstein of Los Angeles.

J. D. Thompson of Pasadena, vice-president of the Premier Oil Company, is authority for the statement that the company recently refused an offer of $1,500,000 for its property. He would not state who the intended purchasers were.

INSURANCE WORLD.

Several insurance brokers of Louisville have been arrested for swindling a number of insurance companies. Policies were taken out on certain lives where the persons named knew nothing about the matter. Other risks were placed on aged people, and the amount of the policies collected. The Indiana National Life Company is pushing the investigation, and has caused the arrest of a number of the brokers interested in the frauds.

The City Controller of Buffalo has recommended that the city insure its own buildings through a sinking fund to be created by appropriating annually a sum in the estimates except in cases where the risks are extra hazardous. In the last ten years the city has paid insurance companies over $65,000 in premiums and at 3 per cent. interest that sum would amount to over $73,000. The losses have been less than $4000, and the city would have made a net gain of nearly $69,000. The Controller's proposition is to place in the estimates $10,000 for fire insurance, $9000 to the credit of the insurance fund and the other $1000 for premiums on the convention hall, police and fire headquarters and zoo buildings.

According to J. F. Dryden, the amount of life insurance in force at the close of 1908 was $14,218,952,000, of which 82 per cent. was interstate business.

As a result the companies are subject to the conflicting statutory requirements of fifty-five States and Territories, including the District of Columbia and the various non-contiguous possessions of the United States. Each State and Territory legislating for itself the law "may be described as one of dissimilarity, uncertainty and interstate choas." The immense legislative activity throughout the United States is made evident by the fact that for the nine years ending with 1908 some 86,000 new laws and resolutions were enacted, of which 34,000 were laws of a public character, more or less affecting business enterprise, including insurance.

"In addition to the complex state of the public law which governs the business of insurance, the private, or unwritten, law is subject for its correct judicial interpretation to some 30,000 decisions, of which 12,000 represent cases which have been fought through to the highest tribunals in twenty years."

The New York Life Insurance Company has decided to issue optional policies, the same as was done prior to 1909. The practice was stopped at the beginning of last year to curtail the volume of paid-for insurance. Agents will be permitted to submit application of those who have been declined within twelve months by another company on condition that if rejected the applicant or agent pay the medical examination fee.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York closed its sixty-seventh year with an increased amount of insurance in force, $1,441,323,848, and with increased assets amounting to $560,122,367.61; but especially worthy of note is the fact that the company paid to policy-holders and their beneficiaries during the year the enormous sum of $54,909,648.86, or practically $55,000,000—a greater amount by some millions than was ever before paid in a single year by any company in the world. Even more surprising is the fact that of the vast sum thus paid to policy-holders, over $11,000,000 consisted of cash dividends on policies in force.

As a result of the establishment in

The growth of the oil industry of this State has been so steady that comparatively few people have realized its importance or the tremendous profits to be derived from an investment in the shares of the companies.

$1000 invested in the common stock of the American Petroleum Company two years ago is paying $1600 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $10,000.

$1000 invested in Lucile stock a few years ago is returning $8000 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $73,326.

$1000 invested in the stock of the Fullerton Oil Company will this year earn $5000 and the shares can now be sold for $60,800.

$1000 invested in Pinal at 60 cents per share has paid in dividends as much as $2988 per year, and the shares could then have been sold for $44,800. That $1000 is now earning $1990 per year in dividends.

$1000 invested in Sterling at 30 cents per share is returning $3333 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $12,300.

$1000 invested in the stock of the Claremont, only a comparatively short time ago, is returning $1598 in dividends and the shares can now be sold for $13,653.

$1000 invested in Illinois Crude a few months ago at 25 cents per share is now paying at the rate of $960 per year in dividends and the shares can be sold for $2240.

$1000 invested in the shares of the Monte Cristo Oil Company has paid in dividends as much as $3600 per year and the shares can even now be sold for $15,000.

These are only a few illustrations that come readily to mind. There are many more that a little investigation will bring forth.

But the illustrations given show that only $1000 invested in these shares when the price was low is in most cases returning the investor a comfortable income, while in several cases the holdings themselves, if sold at the market, would realize an independent fortune.

Fortunes have been made and fortunes will continue to be made from investment in the shares of the California oil companies.

It must be borne in mind that most of the companies mentioned above made their records through a period when the price for crude oil was much lower than it is at present—in many cases it was only 25, 20 and even as low as 17 cents per barrel.

So that, because of the present price for the product and the advance in price that is surely coming, companies whose shares are now selling at higher figures than those quoted above are in relatively the same position to make great profits for the investors.

Taking it all in all, there has never been as promising a time for investments in oil shares as the present.

The industry is on a sound, stable business basis. The demand is increasing faster than the supply. Transportation facilities are assured and the price of crude oil is advancing.

If you are not already a shareholder in the oil companies of the State, then you are missing your opportunities for great profit and should invest at once.

If you are a shareholder, then we know you are awake to the possibilities and urge you to increase your holdings.

standstill, and hard times were pinching everybody. I became a supervisor, and, fortunately, was one of the public officers concerned in effecting a compromise. We discounted the interest and principal 25 per cent., and prosperity returned to Macoupin county. Still, the Courthouse, in the end, cost the taxpayers $2,250,000, but the relief from litigation, agitation and stagnation was well worth the money. I held no more offices in Illinois.

"My health again becoming bad, I sold my store, and with cash and credits amounting to about $10,000, I moved to North Dakota, taking up a quarter section of land, in the hope that living in the air would cure my ailing throat and lungs. After I had built a one-room shack of rough boards, and had plowed the land, I returned to Illinois for the winter. In the spring I took my family, a number of horses, and some machinery to Dakota. I bought and preëmpted more land, and settled down to live and die a farmer.

DEALS IN REAL ESTATE.

"In three year I was elected probate judge of Towner county, and moved to Cando, seven miles distant. The country was new, the settlers were young, and there were few orphans and widows, and no wills to file, or estates to settle. The fees of the probate judge, accordingly, were hardly worth mentioning. So I began to loan money and deal in real estate. The people were poor, the land was being broken to the plow and the prices of farm products so low that there was very little profit in agriculture. No money came in from the outside until the year 1897. Since then we have not had any difficulty in getting all the capital needed to develop the country."

RETURNS ARE SATISFACTORY.

"You own a great deal of land yourself," I said. "Does it pay?"

"In North Dakota, at least, if the land is good and one's renters are energetic men, the returns of agriculture ought to be considerably more than 10 per cent. annually. Some of my renters have been with me for sixteen years. Several of them have farms of their own, but they rent to others and remain with me. A mean landlord seldom makes any money. He pinches his tenants, and, without knowing it, pinches himself.

"In my country, it is the practice of the land owner to supply the seed and to pay half of the cost of thrashing. The crops are divided equally between him and the tenant. A renter, if he is worth anything at all, wants to make money. Such a man is the one to keep. The live stock belongs to him and he is supposed to feed it out of his share of the crops. It is well, therefore, to encourage him to increase the number of his cattle, pigs, and horses to give him every opportunity, in short, to become a capitalist. Farms managed in that way are very profitable investments."

"How do you explain the dear prices of food?"

"I might attribute the high cost of what one eats to the protective tariff," Senator Thompson answered, "which you could take seriously or as a joke, but I won't. As I see the matter, the demand for food is growing faster than the supply of food. Every city and large town in the country is drawing men away from the land. Farmers' sons are going into the mills and factories. The railroads, employing millions of hands, are draining the farms of their best labor.

GOING TO THE CITY.

"While the cities are booming the country, in a sense, is languishing. Every man who leaves a farm to become a brakeman, a street car conductor, or a clerk in a store, ceases to be a food producer and begins to be a food consumer. Multiply that man by 1,000,000, or by 5,000,000 of other men and then count up the pounds of food they eat, and it will be seen that the balance between production and consumption is not being maintained.

"Furthermore," Senator Thompson continued to say, "the cost of producing all of our staple farm products is increasing rapidly. Up to seven years ago we could hire men for $20 a month during the eight months of the farming season. We must now pay $35 or $40 a month for inferior labor. Indeed, good hands are so hard to get that many farmers of my acquaintance have rented their land and moved into neighboring villages. Most of the men whom we are compelled to employ come from the country east of us and are native Americans.

"BACK TO THE FARM."

"How can young men be induced to stay on the farms and help their fathers?" I inquired.

"Many suggestions have been made, but the only way to attach a young man to the soil is to educate him, and then to give him a chance to make a practical application of his knowledge. Fully 95 per cent. of the boys who graduate from our agricultural colleges take up farming as their permanent occupation. They go away from intellectual darkness, from dismal homes, where the long days are filled with drudgery, and where the methods have remained unchanged since the time of their great-grandfathers, into life, light, energy and happiness.

"They learn that agriculture is both a business and a science. They discover that the modern farmer is the most independent man on earth; that he has no superintendent to threaten him with the loss of his place and wages; that no boss can bully him; that customers come to him with the money in their hands; that he has instant sale for everything he produces, and that wheat, corn, beef and cotton never go out of fashion. So they return to the home farms and are competent and enthusiastic. They work with their heads and hands. They get tangible and immediate results, and the intellectual interest and exercise that is necessary if one is to take any joy in his work.

"Furthermore, the young college agriculturalist soon has the old men in the neighborhood running to him for advice and instruction. He finds that he has become a leader and a teacher, and in the winter he arranges for lectures on farming, fruit growing and the care of live stock. Perhaps he establishes a question box or edits a column in the village newspaper. He discusses road-making and dairying, and walks away with most of the premiums at the country fair. Thus his father is content to hunt the eggs, weed the garden, and chop the family wood; also to brag about his son whenever he goes to town. The antiquated farmer worked 365 days in the year and carried a lantern that he might work at night. Physically, he went to the limit; intellectually, he was either sodden or dead. I have heard a story of a man who carried a pile of stones from one side of a lot to the other month after month for good wages. Finally he went crazy. The college farmer is an enterprising and happy man. He answers the question you asked of me."

"What kind of a Democrat are you?" I inquired.

FORTUNATE FOR THE COUNTRY.

"Democrat as I am, confessing that I vote my ticket straight, yet I am bound to say that we would now be in the midst of a terrible business panic had Bryan been elected in 1908 and made serious attempt to put his radical views into operation. The Democratic party must reduce and modernize its issues. It cannot carry the country either with free trade or free silver. The people are too intelligent to vote for free trade. Nor will they support any such foolishness as the guaranteeing of national bank deposits, a proposition that opens wide the door to wild-cat banking."

"How did you get into the Senate?"

"By the appointment of Gov. John Burke, a Democrat. I shall never come back, of course. North Dakota is a Republican State. Taft's plurality was nearly 25,000. But in 1909 the Republicans got fighting among themselves, some standing pat on the tariff and some arguing for lower schedules. Consequently, Burke was elected. The lesson to the Republicans, it occurs to me, ought to be obvious. Then Martin N. Johnson, one of our Senators, died, and Gov. Burke appointed me to the vacancy. I have known Burke intimately for twenty years. He is a fine lawyer and a splendid man. And I am having the most interesting experience of my life."

Looking at the clock on the mantel of his office—he had been watching it closely all the morning—Senator Thompson said: "You must excuse me now. The Senate will meet in two minutes."

He caught up his overcoat, pulled his hat over his eyes, and vanished.

Tetrahedrite.

MOJAVE, Jan. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The inclosed samples come from property in which I am interested, and located near Hamilton Mountain, ten miles west of Mojave. No. 1 occurs in large quantities; what is its name? No. 2 is from a ten-foot hole on the east side of Mount Hamilton. What is it, please? No. 3 may be tin ore, or least, that is what I name it. No. 4 puzzles me; what the the three yellow specks mixed with the yellow iron?

Thanking you in advance for some information in the "In the Earth," of which I have been a constant reader since I first saw it four years ago, and thanking you for past favors,

Yours truly, H. C. O.

ANSWER: Four samples of No. 1 is feldspar (orthoclase;) the fifth sample is andesyte. No. 2 is a low grade fireclay. No. 3 is not an ore of tin; it is a variety of tetrahedrite. "The name tetrahedrite alludes to the tetrahedral form of the crystals, in which it ordinarily occurs." There are many varieties of tetrahedrite. The sample you submit runs high in silver, with copper, antimony, zinc, iron and arsenic present. The mining boys in the hills call this variety of ore "gray copper." Some of the samples of this variety of tetrahedrite at the White Pine mine, Boulder county, Colorado, assay over 12,000 ounces of silver to the ton ore.

This is the first specimen of tetrahedrite observed by the writer from the section indicated.

Popularity of "Dixie."

Lincoln thought "Dixie" the best of American tunes and jokingly remarked that he regarded it as contraband of war. Its words are puerile. What is there inspiring about "simmons seed and sandy bottom?" But there is a swing and "go" to the southern song which enlivens a crowd, where the formal measures of "America," too infrequently played, or the saddening strains of "Maryland, My Maryland," fall of their effect in awakening enthusiasm. Much of the vogue of "Dixie" in New York must be attributed to the efforts of an active minority in popularizing the air. It is a legacy of the lost cause for which the North is growing to have an affection. —[New York World.

HURRAH FOR CALIFORNIA AND HER FARMS!

BY J .T. MORIARTY.

PART SIX—SUNDAY ..... 7390$......

On January 16, last month—there was published in The Times an article taken from the Orange Judd Farmer, coöperating with the American Agriculturist of New York, and the New England Homestead of Springfield, Mass., showing the increased value of agricultural products for the United States as a whole, and for each of our several States and Territories during the ten years ending with 1910.

The facts set forth in that article are said to be the result of painstaking investigation, and can, therefore, be relied on as approximately correct.

Although not there stated, in so many words, yet it appears from a careful reading of that article that among her sister States and Territories, California ranked fourteenth in the matter of the value of her farm products for 1900, while for the year 1910 she holds the eleventh place.

From the data contained in that article the writer of these lines has constructed the following table, showing the value of farm products for the years named, together with the percentage of increase:

			Inc.
California	131,000,000	329,000,000	151
Texas	239,000,000	623,000,000	160

This table omits from consideration here all the States and Territories it does not name, for the reason that among all of them, whose farm products were valued at as much as $100,000,000, or more in 1900, California and Texas only show an increase as great as 150 per cent. or more for 1910.

On glancing over the table it will be seen the increase in California was 51 per cent. more than that of the United States as a whole, while Texas surpassed California by 9 per cent.

Aside from what is contained in the article above alluded to, it is but just to California to add that the lead of Texas over her to the extent of 9 per cent. is due to two very important facts:

(1.) Texas has 60 per cent. more territory than California.

(2.) In 1900 the population of Texas was 3,000,000, while that of California was only 1,485,000.

When, therefore, due allowance is made for this excess, both of territory and population, it is not too much to

All Records Broken

During January we broke all previous records in the number of new stockholders recorded. 315 new ones added to our list, making a grand total of 3816 who will share in our 56th quarterly cash dividend.

Amounting to $92,256.24

Which will be paid Tuesday, February 15, 1910. If you are one of these 3816 stockholders to share in this dividend, step in and get your check.

If you are not one of them—why not become one, and share with us these regular quarterly cash dividends?

What Does It Mean?

This monthly increase in the number of new stockholders? There is only one explanation: That the investors in this company are perfectly satisfied with their investment and have complete confidence in the honesty and integrity of the officers of this company; and in their ability to handle their money in a way that produces the best returns; and that these investors are advising their friends to join this, the

Largest Co-Operative Building Company in the World

And share in all of these big quarterly earnings.

30,000 shares of unissued stock now for sale at $3.05 a share. An advance of 5 cents a share will be made March 1 and April 1, 1910. A stock account can be started with $1.00; pay balance weekly and monthly. All stockholders share in the large profits on real estate, as well as in all other profits.

No commission paid to anyone for selling stock.

All stockholders absolutely protected against loss should they desire to sell their stock, by a guarantee fund held by the Globe Savings Bank.

No one has ever failed to receive their money back if they desired it.

WE have six thousand acres of the soil that made Riverside oranges famous, in the frostless belt, with unlimited water supply.

We are here to not merely sell this land, but to STAY WITH IT.

Investors, home-makers and orange growers are especially invited to investigate the scope and PERMANENCY of our development.

The Riverside Groves and Water Company will itself cultivate 2500 acres for the profits to be made. It has spent many thousands of dollars, and will spend many thousands more in the permanent development of La Sierra Heights along lines that will best aid the owners of lots and acreage, and increase the value of their property.

Thorough investigation of the property and our plans is invited. We run excursions twice each week to La Sierra Heights. Call and make reservations

This is an unequaled opportunity to share in the great profits from Southern California's best industry under exceptionally favorable conditions.

-Thousand-Barrel Gusher in Sunset Field.

luction of Honolulu Well Goes to Standard.

KERSFIELD, Feb. 12.—At the ation of representatives of the Side oil fields, the County Su ors yesterday appointed W. N. r, a well-known oil superin nt, as temporary oil commis for that territory. No salary ixed by the board and it is the standing that the oil men will ensate the commissioner by pri subscription.

committee that waited on the and which was composed of W. ill, Truman Hart, J. B. Wrenn eorge E. Whitker, stated to the visors that within thirty days ll men of the West Side would mend a man for permanent ap nent as commissioner and would it a plan for paying him without se to the county.

duties of the oil commissioner, tlined in an act passed at the ession of the Legislature, are to t oil wells for the purpose of taining that they are properly , that the water encountered is off and not allowed to enter the ands, and to see that wells are abandoned until the casing is n and the hole tamped full of , mortar or other substance nec y to prevent the water from in adjacent oil deposits. The law res the oil companies to furnish il commissioner with a log of all drilled.

s possible that the producers of Kern River field will ask for the ntment of a commissioner for territory, although as yet they not done so.

Kern Trading and Oil Company Southern Pacific's oil department) brought in a 5000-barrel gusher the north line of section 1, 11-28, Sunset field. The well is No. the K. T. & O. string and is in icinity of the Ethel D. Wellman, Cristo group of gushers. It is le farther out on the flat than of these.

last report this morning the well spouting oil more than twenty- eet above the top of the derrick. Oil is 15 gravity and comes from ame sand as the Monte Cristo's some one thousand feet deeper the stratum tapped by the D.

Standard Oil Company has se the production of the Honolulu's gusher in the Buena Vista hills, it is rumored without official ication that the same concern has over the lease of the land. The olulu, which came in last summer great gusher, and which was sub ently deepened and for the last weeks has been gushing oil, still es the greatest interest in the side fields, as it raises a reason presumption that the Midway extends several miles farther than supposed. The oil, which is 23 ity, is the lightest found in the way field.

ring January the Twenty-Five Company, with twelve producing at Midway, shipped 50,000 barrels il at 50 cents. The stockholders of company, which is one of the pio s in the Midway field, are prin lly Bakersfield people. The Twen ive is now running two strings of and will start a third shortly.

Boom which the great strike of Crandall Oil Company on section 32-24, in the Buena Vista hills h of Maricopa, has given to the cent country is illustrated by the that B. H. Sill, who owns the half of section 16, in the same nship, has recently refused $1500 acre for the land, which, before the ndall's well became productive had a speculative value.

e breaking of a crown block on Santa Fé's deep well derrick in the n River field, dropped a string of ng to the bottom of the hole, about feet, and caused the collapse of casing at a depth of 4600 feet. Ef ts to straighten out the crumpled ng have so far proved futile, and may be that the search for deeper sands in Kern River will have to abandoned. So far, this search been vain, although large quan s of gas were encountered at the -foot level.

INDEPENDENTS WAITING.

SEEKING BETTER PRICES.

BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TTSBURGH (Pa.) Feb. 12.—[Ex ive Dispatch.] Alleging that the ndard Oil Company is now paying ntion to the oil development of fornia, Texas and other western ts, to the detriment of Western nsylvania crude, a quiet agreement been reached between independent ducers of Pennsylvania crude oil attempt no further development at ent.

ntil the Standard Oil Company ad ces the price of crude oil to some t near the profit line for the pro er, the Western Pennsylvania cap ist has decided he cannot risk more ey drilling oil wells.

Development has already slumped per cent., according to figures fur ned here today by independent oil n. Within the past year Pennsyl ia crude has been reduced by the ndard from $1.78 per barrel to $1.40. t $1.78, the independent men assert y could scarcely afford the great s of sinking oil wells in territory sonably sure of striking oil, but ld risk little in "wild catting" or eloping virgin territory.

t $1.40 they assert they cannot af d development.

o add to discontent already in evi ce, the Valvaline Oil Company, an ependent concern, with a pipe line ending from the Western Pennsyl ia fields to the Atlantic Coast, has ed the Standard price from $1.40 to 5 per barrel.

is alleged here the Standard after ing $1.40 for Pennsylvania crude nds not more than $2.60 in refining l obtaining by-products, yet sell for otal of $8. Rumor is that the Stand has discovered unsuspected by ducts worth much in western oils.

K.T.O. HAS BIG WELL.

PROVES UP NEW TERRITORY.

Word comes from Bakersfield that K.T.O. well on section 1-11-24 broke se a few days ago with every in cation that it will be a big producer.

timated at 3500 to 4000 barrels a day. The oil is 19½ gravity, and so extensive a flow that the crew is having a strenuous time to care for the output.

Some reports had it that the well at first was flowing at the rate of 15,000 barrels a day, but this is thought to be an exaggeration. The well is No. 28 and is the first one brought in by the railroad company in that section. It is said positively to prove up a great expanse of Maricopa territory and has caused great excitement among the oil men of that vicinity.

A CALL.

AGENCIES OUT IN AN ADDRESS.

PRESENTATION OF THEIR CASE MADE BY COMMITTEE.

Final Action Will Be Taken at a Meeting to Be Held at Bakersfield on March First Next—Oil Men Are Urged to Attend Gathering That Is Considered Important.

The committee appointed at the meeting of the Independent Agencies held at Bakersfield on January 22, 1910, has prepared the following address, which is being sent to all oil producers of California:

"Gentlemen:—At a meeting held January 22, 1910, in Bakersfield, California, composed of members of the Independent Producers' Agency (of Kern county,) and the Coalinga Producers' Agency, it was declared that the sense of the meeting was that the two Agencies should close their doors to all producers not now affiliated, except under conditions: First, that all companies now producing should become members on or before the first day of April, 1910. Second, that each individual company becoming a producer subsequent to that date should make application before, or upon, the completion of its first well.

"Unless a new state of facts is presented, the foregoing will, undoubtedly, be the action taken at a second meeting to be held in Bakersfield on March 1, 1910, notice of which meeting is hereby given and to which meeting all individuals, firms and companies having to do with the producing of California oil are hereby invited in order that the fullest opportunity be given to all to discuss this proposition in all its bearings, to the end that the wisest course may be taken and that the most nearly complete justice combined with the fairest possible treatment of all shall be attained under such circumstances as exist.

"The committee, whose individual names are affixed hereto, desire to submit the statement that in its opinion the conclusion arrived at by the Independent Producers in the aforesaid joint meeting assembled, was against the preference and personal wishes of a majority of those present and was reluctantly accepted; but that the action was finally unanimously decided upon as the result of a discussion which disclosed good and sufficient reasons for the adoption of this policy. This committee further asserts that if it can be shown that there is a method of procedure by which the members of the Producers' Agencies can be protected, and which will yield to them a full measure of the profits to which they feel and believe all producers are entitled, that method will be adopted. The meeting to be held in Bakersfield, Cal., on March 1, is for the exact purpose of determining whether or not such a method does exist. All persons in anywise interested in this matter, whether within or without the agency organizations, are strongly urged to be in attendance and to come prepared with all facts, figures and data that may have a bearing upon the question. It is desired that the closed door policy shall have the widest and freest discussion and consideration.

"It should be remembered that at the time of the establishment of the agencies the price of oil was such as to give only a small, if any, profit from its production. Owing to the efforts of the agencies the price of oil at the well has risen from about 15 cents, to at least 50 cents per barrel, and for the last two years has held above 60. We fell justified in asserting that this rise in price has been wholly, due to the efforts of the agency members and officers, and the general prosperity enjoyed by all oil producers in the State, organized and unorganized, has been brought about through the faithful, consistent and uninterrupted application of energy by the Kern county and Coalinga producers, working with a single purpose. For this reason we regard ourselves to be entitled to the gratitude of those who have not endured the labor nor shared the cost made necessary in bringing about this result. And we further believe that all those who have been benefited by our work should join with us in maintaining the future.

"The Independent Agencies by united and intelligent effort have accomplished what a few months since seemed impossible, and now have independent pipe lines reaching from every field of importance in the State to tidewater, with ships to carry the oil to every market on the entire Pacific Coast. The Union Oil Company of California, with its perfected organization, has been employed to act as selling agent and members of the agencies are now not solely producers as they were last year and the years before, engaged in the sole struggle of wresting what they could in the way of a fair and reasonable price from the marketers—they are the marketers themselves, and not only does their object embrace the production of oil, but it also embraces the placing of that oil in all markets to the best advantage of their members. Such a state of affairs, we submit, must lead irrestistibly to the conclusion by any fair-minded man that the best interests of all producers will be subserved in the fullest degree by joining the agencies to the end that all shall reap the greatest profits, and we frankly state to you that we confidently expect that during the period of ten years, the term for which we are bound together, the average price of Agency oil will greatly exceed the average received by those who stand on the outside and deliver their production to those institutions whose best endeavors have been and at all times will be exerted to force down the price of oil at the well.

"Again we urge that the invitation herewith extended be accepted by all to whom it is addressed. We feel confident that a thorough examination of the question at issue will terminate in the adoption of the wisest procedure, and we realize that the closed door policy may be modified by the presentation of facts and views with which we are not now acquainted. We realize also that every argument advanced at our recent meeting was submitted by members of the organization, and hence may have been given in a spirit animated by a feeling of desire for the continued success of the organization, rather than by serious consideration of a plain business proposition.

Respectfully submitted,

[Signed.] L. P. ST. CLAIR.

PRODUCTION OF WELLS IN STATE.

FIGURES FROM VARIOUS FIELDS FOR DECEMBER.

The Settled Output Is Given in Each Instance, Not the Usual Estimate—Coalinga Leads in the Number of New Wells for the Month, Though Others Make Good Showing.

The list of new wells finished in the California field during the month of December, 1909, with estimated production, depth of wells and gravity of oil—settled production being given—is as follows:

Sunset Feld—Muscatine Oil Company's No. 3, section 1-11-24, at 1555 feet, production 15 bbls. per day, gravity 11.5. Golden West Oil Company's No. 2, section 12, at 1110 feet, 30 bbls., 12.4 gravity. Ruby Oil Company's No. 3, section 2, at 1070 feet, 30 bbls., 14.8 gravity. Monte Cristo's No. 14, section 1, at 1356 feet, 100 bbls., 16.5 gravity. Wellman Oil Company's No. 5, section 36-12-24, at 1440 feet, 150 bbls., 17.5 gravity. Ethel D. Oil Company's No. 1, at 940 feet, 1500 bbls., 19.7 gravity.

Coalinga—William Graham, No. 6, section 2-19-15, at 1500 feet, 100 bbls., 18 gravity. K. T. & O. Oil Company, No. 22, section 3, at 1494 feet, 50 bbls.; well No. 23, at 1546 feet, 80 bbls., 18.5 gravity. Good Luck Oil Company, No. 2, section 22, at 1250 feet, 35 bbls., 18.2 gravity. Caribou Oil Company, No. 21, section 22, at 1280 feet, 21.2 gravity. Associated Oil Company, No. 6, section 22, at 1163 feet, 100 bbls., 21.2 gravity. California Oil Fields, No. 62, section 27, at 1845 feet, 50 bbls., 21 gravity; No. 14, at 2370 feet, 300 bbls. American Petroleum Company, No. 5, section 18, at 1760 feet, 300 bbls.; No. 8, at 1980 feet, 150 bbls., 16.1 gravity. B. & B. Oil Company, No. 6, section 12, at 1359 feet, 70 bbls., 16.5 gravity. Premier Oil Company, No. 9, section 24, at 1768 feet, 400 bbls, 15.9 gravity; No. 10, at 1756 feet, 300 bbls., 16.2 gravity. Blue Moon Oil Company, No. 1, section 6, at 2680 feet, 45 bbls., 25.6 gravity. Jefferson Oil Company, No. 1, at 2385 feet, 75 bbls., 15 gravity.

IN MANY FIELDS.

Santa Maria—Union Oil Company (Newlove lease,) No. 32, at 3300 feet, 250 bbls.; No. 33, at 3500 feet, 250 bbls., 25 gravity.

Lompoc—Pacific Oilfields Limited, No. 5, section 29-8-34, at 2750 feet, 150 bbls., 21 gravity.

Ventura—Bard Oil Company (Ojai Road,) No. 22, at 1170 feet, 100 bbls., 13.4 gravity.

Salt Lake—Pacific Petroleum Company No. 49, section 26-1-15, at 2784 feet, 500 bbls., 20.2 gravity. Salt Lake Oil Company, No. 249, section 22-1-14, at 1055 feet, 40 bbls., 14 gravity. McDor Oil Company, No. 1, section 18, at 1800 feet, 40 bbls., 14 gravity. Rancho La Brea Oil Company, No. 25, section 15, at 1380 feet, 60 bbls., 14 gravity.

Los Angeles City—Union Consolidated Oil and Refining Company, No. 10, at 1600 feet, 10 bbls., 16 gravity. This well was suspended at 1400 feet in February, 1909, on account of sand trouble, but resumed operations in July and finished at 1600 feet. It will probably be the last well to be drilled in this field, as drilling is prohibited in the city limits.

Whittier—The Home Oil Company, No. 20, on section 22-2-11, has finished at 2047 feet, 30 bbls., 20 gravity. This well has been drilling almost eight months.

Kern River—San Joaquin Oil Company, No. 27, section 5, at 958 feet, 20 bbls.; No. 28, at 948 feet, 15 bbls.; No. 29, at 950 feet, 20 bbls., all 15.5 gravity. Reed Crude Oil Company, No. 62, section 32, at 987 feet, 30 bbls.; No. 63, at 917 feet, 30 bbls.; No. 64, at 935 feet, 20 bbls., all 15 gravity. Santa Fé (P. D.) on section 2, six wells, at depths ranging from 400 to 500 feet, averaging 5 bbls. each, 13 gravity. Kern Four Oil Company, No. 10, section 4, at 890 feet, 10 bbls.; Enos Oil Company, No. 7, section 6, at 1020 feet, 20 bbls. Michigan Oil Company, No. 4, section 4, at 834 feet 20 bbls. Walker & Keck, No. 2, section 30, at 1025 feet, 20 bbls., 13 to 14 gravity a total of 17 wells.

McKittrick—Majestic Oil Company, No. 1, section 23-31-22, at 1105 feet, 45 bbls., 14 gravity. East Puente Oil Company, No. 8, section 11, at 1240 feet, 150 bbls., 16.5 gravity. Delmonte (Associated Oil Company,) No. 48, section 19, at 1150 feet, 150 bbls., 14.5 gravity; No. 50, at 1100 feet, 150 bbls., 15 gravity.

Midway—Hale & McLeod, No. 2, section 8-32-23, at 1284 feet, 50 bbls., 14.8 gravity. St. Lawrence, No. 1, section 5, at 1195 feet, 1500 bbls., 19.1 gravity. Amador Oil Company, No. 2, section 22, at 685 feet, 125 bbls., 13 gravity. Safe Oil Company, No. 4, section 25, at 1260 feet, 75 bbls., 14.7 gravity; No. 11, at 1760 feet, 300 bbls., 15.5 gravity. Mt. Diablo Oil Company, No. 4, section 26, at 1150 feet, 50 bbls., 14 gravity. T. W. Company, No. 2, section 25, at 1530 feet, 325 bbls., 14.4 gravity. Carbo Oil Company, No. 2, section 26, at 901 feet, 100 bbls., 14 gravity. Alpine Oil Company, No. 3, section 22, at 810 feet, 100 bbls. Wilbert Oil Company, No. 2, section 22, at 967 feet, 100 bbls. Millie & Francis, No. 1, section 25, at 1235 feet, 275 bbls. A., T. & S. F. finished three wells on section 17, at a depth of 1050 feet, each 50 bbls., all 14 gravity; on section 24, at 1901 feet, 75 bbls., 21 gravity. Fifteen new wells were brought in, adding 3225 bbls.

NEW IDEA IN DRILLING.

IT IS USED IN ILLINOIS.

Operators who recently have visited the Illinois fields bring back information of a new idea in drilling. In the lower end of the Illinois field, where oil is found in paying quantities, in three or four formations, a novel plan has been adopted for securing the production from two or more of these by drilling two wells at the same location.

The first well is drilled to the first sand that shows for a paying producer. It is not drilled below that sand, but the rig is shifted and a new hole started. When it reaches the depth at which the first well got its production the oil is cased off and drilling continued to the lower formation, and when completed both wells are put on the pump. It is claimed that this method is more satisfactory than any other.

IN COALINGA FIELD.

MUCH DEVELOPMENT WORK.

There are many indications, with the approach of spring, of much new development in the Coalinga field. Already many contracts are being made by local lumber dealers and almost every company operating in that section is planning new work. This tends to the conclusion that Coalinga will hold its own for some time to come as the largest producer among the various fields of the State.

Not only are the lumbermen kept busy, but the oil well supply firms are working overtime in filling orders.

Big Offer for Property.

value of surrounding oil territory. B. H. Sill of Bakersfield, who owns the west half of section 16, 32-24, adjoining the Honolulu's property, has just been offered $1500 an acre, or $480,000 for the 320 acres, and is now negotiating with Los Angeles parties for the sale of the property at a higher figure, said to be $2000 an acre. Sill has been in possession of the property for a number of years.

The bringing in of the Honolulu well has developed a large territory of heretofore undeveloped land.

OIL EXPORTS IN 1909.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

According to a just-issued summary of our foreign trade in 1909 calendar year, by the Bureau of Statistics, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, our exports of mineral oil in that year totaled 1,571,103,373 gallons, worth $103,838,590—$5,000,000 less than in 1908, for 23,700,000 gallons more oil.

California Oil Briefs.

The annual meeting of the Fresno-San Francisco Oil Company recently was held in Fresno. This is the company in which Los Angeles capitalists are largely interested, having purchased the interests recently of a number of Fresnans. The directors elected were: W. K. Washburn, J. R. Hickman and C. J. Craycroft of Fresno, G. F. Patterson, Bruce Smith, C. M. Boles and Albert Rubenstein of Los Angeles.

J. D. Thompson of Pasadena, vice-president of the Premier Oil Company, is authority for the statement that the company recently refused an offer of $1,500,000 for its property. He would not state who the intended purchasers were.

INSURANCE WORLD.

Several insurance brokers of Louisville have been arrested for swindling a number of insurance companies. Policies were taken out on certain lives where the persons named knew nothing about the matter. Other risks were placed on aged people, and the amount of the policies collected. The Indiana National Life Company is pushing the investigation, and has caused the arrest of a number of the brokers interested in the frauds.

The City Controller of Buffalo has recommended that the city insure its own buildings through a sinking fund to be created by appropriating annually a sum in the estimates except in cases where the risks are extra hazardous. In the last ten years the city has paid insurance companies over $65,000 in premiums and at 3 per cent. interest that sum would amount to over $73,000. The losses have been less than $4000, and the city would have made a net gain of nearly $69,000. The Controller's proposition is to place in the estimates $10,000 for fire insurance, $9000 to the credit of the insurance fund and the other $1000 for premiums on the convention hall, police and fire headquarters and zoo buildings.

According to J. F. Dryden, the amount of life insurance in force at the close of 1908 was $14,218,952,000, of which 82 per cent. was interstate business.

As a result the companies are subject to the conflicting statutory requirements of fifty-five States and Territories, including the District of Columbia and the various non-contiguous possessions of the United States. Each State and Territory legislating for itself the law "may be described as one of dissimilarity, uncertainty and interstate choas." The immense legislative activity throughout the United States is made evident by the fact that for the nine years ending with 1908 some 86,000 new laws and resolutions were enacted, of which 34,000 were laws of a public character, more or less affecting business enterprise, including insurance.

"In addition to the complex state of the public law which governs the business of insurance, the private, or unwritten, law is subject for its correct judicial interpretation to some 30,000 decisions, of which 12,000 represent cases which have been fought through to the highest tribunals in twenty years."

The New York Life Insurance Company has decided to issue optional policies, the same as was done prior to 1909. The practice was stopped at the beginning of last year to curtail the volume of paid-for insurance. Agents will be permitted to submit application of those who have been declined within twelve months by another company on condition that if rejected the applicant or agent pay the medical examination fee.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York closed its sixty-seventh year with an increased amount of insurance in force, $1,441,323,848, and with increased assets amounting to $560,122,367.61; but especially worthy of note is the fact that the company paid to policy-holders and their beneficiaries during the year the enormous sum of $54,909,648.86, or practically $55,000,000—a greater amount by some millions than was ever before paid in a single year by any company in the world. Even more surprising is the fact that of the vast sum thus paid to policy-holders, over $11,000,000 consisted of cash dividends on policies in force.

As a result of the establishment in

OVER TWENTY-EIGHT MILL DOLLARS IN DIVIDENDS Have Returned to the Stockholders of the C Companies Listed on the Stock Exch Francisco and Los Angeles, and DIVIDENDS OF ALMOST THRE TERS OF A MILLION DOLLARS Being Paid to the Fortunate Stockhol

The growth of the oil industry of this State has been so steady that comparatively few people have realized its importance or the tremendous profits to be derived from an investment in the shares of the companies.

$1000 invested in the common stock of the American Petroleum Company two years ago is paying $1600 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $10,000.

$1000 invested in Lucile stock a few years ago is returning $8000 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $73,326.

$1000 invested in the stock of the Fullerton Oil Company will this year earn $5000 and the shares can now be sold for $60,800.

$1000 invested in Pinal at 60 cents per share has paid in dividends as much as $2988 per year, and the shares could then have been sold for $44,800. That $1000 is now earning $1990 per year in dividends.

$1000 invested in Sterling at 30 cents per share is returning $3333 per year in dividends, and the shares can now be sold for $12,300.

$1000 invested in the stock of the Claremont, only a comparatively short time ago, is returning $1598 in dividends and the shares can now be sold for $13,653.

$1000 invested in Illinois Crude a few months ago at 25 cents per share is now paying at the rate of $960 per year in dividends and the shares can be sold for $2240.

$1000 invested in the shares of the Monte Cristo Oil Company has paid in dividends as much as $3600 per year and the shares can even now be sold for $15,000.

These are only a few illustrations that come readily to mind. There are many more that a little investigation will bring forth.

But the illustrations given show that only $1000 invested in these shares when the price was low is in most cases returning the investor a comfortable income, while in several cases the holdings themselves, if sold at the market, would realize an independent fortune.

Fortunes have been made and fortunes will continue to be made from investment in the shares of the California oil companies.

It must be borne in mind that most of the companies mentioned above made their records through a period when the price for crude oil was much lower than it is at present—in many cases it was only 25, 20 and even as low as 17 cents per barrel.

So that, because of the present price for the product and the advance in price that is surely coming, companies whose shares are now selling at higher figures than those quoted above are in relatively the same position to make great profits for the investors.

Taking it all in all, there has never been as promising a time for investments in oil shares as the present.

The industry is on a sound, stable business basis. The demand is increasing faster than the supply. Transportation facilities are assured and the price of crude oil is advancing.

If you are not already a shareholder in the oil companies of the State, then you are missing your opportunities for great profit and should invest at once.

If you are a shareholder, then we know you are awake to the possibilities and urge you to increase your holdings.

standstill, and hard times were pinching everybody. I became a supervisor, and, fortunately, was one of the public officers concerned in effecting a compromise. We discounted the interest and principal 25 per cent., and prosperity returned to Macoupin county. Still, the Courthouse, in the end, cost the taxpayers $2,250,000, but the relief from litigation, agitation and stagnation was well worth the money. I held no more offices in Illinois.

"My health again becoming bad, I sold my store, and with cash and credits amounting to about $10,000, I moved to North Dakota, taking up a quarter section of land, in the hope that living in the air would cure my ailing throat and lungs. After I had built a one-room shack of rough boards, and had plowed the land, I returned to Illinois for the winter. In the spring I took my family, a number of horses, and some machinery to Dakota. I bought and preëmpted more land, and settled down to live and die a farmer.

DEALS IN REAL ESTATE.

"In three year I was elected probate judge of Towner county, and moved to Cando, seven miles distant. The country was new, the settlers were young, and there were few orphans and widows, and no wills to file, or estates to settle. The fees of the probate judge, accordingly, were hardly worth mentioning. So I began to loan money and deal in real estate. The people were poor, the land was being broken to the plow and the prices of farm products so low that there was very little profit in agriculture. No money came in from the outside until the year 1897. Since then we have not had any difficulty in getting all the capital needed to develop the country."

RETURNS ARE SATISFACTORY.

"You own a great deal of land yourself," I said. "Does it pay?"

"In North Dakota, at least, if the land is good and one's renters are energetic men, the returns of agriculture ought to be considerably more than 10 per cent. annually. Some of my renters have been with me for sixteen years. Several of them have farms of their own, but they rent to others and remain with me. A mean landlord seldom makes any money. He pinches his tenants, and, without knowing it, pinches himself.

"In my country, it is the practice of the land owner to supply the seed and to pay half of the cost of thrashing. The crops are divided equally between him and the tenant. A renter, if he is worth anything at all, wants to make money. Such a man is the one to keep. The live stock belongs to him and he is supposed to feed it out of his share of the crops. It is well, therefore, to encourage him to increase the number of his cattle, pigs, and horses to give him every opportunity, in short, to become a capitalist. Farms managed in that way are very profitable investments."

"How do you explain the dear prices of food?"

"I might attribute the high cost of what one eats to the protective tariff," Senator Thompson answered, "which you could take seriously or as a joke, but I won't. As I see the matter, the demand for food is growing faster than the supply of food. Every city and large town in the country is drawing men away from the land. Farmers' sons are going into the mills and factories. The railroads, employing millions of hands, are draining the farms of their best labor.

GOING TO THE CITY.

"While the cities are booming the country, in a sense, is languishing. Every man who leaves a farm to become a brakeman, a street car conductor, or a clerk in a store, ceases to be a food producer and begins to be a food consumer. Multiply that man by 1,000,000, or by 5,000,000 of other men and then count up the pounds of food they eat, and it will be seen that the balance between production and consumption is not being maintained.

"Furthermore," Senator Thompson continued to say, "the cost of producing all of our staple farm products is increasing rapidly. Up to seven years ago we could hire men for $20 a month during the eight months of the farming season. We must now pay $35 or $40 a month for inferior labor. Indeed, good hands are so hard to get that many farmers of my acquaintance have rented their land and moved into neighboring villages. Most of the men whom we are compelled to employ come from the country east of us and are native Americans.

"BACK TO THE FARM."

"How can young men be induced to stay on the farms and help their fathers?" I inquired.

"Many suggestions have been made, but the only way to attach a young man to the soil is to educate him, and then to give him a chance to make a practical application of his knowledge. Fully 85 per cent. of the boys who graduate from our agricultural colleges take up farming as their permanent occupation. They go away from intellectual darkness, from dismal homes, where the long days are filled with drudgery, and where the methods have remained unchanged since the time of their great-grandfathers, into life, light, energy and happiness.

"They learn that agriculture is both a business and a science. They discover that the modern farmer is the most independent man on earth; that he has no superintendent to threaten him with the loss of his place and wages; that no boss can bully him; that customers come to him with the money in their hands; that he has instant sale for everything he produces, and that wheat, corn, beef and cotton never go out of fashion. So they return to the home farms and are competent and enthusiastic. They work with their heads and hands. They get tangible and immediate results, and the intellectual interest and exercise that is necessary if one is to take any joy in his work.

"Furthermore, the young college agriculturalist soon has the old men in the neighborhood running to him for advice and instruction. He finds that he has become a leader and a teacher, and in the winter he arranges for lectures on farming, fruit growing and the care of live stock. Perhaps he establishes a question box or edits a column in the village newspaper. He discusses road-making and dairying, and walks away with most of the premiums at the country fair. Thus his father is content to hunt the eggs, weed the garden, and chop the family wood; also to brag about his son whenever he goes to town. The antiquated farmer worked 365 days in the year and carried a lantern that he might work at night. Physically, he went to the limit; intellectually, he was either sodden or dead. I have heard a story of a man who carried a pile of stones from one side of a lot to the other month after month for good wages. Finally he went crazy. The college farmer is an enterprising and happy man. He answers the question you asked of me."

"What kind of a Democrat are you?" I inquired.

FORTUNATE FOR THE COUNTRY.

"Democrat as I am, confessing that I vote my ticket straight, yet I am bound to say that we would now be in the midst of a terrible business panic had Bryan been elected in 1908 and made serious attempt to put his radical views into operation. The Democratic party must reduce and modernize its issues. It cannot carry the country either with free trade or free silver. The people are too intelligent to vote for free trade. Nor will they support any such foolishness as the guaranteeing of national bank deposits, a proposition that opens wide the door to wild-cat banking."

"How did you get into the Senate?"

"By the appointment of Gov. John Burke, a Democrat. I shall never come back, of course. North Dakota is a Republican State. Taft's plurality was nearly 25,000. But in 1909 the Republicans got fighting among themselves, some standing pat on the tariff and some arguing for lower schedules. Consequently, Burke was elected. The lesson to the Republicans, it occurs to me, ought to be obvious. Then Martin N. Johnson, one of our Senators, died, and Gov. Burke appointed me to the vacancy. I have known Burke intimately for twenty years. He is a fine lawyer and a splendid man. And I am having the most interesting experience of my life."

Looking at the clock on the mantel of his office—he had been watching it closely all the morning—Senator Thompson said: "You must excuse me now. The Senate will meet in two minutes."

He caught up his overcoat, pulled his hat over his eyes, and vanished.

Tetrahedrite.

MOJAVE, Jan. 21.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The inclosed samples come from property in which I am interested, and located near Hamilton Mountain, ten miles west of Mojave. No. 1 occurs in large quantities; what is its name? No. 2 is from a ten-foot hole on the east side of Mount Hamilton. What is it, please? No. 3 may be tin ore, or least, that is what I name it. No. 4 puzzles me; what the the three yellow specks mixed with the yellow iron?

Thanking you in advance for some information in the "In the Earth," of which I have been a constant reader since I first saw it four years ago, and thanking you for past favors,

Yours truly, H. C. O.

ANSWER: Four samples of No. 1 is feldspar (orthoclase;) the fifth sample is andesyte. No. 2 is a low grade fireclay. No. 3 is not an ore of tin; it is a variety of tetrahedrite. "The name tetrahedrite alludes to the tetrahedral form of the crystals, in which it ordinarily occurs." There are many varieties of tetrahedrite. The sample you submit runs high in silver, with copper, antimony, zinc, iron and arsenic present. The mining boys in the hills call this variety of ore "gray copper." Some of the samples of this variety of tetrahedrite at the White Pine mine, Boulder county, Colorado, assay over 12,000 ounces of silver to the ton ore.

This is the first specimen of tetrahedrite observed by the writer from the section indicated.

Popularity of "Dixie."

Lincoln thought "Dixie" the best of American tunes and jokingly remarked that he regarded it as contraband of war. Its words are puerile. What is there inspiring about "simmons seed and sandy bottom?" But there is a swing and "go" to the southern song which enlivens a crowd, where the formal measures of "America," too infrequently played, or the saddening strains of "Maryland, My Maryland," fall of their effect in awakening enthusiasm. Much of the vogue of "Dixie" in New York must be attributed to the efforts of an active minority in popularizing the air. It is a legacy of the lost cause for which the North is growing to have an affection.—[New York World.

HURRAH FOR CALIFORNIA AND HER FARMS!

BY J .T. MORIARTY.

PART SIX—SUNDAY ..... 7890$......

On January 16, last month—there was published in The Times an article taken from the Orange Judd Farmer, coöperating with the American Agriculturist of New York, and the New England Homestead of Springfield, Mass., showing the increased value of agricultural products for the United States as a whole, and for each of our several States and Territories during the ten years ending with 1910.

The facts set forth in that article are said to be the result of painstaking investigation, and can, therefore, be relied on as approximately correct.

Although not there stated, in so many words, yet it appears from a careful reading of that article that among her sister States and Territories, California ranked fourteenth in the matter of the value of her farm products for 1900, while for the year 1910 she holds the eleventh place.

From the data contained in that article the writer of these lines has constructed the following table, showing the value of farm products for the years named, together with the percentage of increase:

Inc.

California	131,000,000	329,000,000	151
Texas	239,000,000	623,000,000	160

This table omits from consideration here all the States and Territories it does not name, for the reason that among all of them, whose farm products were valued at as much as $100,000,000, or more in 1900, California and Texas only show an increase as great as 150 per cent. or more for 1910.

On glancing over the table it will be seen the increase in California was 51 per cent. more than that of the United States as a whole, while Texas surpassed California by 9 per cent.

Aside from what is contained in the article above alluded to, it is but just to California to add that the lead of Texas over her to the extent of 9 per cent. is due to two very important facts:

(1.) Texas has 60 per cent. more territory than California.

(2.) In 1900 the population of Texas was 3,000,000, while that of California was only 1,485,000.

When, therefore, due allowance is made for this excess, both of territory and population, it is not too much to

All Records Broken

During January we broke all previous records in the number of new stockholders recorded. 315 new ones added to our list, making a grand total of 3816 who will share in our 56th quarterly cash dividend.

Amounting to $92,256.24

Which will be paid Tuesday, February 15, 1910. If you are one of these 3816 stockholders to share in this dividend, step in and get your check.

If you are not one of them—why not become one, and share with us these regular quarterly cash dividends?

What Does It Mean?

This monthly increase in the number of new stockholders? There is only one explanation: That the investors in this company are perfectly satisfied with their investment and have complete confidence in the honesty and integrity of the officers of this company; and in their ability to handle their money in a way that produces the best returns; and that these investors are advising their friends to join this, the

Largest Co-Operative Building Company in the World

And share in all of these big quarterly earnings.

30,000 shares of unissued stock now for sale at $3.05 a share. An advance of 5 cents a share will be made March 1 and April 1, 1910. A stock account can be started with $1.00; pay balance weekly and monthly. All stockholders share in the large profits on real estate, as well as in all other profits.

No commission paid to anyone for selling stock.

All stockholders absolutely protected against loss should they desire to sell their stock, by a guarantee fund held by the Globe Savings Bank.

hen it was definitely determined a committee investigation of this ious controversy could not be ided, the name of only one man suggested for the chairmanship such a body, and that man was ator Knute Nelson. With one ac-, members of the House and Sen- both pointed their finger at this of Norway as the one man in gress above all others who could g to the chairmanship a charac- absolutely above reproach, an in-itable energy, a knowledge of the , and a sense of fairness and jus- which would protect the innocent strike down the guilty without or favor.

NELSON'S PRAYER.

enator Nelson's high standard of riotism and regard for duty is well strated by a story he tells of him- when he was a private in the rth Wisconsin Regiment during the il War. The night before the bat- at Port Hudson, La., which was ght June 14, 1863, this regiment re-ved orders to take its position on firing line at daybreak the follow- day. It was realized that a des-ate conflict was in sight, and the n of the regiment did what brave n usually do when confronted by a spect of death. Many of them te letters home to wives and sweet-rts, while others drew up their last ls and testaments.

I looked about me," said Senator lson, "and found I was the only rwegian in the regiment. When I nd that out, I went to my tent, , dropping on my knees, prayed the nighty God that on the morrow I ght not disgrace my native land or land of my adoption."

hat Senator Nelson's prayers were wered is proved by the fact that ile in the forefront of the charge sustained an almost mortal wound, was captured and made a pris-er.

For many years, Senator Nelson's titude and sense of fairness has n recognized by his colleagues in Senate. Ten years ago, when Sen-r Matthew Stanley Quay of Penn-lvania was pressing for Statehood d other legislation for Arizona and w Mexico, certain legal questions me up which had to be decided by Senate Committee on the Judi-ry. The much revered and respect- George F. Hoar, the chairman of at committee, picked out Senator lson, then serving his first term in Senate, to ascertain the legislative tus of all laws relating to these two rritories. Mr. Nelson remained in ashington an entire summer work- in the library of the Supreme urt and of Congress. In the follow- session, he made a speech three four days long, which, despite the terness which characterized the bsequent fight over Senator Quay's islation, was never refuted in even minute detail by any debater on her side of that controversy. That port remains an authority in Con-ress, and it is a tribute and a monu-ent to the thoroughness of Senator years ago, when he heard that some Norwegians were being unfairly treated at Nome. As a member of the Senate Committee on Territories, the Senator has made several trips to Alaska, and George A. Brackett, a pioneer of Alaska, is authority for the statement that despite his long years of residence in the Territory, Senator Nelson knows all that he (Brackett) knows about Alaska, and a great deal more, besides.

INDEPENDENT SAMUEL M'CALL.

Perhaps, the most independent member of the Investigation Committee is Representative Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, the vice-chairman. Mr. McCall represents in Congress the district in which Harvard College is located. He is a Republican in politics, but so independent that it has been said of him that "he will vote against his party when it will even hurt himself."

Mr. McCall is a firm believer in independence for the Philippines, holding that the United States made the greatest mistake in its history when it took over those islands. He voted against the Spanish War, and made the most powerful speech heard in either House of Congress against the Hepburn Rate Bill.

On one occasion, when Mr. McCall was offering amendments to pending legislation, and having them beaten with regularity by a unanimous vote except his own, he mustered seventeen votes for one amendment.

"Your party seems to be growing, Sam," remarked a colleague, laughing.

Last spring, Mr. McCall refused the presidency of Dartmouth College on the ground that his life work lay in Congress. He is one of the few men in either House who reads Latin as a diversion. Despite his independence, he has recently written a defense of Cannonism, which is said by his colleagues to be faulty in that it applies the high McCall standard to all kinds of human nature which composes the House. For many years Mr. McCall was editor of the Boston Advertiser. During the tariff session he served on the Committee on Ways and Means with distinction.

COMMITTEEMAN FROM UTAH.

Senator George Sutherland, the committee member who hails from Utah, one of the States vitally interested in the whole conservation problem, is an inhabitant of what is known as "silent row" on the Republican side of the Senate. This appellation applied to the neighborhood in which Mr. Sutherland sits in the Senate grew out of the fact that those Senators who sit in the row rarely ever take the floor in debate. This characteristic is not wholly true of Mr. Sutherland, however, who, in the last Congress, bore out with credit to himself during the debate of the revision of the penal code, his excellent reputation as a lawyer.

Mr. Sutherland is a non-Mormon, in contrast to his colleague, Senator Reed Smoot, who is an apostle of the Mormon church. Nevertheless, Mr. Sutherland is on excellent terms with the leaders of all religious creeds in Utah, and because of the fact that he is able to get along so serenely with the leaders of the Mormon church, he has had applied to him the somewhat opprobious epithet of "Jack-Mormon."

During the trial of Senator Smoot, Mr. Sutherland was one of his colleague's most ardent advocates on the floor of the Senate, and during the passage of the tariff bill last summer, he made a noteworthy contribution to the debate over the constitutionality of an income tax. Off the Senate floor, he is known as one of the best of the "good fellows" in the Senate, and in a small gathering of friends can draw on an almost inexgarded as a source of strength to the investigating committee by reason of this fact.

FLINT OF CALIFORNIA.

In the other western Senator on the committee, Frank P. Flint of California, there is a man who has the courage of his convictions. He is serving his first and only term in the Senate. Six years ago he was a District Attorney in California, seeking a reappointment to office, which was denied him by Thomas Bard, then Senator from that State. When he finally became convinced that he was not to be reappointed, Mr. Flint announced himself as a candidate for Senator. Subsequently, he handily defeated Mr. Bard, succeeding him at Washington. Being a man of moderate means, Mr. Flint recently made up his mind that being a Senator was too costly a luxury, and announced that he would retire to private life next year.

Senator Flint is a family man. He has carried this laudable hobby to the extreme of incorporating his private property so that each member of his family may be a director in the family affairs, become thoroughly acquainted with the business, and know at all times just where the family stands as a business proposition. He does not care for society, and prefers the family fireside to anything on earth.

As an investigator, Mr. Flint believes in going over the ground under actual controversy. He is one of the best-informed men in Congress on the Panama Canal, and whenever he gets two months' spare time he goes to Panama alone, puts on his old clothes, and wanders up and down the canal, talking to the laborers, examining machinery and getting in touch with conditions at first hand. When Gifford Pinchot goes to California to look over the forest reserves, Senator Flint usually accompanies him on his long tramps through the woods. As a result of these trips, he possessed a technical knowledge of forestry better than any of his colleagues on the committee.

KENTUCK'S INVESTIGATORS.

A political feud in Kentucky is believed to be largely responsible for the fact that that State has two representatives on the investigating committee, Senator Thomas H. Payntor, Representative Ollie M. James. Senator Paynter is already a candidate to succeed himself in 1913, and Representative James is expected to announce himself as a candidate at any time. The seeming haste of each after a seat which will not be vacant until three years hence is due to the fact that under the Kentucky primary laws the contest is due to take place next year. It is generally understood in Washington that Mr. Paynter wished to get on the investigating committee because of the prestige it is bound to give all members of it. He was not thought of particularly by his Democratic colleagues until Senator Joseph W. Bailey of Texas urged his election, which was accomplished without opposition.

Senator Paynter is the political protegé of former Gov. J. C. W. Beckham of Kentucky. In the Senatorial fight for the seat of J. C. S. Blackburn, Gov. Beckham's friends strongly put him forth as a candidate. Although defeating Blackburn, Gov. Beckham had incurred so many political enemies that he was unable to turn his victory to his own account, and, as a result, turned to Mr. Paynter, who was then Chief Justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals. In Mr. Paynter's behalf, he was able to amalgamate the Democratic factions, with the result that Mr. Paynter came to the Senate.

A fair characterization of the Senatorial career of Mr. Paynter would be that it has been colorless. Nevertheless, his ability as a lawyer is not disputed, and this record is borne out by his eight years of service as a judge. During this service, the court heard the Goebel contested election case, and Representative James appeared in the capacity of counsel.

BIG OLLIE.

Representative James is the largest man in the House. He is nearly six feet and a half in height, weighs nearly 300 pounds, and is without an ounce of fat on him. He once went to a darky bootblack stand in Kentucky to have his shoes shined, and indicated his desire by a motion of his hands.

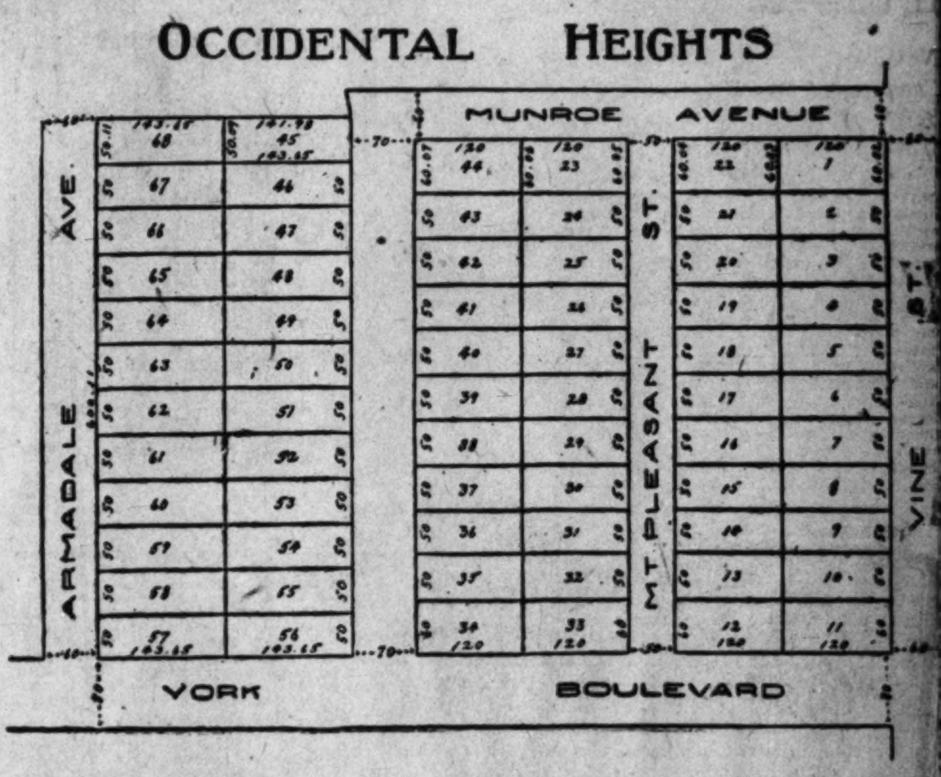
—Is First in the Investor's Eye—

There Are Reasons—Just a Few of Them:



OCCIDENTAL HEIGHTS includes sixty-four lots which immediately adjoin the Occidental College location on the south side of the New York street car line. Every lot lies high and sightly and is of generous size, the uniform width of fifty feet, providing for down to the minute designs in homes. The lots range in length from 120 to 150 feet. The entire tract will be graded, curbs will be placed, sidewalks put in, and every street will be guttered and oiled. Trees will be planted in all parkways. These lots are located on the highest portion now subdivided, providing a view of extraordinary beauty and from almost one-half of the tract one can see the placid Pacific Ocean and Catalina Island. Each lot will carry building restrictions of not less than $2000, and those who intend to build at once will be carried at a very low rate of interest. Just think of it! It is in the French army that the disastrous effects of too much alcohol or absinthe drinking are felt first. Most of the recruits indulge more or less in the poisonous drink, so that the very foundation of the army is undermined and weakened. According to the statement made by a famous officer, the garrisons are filled with men physically unfit, the hospitals are encumbered with sick soldiers, the police stations and prisons are filled with insubordinate men, the undoubted cause being drink. Drink, he says, is the arch enemy to discipline, and without discipline there is no army.

Statistics show the appalling decrease of the population in the provinces of Brittany, Normandy, Picardy, etc., where the race has been, heretofore, so strong and vigorous. In Normandy alone there has been a loss in the last twenty-five years of 200,000 inhabitants. In some districts the rapid decline of the race has been 50 or 60 per cent. of the population. When one realizes that the French as a people are not emigrating to other countries, one must look for the cause for this terrible falling off. Children born of alcoholic parents die by the hundreds before leaving the cradle, and the military authorities claim that alcohol costs France an army corps each year, and the French army contains only twenty corps.

THE HOUR.

France has a unique custom—that is the "apéritif hour." What the French people call "apéritif" is in the American parlance an appetizer. Each gaged in to indulge in their habitual apéritif, which is in the great majority of cases a glass of absinthe. Other countries in Europe depend on their afternoon tea or coffee, but the Frenchman in general absolutely demands his absinthe. This is a daily routine that is followed out almost without a break, and the custom is no respecter of classes. There is simply a difference in price, quality, and place of taking it. The cafés at this hour present a scene of great activity. Café life in Paris is outdoor life, and the chill of winter is no barrier in this outdoor drinking. An awning protects the patron from the elements, while a huge cylinder stove is supposed to give the necessary warmth. On the boulevards are cafés where the bourgeoisie and the men of independent means congregate at the hour when they take their apéritif. The price of absinthe here is 10 or 12 cents a glass, and if there is a virtue in absinthe it exists in the fact that at these better cafés the drink is at least unadulterated.

An exact imitation of this daily scene occurs in the poorer quarters. Instead of the well-dressed man of the period one sees the white or blue overalls of the workman and hands and face still covered with the grime and dirt of the day's labor. All have stopped work for an hour or half an hour, as the case may be, and they, too, are talking, gesticulating and arguing over their glass of absinthe. Their absinthe is only 3 or 4 cents a glass and it is a drink that contains the most nauseous ingredients, a mixture that first excites the brain and ends by turning men into worse than beasts.

The alcoholic habit is a constant drain on the slender purse of the meagerly-paid workman and the dire results are far-reaching. The wife becomes a martyr to the husband's habits, and the children degenerate. They are born with a tendency to epileptic fits, scrofula and idiocy, thereby filling the whole country with undesirable citizens. The papers are constantly filled with the cold-blooded crimes that are nightly taking place in Paris alone. These degenerate offspring of the imbibers of absinthe are called "apaches." Usually they are young fellows from 17 to 30 years old—small in stature, slight and far from athletic-looking.

Their manner of attack is always slip quietly up to a person from behind and, without a word, plunge a knife in his back. Sometimes a life has been sacrificed for the sake of a few pence, and again and again the court trials have brought out the fact that the apache has killed for no other reason than a desire to shed blood. These degenerates are not of one sex. The women apaches are as savage and unmerciful toward their victims as the men. All of them carry weapons, generally a long knife, and when aroused to a frenzy they are the most barbarous creatures that a civilized country ever harbored.

The great doctor, Prof. Hayen, says it is useless to struggle against that dread disease, tuberculosis, unless one gets under control the abuse of alcohol. Alcoholic drinks, he states emphatically, are responsible for a large percentage of tubercuar disease.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

The National League against alcohol, of which M. Voisin is the president, has been instrumental in bringing about a gradual reform, slow as all colossal movements are bound to be, but still it is making sure headway in its big undertaking. The league does not advocate teetotalism. It only suggests using wine, beer and cider in moderation, but for spirits and apéritifs, it enforces total abstinence. This organization has opened temperance cafés in different sections of Paris and also in many of the other cities in France. At the apéritif hour, tea, coffee or hot wine is served. Reading-rooms have also been established in different quarters and anti-alcoholic clubrooms where the daily papers, magazines and books are provided—and in connection with these libraries there are gymnasiums for the use of every one. The aim of these reading-rooms is to entice the workingman to spend his apéritif hour at these places. On each visit of a workman an illustrated card is given him. No matter how often the subject differs, it always shows the laborer who abstains from alcohol as happy, healthy and prosperous, while underneath is the object lesson, usually a poverty-stricken workman, a hideous spectacle—the victim of drink. As an inducement for the people to patronize these clubrooms, prizes are offered for the return of a certain number of these illustrated cards. New clothing, household utensils and even furniture are given in exchange for them.

IN THE SCHOOLS.

Then great work is being done in the schools. It is by the present generation of children, who are instructed in the abuses of alcohol and the terrible consequences of over-indulgence, that the future stamping out of the green plague is expected to be accomplished. These children have entered into the movement with all the energy and enthusiasm of youth.

France as a nation uses more absinthe than all the rest of the world put together. Statistics show that last year 5,000,000 gallons were consumed by the French people alone. Several times a heavy tax on the liquor has been proposed, thus putting it beyond the reach of the poorer classes, but as yet no serious steps have been taken to make it a law.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Write Letters by Wireless.

Prof. Thomas W. Bibb of Liberty, Mo., is reported to have invented and tested a machine that will transmit writing and pen drawings by wireless. It will be of great value, its designer says, in sending signatures and drawings for newspapers as well as for many other purposes.

While a student at William Jewell College a few years ago, Prof. Bibb constructed a wireless writing telegraph machine. The new machine was given its first test in actual working size when exact writing was reproduced at receiving stations great distances away. The machine is a cylinder with a slow rotary motion which travels its length at the rate of one-fiftieth of an inch in each complete revolution. This cylinder is covered with a tin wax-coated plate, on which is the writing or drawing. As the cylinder revolves a needle point comes into contact with the tin where the wax is removed and at the same instant a sharp electrical wave is sent out. At the receiving station is a like machine moving in the same way at the same rate of speed. When the electrical wave reaches this machine it causes the electric arm to drop down on the cylinder and make a mark as the paper moves over the cylinder. Though an electrical wave is not continuous it in reality causing the arm to make dots, but in the copies reproduced the dots are so small that they appear as one continuous line.

A New Tinning Machine.

A machine for tinning copper articles has been perfected by Patrick H. Dunn of Rome, N. Y., after several years' work. Up to the present time, however, no public exhibition of the machine has been allowed. By its aid copper cooking utensils, boilers, tea and coffee pots, etc., have the surface coated with tin, the tin being put on one side of the copper while it is in sheet form. The work heretofore has been done by hand, which is very expensive, as it takes two men and a boy ten hours to tin 4000 square feet. In the same length of time the Dunn machine, tended by three men, will perfectly tin 28,000 square feet of copper.

Entrance of Tuberculosis.

In his address before the International Tuberculosis Congress at The Hague, Dr. Lawrence Flick, head of the Phipps Institute at Philadelphia, demonstrated that the tubercle bacillus has a restricted habitat and is a delicate organism which may easily be destroyed. He takes issue with the view long held by scientists that the lungs are the principal source of tuberculosis inoculation. The fact that the bacillus is a solid and that infection is found in every part of the body reached by the circulatory system convinces him that entry is gained through the alimentary canal and thence through the right heart into the circulation.

A Turpentine Substitute.

German chemists have perfected a system of manufacturing turpentine substitutes by the distillation of heavy petroleum from Borneo at a cost of about one-third that of ordinary American turpentine. The new article is reported by Dr. Eibner of the Royal Technical High Schtool in Munich to correspond sufficiently with the requirements of the modern substitute for turpentine oil in regard to boiling point, specific weight and flash. It secures the solubility of resin and products of resin, nearly coming up to American turpentine oil, so that the differences to manufacturers of varnishes are scarcely noticeable.

The sample examined, as compared with American turpentine oil, provides the same solubility for varnish extracts produced from copals, amber and resin, and therefore is susceptible of replacing American turpentine oil

Corinto, the principal western port, has the advantage of the Pacific Coast lines of steamships, American (what few there are,) British, Chilean and German. Bluefields, on the eastern coast, has regular communication with the United States by means of the vessels of New Orleans and Mobile steamship companies. In November, 1902, the central division of Nicaragua's railway system was practically completed. There is now a continuous line from Corinto to Granada, and several branch lines built or projected. A large concession was given an American syndicate for the construction of cart roads, connecting Matagalpa, New Segovia, and other points in the interior.

FOREIGN CROPS IN 1909.

According to the Crop Reporter for January (just issued) Russia's wheat acreage has been rapidly increasing for many years. In 1895 the area was 42,000,000 acres, while the 1909 crop was raised on 65,000,000 acres, a gain of 23,000,000 acres. Rye only rose from 70,000,000 to 72,000,000 acres. Rye is the chief bread grain of the country, while wheat is the "money crop," about one-fourth of the whole being exported. The 1909 wheat crop was 783,000,000 bushels, against 413,000,000 bushels in 1895, a gain of 370,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 more than the United States' gain of 270,000,000 bushels—from 467,000,000 to 737,000,000 bushels. Only twice has Russia's wheat production surpassed that of the United States—first in 1904, when the American crop was a partial failure.

Returns of an official character of the so-called world's wheat crop, exclusive of the mid-season crops of India and the Southern Hemisphere, show a net gain of 287,000,000 bushels, or nearly 18 per cent. over the yield of some dozen countries in 1908. All but three of the countries—Hungary, Bosnia-Herzogovina and Germany—report increases.

Frost somewhat injured the crops just ready for harvest in Argentina; the promise of Australian crops is barely maintained; but in India the prospects for wheat are rather improved, and there are fair prospects for wheat in Great Britain.

Spain's 1909 wheat crop is officially estimated at 146,000,000 bushels, an increase of 30,000,000 over 1908, and of 35,000,000 over 1907.

The quality of Roumania's wheat crop in 1909 is described by the Ministry of Agriculture of that country as "the best during the last ten years." Of the total harvest, one-half is classed as "excellent" in quality.

Bulgaria has a corn crop of 23,692,000 bushels, showing a gain of about 3,000,000 bushels over the one of last year.

Sweden's crops in 1909 and 1908 were:

"Yep, an' he am my Jumbo," responded another.

When the job of shining was over, Representative Jones bawled out in stentorian tones:

"Hey, you, that is no way to shine a man's shoes."

The darkies dropped their instruments of commerce and dashed off down the street in opposite directions. Mr. James was not even able to catch them to pay for the shine.

For many years Mr. James has been recognized as the right-hand man of William Jennings Bryan in Congress. It was Mr. James who organized the bolt of the Kentucky delegation from its instructions in the Chicago convention of 1896, and Kentucky was the first State to go to Bryan after the famous "cross of gold and crown of thorns" speech. That piece of political astuteness made James a marked man in politics in Kentucky, although at that time he was only 24 years of age.

The only objection made to Mr. James's selection on the investigating committee was that he was a rank partisan. No man in either House of Congress will fight as hard for his side in a political controversy as Mr. James, but it can truthfully be said of him that he is one of the most timid men in the House where his own progress in political office is concerned. This has been characteristic of him since he entered politics as a page in the Kentucky Senate, and it is said that if he had permitted the use of his name in the Legislature two years ago, the Democrats would have rallied to him and elected him Senator instead of William O. Bradley, the present Republican incumbent.

Like all Kentuckians, Mr. James is a lover of horse racing. Incidentally, he has great capacity for work and his services will undoubtedly be valuable all through the investigation.

THE REPUBLICAN OFFSET FOR GIANT JAMES.

Representative Edwin Denby of Detroit is the Republican offset in size for Ollie James. Mr. Denby stands six feet three inches in height and weighs over 300 pounds. President Roosevelt dubbed him "Big Denby" to distinguish him from his brother Charles, who was then serving as chief clerk at the State Department. Charles Denby is nearly a foot shorter than his brother and weighs about half as much.

Members of the House of Representatives have long regarded Mr. Denby as one of the coming members of that body. When the House undertook to discipline President Roosevelt for his famous message in defense of the secret service a year ago—a message in which the President hauled the members of Congress over the coals in a somewhat unceremonious fashion—Mr. Denby, who was recognized as a personal friend of the President, was placed upon the committee. When the committee unanimously reported in favor of expunging the message from the records of the House, Mr. Denby delivered the most forcible speech made upon the subject in the lower body. Some days later, he had occasion to go to the White House. President Roosevelt promptly singled him out in a room full of callers and walking up to him with a smile on his face, said:

"Big Denby, Big Denby, Big Denby—and I suppose you had to do it."

A good-natured laugh all around closed the incident of the "spanking committee" so far as Mr. Denby was concerned.

THE LONE HOUSE INSURGENT.

Representative Edmond H. Madison of Kansas is the one House insurgent on the investigating committee. Mr. Madison was elected to Congress while a judge on the bench, and is recognized as not only one of the best lawyers in the House, but as one of the strongest characters in Congress. His devotion to duty in the face of personal risk is well illustrated by a story he tells of himself while holding the office of County Attorney of Ford county, Kan., in 1888.

At that time, Dodge City, which is the home of Mr. Madison, was known as one of the haunts of "bad men" of the West. Mr. Madison was elected County Attorney immediately on his admission to the bar. Being a young man of high ideals, he felt a keen sense of duty as a sort of regulator of the morals of his community, which idea he began to put into practical effect without much tact or diplomacy. So whenever cowboys from the neighboring ranches "shot up" the town, Mr. Madison felt it incumbent upon him to prosecute.

"The result was," said Mr. Madison, "that I rarely ever walked down the street without getting licked. It grew to be a habit with the defendants in my case to call me over to the curbstone, smash my face, and then kick me all over the street. Notwithstanding the drawbacks to my official position, I continued to enforce the law to the best of my abilities and with some degree of success."

James M. Graham of Illinois, who was chosen a member of the committee by the House Democrats after the Republican majority had refused to receive Henry C. Rainey of the same State, is serving his first term in Congress. His reputation as a lawyer preceded him to Washington. It is said that there is hardly a law case of note tried in Central Illinois that Mr. Graham does not appear either on one side or the other as an attorney. He is a speaker of far more than ordinary ability, and as one of the Republican colleagues said recently, "Graham has no fuss or feathers in his makeup."

HOW OLMSTED MADE $30,000.

An experienced investigator on the committee is Representative Marlin E. Olmsted, who is being prominently mentioned as the successor to Speaker Cannon. Mr. Olmsted was the chief inquisitor of the House investigating committee which looked into the submarine boat scandal of the last Congress. His legal astuteness on that occasion settled that controversy to the great satisfaction of his colleagues in the House, and what threatened to become an annual scandal was effectively squelched.

AND NEW YORK.

The remaining members of the committee are Senators Root of New York and Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida.

As in the case of Senator Paynter, the selection of Senator Fletcher by the Democrats of the Senate to represent them on the investigating committee, came about somewhat unexpectedly. It was the original intention of the Democrats to place upon the committee Senator Charles J. Hughes of Colorado, who is known the country over as one of the best lawyers on mining laws in the United States. When it was learned, however, that Mr. Hughes, in some speeches made in Colorado before coming to the Senate, had expressed hostility to some features of the administration of the bureau of forestry, a protest was voiced which resulted in his withdraawl and the selection of Mr. Fletcher. The Florida Senator is now serving his first term.

Before coming to the Senate, Mr. Fletcher had established himself as one of the leaders of the Florida bar, and had also served in the State Legislature, as Mayor of Jacksonville, and as chairman of the Board of Public Instruction of the county in which Jacksonville is located. He has also been chairman of the Democratic State Ex- the demand of the Florida pineapple raisers for a high tariff duty on their product.

As for Senator Root his public career is too well known to call for comment here. But it is not generall known that he was the only man in the Roosevelt Cabinet who insisted in running his executive department to suit himself. When he found out one day that President Roosevelt had sent some cablegrams on State Department matters without his knowledge he called at the White House and told the President he would either run his department or quit. From that time henceforth, Mr. Root ran the State Department alone.

On the first of May each year Senator Root and his wife return to the former's parental roof, now their own, in Clinton, N. Y., and lay out an old-fashioned garden preparatory to a summer's residence therein.

Pointed Questions.

A promising youth recently surprised his father by asking:

"Father, do you like mother?"

"Why, yes; of course."

"And she likes you?"

"Of course she does."

"Did she ever say so?"

"Many a time, my son."

"Did she marry you because she loved you?"

"Certainly she did."

WHERE THE AX SHOULD FALL.

We have never been disposed to make wholesale, sweeping denunciations against any association or body of citizens in the gross. This has been our policy no matter how wrong the fundamental principles of an organization might be. This policy is accepted by just-minded people because experience teaches that every association of men is made up of all sorts of individuals with divergent views on everything, except perhaps one or two fundamental principles, and that even in this respect the individual disposition and character of the man count for a great deal more than the creed, whether political, religious or sociological.

We have always recognized that the association of working people in unions had a basis of constitutional right and in the minds of the great body of those in these unions a basis of good policy. It would be vain for us or any other influence, however powerful, to attempt the prohibition of these organizations, for the reason that it is a right guaranteed under the Constitution. It would not be fair to hold that there is no good purpose for which such organizations might be formed, nor do reasonable people usually deny that certain good results have come from such organizations where they have been conducted by fair-minded and wise leaders.

Here we reach the bone of contention. All the infamies and wrongs perpetrated by these unions have been done at the instigation of so-called leaders utterly unfit to occupy the places to which they have been improperly and unwisely elevated. We know from our own positive knowledge that the average workingman in many of these associations, often on his own account and acting privately, with conservative attention to his own danger, acknowledges the evil acts of the leaders he himself has sometimes voted for and the injury to his own cause as well as to the industrial world in general, which has arisen from these illegal, unjust and wrong acts of the leaders in question.

We have a notable case in point under our own eyes in our own city. A contractor who in his various enterprises employs at times as many as 1000 men, secured from the county a contract to put up buildings on the grounds of the County Hospital for the use of that public institution. The same contractor was engaged in the erection of the new Hall of Records. In the case of the buildings for the County Hospital the inadequate accommodations there created a loud and pressing call that the work be done with all possible dispatch. As to the Hall of Records, the excavations for the foundations there endangered the County Courthouse, with its costly furniture and fittings, amounting in value as things are today, to more than $1,000,000.

The contractor, under this pressure from two different sources, undertook to hurry on the work as fast as possible, and worked his men more than the regulation number of hours set as a day's work by the various labor unions of this section. He paid the men not only proportional wages for their extra hours but was willing even to pay the regular bonus exacted by the unions. He never stopped for a moment to question the righteousness of these exactions, but in order to get the work done as soon as might be waived all objections that might be raised. The men were glad to work overtime.

In the one place the safeguarding of property worth $1,000,000 belonging to all the people in which every taxpayer in the county had an interest was at stake. In the other it was a case of common humanity. The indigent sick at the County Hospital were in momentary suffering from the inadequate accommodations. Right-minded men would have been willing to toil for no remuneration, to have spent their nights as well as days in an effort to meet the demands of the case and bring relief to these poor suffering people.

Neither the interests of the public nor the sufferings of the poor appealed to the unreasonable, tyrannical leaders of the unions. Attempt after attempt, persecution after persecution, was brought into action in order to stop the pressing forward of these two necessary jobs. We do not believe that this action on the part of the unreasonable leaders of the local unions met with general commendation of the members. We are persuaded that if the men could speak as their own hearts and good sense would suggest, the vote to let the work go on in both instances would have been in the affirmative by an exceedingly large majority.

Here is the source of almost all the trouble that arises between employers and employees. The unjust, unfair exactions all come from the leaders and are often condemned in private by the mass of the men they so improperly lead. We understand that in their meetings it is made exceedingly disagreeable and is often dangerous for any workingman to permit his good sense or the humanity in his heart to speak. The bosses hold the whip so continually over the backs of their dupes and so many are afraid to speak and so many ready to howl down those who do speak that it is generally an affair of one-man power. The leader is too often a bully, nearly always a tyrant or one that would be a tyrant.

Such unfair, inhuman action as this attempted in the prohibition of the contractor to protect property worth so much money in which all the people are interested and to bring relief to the suffering poor at the County Hospital, if not eradicated from the policy and actions of labor unions, will put them all out of commission sooner or later. The American people are too intelligent, too humane and just, to permit such unnecessary, uncalled-for and unfair practices to prevail. There is no use in making any appeal whatever to the leaders. They are too senseless, too obdurate, too lacking in humanity as well as good sense, to make any appeal to them possibly effective. But there must be in the rank and file of those in the unions a sense of fairness, a humane disposition, to which appeal may be made effectively.

Already in many parts of the country the cry for the open shop has been turned into a cry for a non-union shop. The unjust and illegal attitude of the unions tried to close the opportunities for making a living against all who were not of their organizations. The industrial world rose up with a demand for fair play in an open shop where all might work, whether union or non-union. The continued unfairness and cruelty of the leaders of the unions have now turned this policy into a demand that the doors be actually closed against all men who belong to the unions.

IMPORTANT.

TREBLE DAMAGES FOR BOYCOTTING.

HEAVY VERDICT AGAINST FEDERATION OF LABOR.

Suits May Be Brought Under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law for Damages Sustained by Maintaining a Boycott Against Products of Firm That Objects to Union Dictation.

The suit of D. E. Loewe & Co., hat manufacturers of Danbury, Ct., against the United Hatters' Union of North America, is likely to have a more far-reaching effect than the famous suit of the Buck Stove Company, which resulted in the sentence of Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison to imprisonment for placing the stove company on the "unfair" list in an attempt to destroy its business. The suit of the Loewe Company was recently tried in the United States District Court at Hartford, Ct., and after eleven weeks' time devoted to the introduction of evidence the justice directed to jury to bring in a verdict of guilty, and to decide the amount of the damage sustained by the plaintiff. The jury assessed damages at $74,000, and as the suit was brought under the Sherman anti-trust law triple damages can be recovered, so that the hatters' union may have to pay $222,000 damages and more than $10,000 court costs and counsel fees. The suit was the first of its kind tried under the law to hold individual members of a union responsible for the acts of the organization, and make them pay triple damages for injuries suffered by an employer as the result of a boycott.

The suit as first started by the firm was to determine whether the union could be prosecuted under the Sherman anti-trust law. The firm lost in the lower courts and carried it to the Supreme Court, which decided that the firm had a right to sue for threefold damages, and the suit just closed is the result of the Supreme Court decision. Foreseeing the result of the suit the American Federation of Labor some time since petitioned Congress to amend the Sherman anti-trust law to exempt labor unions from its provisions.

The history of the case, as brought out by the evidence, shows that it was on March 1, 1901, that Mr. Loewe first received a visit from representatives of the United Hatters of North America. This was over a year before the strike. President John A. Moffitt, Martin Lawlor, John Phillips, James P. Maher and Charles J. Barrett at that time demanded that Loewe should unionize his factory. They told him that if he did so he would have the right to use the union label in his hats, which would increase his business. Mr. Moffitt said:

"We have made up our minds that your factory must be unionized. We hope that we can accomplish this in a peaceful way; if not we shall have to do so by our usual means."

"Do you mean," said Mr. Loewe, "that you will use force?"

"Yes, your business interests will force you to use the union label," was the answer.

Mr. Loewe had a lockout in 1894 which ruined his hat business, and he preferred to be independent. He sent a letter to the men who called upon him in which he said that he thought that it was for the best interest of Danbury that he keep his factory an open shop, and he said that if attacked he would use all lawful means to protect his business interests.

On the morning of July 25 the union men in the factory left work. On the next day all but a handful of the non-union men left work. The men told Mr. Loewe of the meetings which were held and of the addresses which Mr. Maher made. He told the men that Roelofs' factory had been unionized and that now it was Loewe's turn. He said: "If Loewe tries to get non-union men it will do no good. Men could go on the road and ruin his business. If you do not do as we say we will treat you as we did the men in the Roelofs factory who refused to strike. We took a lead pencil and crossed off their names. If you wish to make a living do as we say."

Mr. Loewe asked the men if they were dissatisfied and they said that they were not dissatisfied. He told them not to do anything against the law.

On July 30, Mr. Maher had an interview with Mr. Loewe. A few days later President Moffitt had an interview with him.

"Why do you disturb a peaceful factory," said Mr. Loewe. "The men are satisfied. If you find the pay roll of any factory as good as ours I won't have a word to say."

"We want your factory," said President Moffitt. "Parmlee of Newark is your chief competitor, and you will be on an equality with him. Your conditions are all right and it won't be much for you to make the change. We have never lost a case, and we are not going to lose this. It cost us $23,000 to get Roelofs, and we will spend that to get you."

"It will cost more than that to get me," said Mr. Loewe. "You don't know these people," continued Loewe. "It takes a bigger man than you to prove any grievance among the men. I know my duty to myself and Danbury. It is your duty by these men, Mr. Moffitt, to let them go to work. If I have to suffer business death, I prefer to die my own way."

The way in which the local unions pushed the boycott was best shown by the depositions which were read of testimony taken in California. The two walking delegates of the United Hatters of North America were William C. Hennelly and Daniel P. Kelley. Their sole business was to push the boycotts of the United Hatters, and they worked very effectively, especially against the business of Triest & Co., the distributors of Loewe hats, with places of business in San Francisco and Portland, Or.

The most powerful weapon of attack was a circular which they had the San Francisco Labor Council issue July 3, 1903. It was as follows:

"At a special meeting of the San Francisco Labor Council held on the above date, the hat jobbing concerns known as Triest & Co., No. 116 Sansome street, San Francisco, was declared unfair for persistently patronizing the unfair hat manufacturing concern of D. E. Loewe & Co., Danbury, Ct., where the union hatters have been on strike for union conditions since August 20, 1902. Triest & Co. will be retained on the unfair list as long as they handle the product of this unfair hat manufacturing concern.

"Union men do not usually patronize retail stores who buy from unfair jobbing houses or manufacturers. Under these conditions, all friends of organized labor and those desiring the patronage of organized workers will not buy goods from Triest & Co., No. 116 Sansome street, San Francisco."

A later circular gave an "unfair list of the American Federation of Labor," on which was the name of Loewe & Co. It said: "The declaration of unfairness regarding the firms mentioned is fully sanctioned and will be supported to the fullest degree by the San Francisco Labor Council." These circulars were sent broadcast among retail hat dealers on the Pacific Coast.

In a similar manner, the fight was carried on in Richmond, Chicago, Oregon, Washington and wherever Loewe had customers, thus blocking the sale of Loewe hats almost entirely, until an injunction was secured by Mr. Loewe, which enabled him to resume the sale of his hats.

Romance of the California Fig.

SUCCESSFUL GROWTH OF THE SMYRNA VARIETY WAS ACCOMPLISHED AFTER YEARS OF FAILURE.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

SO much has been said and written of late concerning the depredations of insect pests that people are likely to conclude that all bugs are bad. Therefore, lest we forget that there are bugs and bugs, it may be well to call attention to the blastophaga grossorum. If this particular bug were built in proportion to its name, it would doubtless be able to blow its own horn so loudly that all would hear; but it is a habit of scientists to bestow the longest names upon the smallest creatures. The blastophaga grossorum is the size of a very small fly, and in common language it is known as the fig wasp. A small foundation upon which to build a great industry, surely; but substantial enough to be worth $500,000 to the fig growers and packers of California last year. Potentially there are "millions in it;" for no one can doubt that the history of prune, raisin and citrus-fruit production will be paralleled, and that before many years have passed California and other States having favorable climatic conditions will supply the American demand for dried figs, and export a large surplus to foreign countries.

It is estimated that there are now about 4000 acres of commercial fig orchards in the State of California—and none elsewhere in the United States. Last year the California orchards produced 8,000,000 pounds of dried figs; and three times that amount were imported from Asia Minor, Algeria and the south of Europe. The imported product is inferior to that grown in California, and, besides, is packed with the supreme disregard of cleanliness and hygienic precautions for which the peoples of the Mediterranean countries are noted. Ships in which large cargoes of dried figs are brought over are often polluted with disgusting worms that find their way from the packages. No importations ought to be necessary, for the fig is less exacting in its climatic requirements than the orange and lemon, is remarkably free from diseases, and is never attacked by insect pests. Throughout the great thermal belt of California there is a vast area of land that might advantageously be devoted to fig growing. It will also flourish in the warmer portions of Arizona, Southern New Mexico, Texas and Florida, and probably in others of the Gulf States. Its production will yield higher average profits than can be derived from ordinary farming and fruit growing; and where favorable climatic conditions prevail, as in this State, crop failures are unknown.

The fig is native to Western Asia, where it has always been one of the principal articles of food. With the vine, the fig tree has ever been the accepted symbol of peace and prosperity; and the man who "sat under his own vine and fig tree" was accounted favored of God in the days of the scriptural patriarchs. Charlemagne is said to have introduced the fig into Western Europe, and the Spaniards brought it with them to America. In the United States certain varieties are grown in the Gulf States and as far north as the Carolinas; but it is only in California that fig growing has, as yet, attained the status of a commercially important industry. Figs were introduced into this State by the Franciscan fathers, who built the missions. The Mission fig, as the variety they planted is called, is extensively planted for table use in its fresh state; but it is of little value for drying, and no variety is adapted to shipping fresh.

As the Smyrna fig, grown in the historic valley of the Maeander River, in Asia Minor, was conceded to be the best dried fig known to the world's markets, it was thought that the problem of producing satisfactory dried figs could be easily and quickly solved by importing cuttings of the Smyrna fig trees. This was done in 1880, by a public-spirited citizen of San Francisco, assisted by the United States Consul at Smyrna. The cuttings were widely distributed throughout the State, and grew readily, soon reaching sufficient size to produce fruit. However, to the disappointment of every one, the fruit failed to reach maturity, falling off when only partly grown. This discouraging experience was repeated year after year, until the conclusion was reached that the wily Smyrnans had caused cuttings of a worthless variety to be sent. No one blamed the Smyrnans particularly for desiring to retain their monopoly of dried fig production and for trying to forestall California competition; but many found fault with the San Francisco importer for failing to use greater care. Many cut down their fig trees, and others allowed them to grow as ornamental trees, or to serve as a warning against too readily taking up with new fads. Then, in 1886, Mr. Roeding, a nurseryman of Fresno, sent an employé to Smyrna, to make a close-at-hand study of fig growing, and to secure a new supply of cuttings concerning which doubt would be impossible.

Mr. Roeding's agent established one fact of the very highest importance, confirming an announcement made at about the same time by Dr. Gustav Eisen of the California Academy of Science. This fact was that the agency of the blastophaga grossorum, or fig wasp, was essential to pollenize the fig blossoms and bring the fig to maturity.

It is a common jest in California to tell tourists and tenderfeet that the finder of a fig blossom will be married within a year. Careful search of the trees fails to reveal anything that looks in the least like a flower; and many Californians say (and doubtless believe) that the fig tree bears no blossoms. Nothing can be seen but little button-like knobs, readily recognized as embryo figs. The fruit itself, in fact, is nothing but a flower receptacle, the blossoms being in the interior of the leathery skin. The blossoms of the Smyrna fig are pistillate, or female, containing no stamens. In order that they may be fertilized, pollen must be introduced through the small opening at the top. This is the office performed by the fig wasp. Its breeding-place is the interior of the Capri (or wild) fig, which bears both staminate and pistillate blossoms. Growing to maturity in the interior of the Capri fig, the female insect seeks the light of day for a brief period, and then crawls into a hiding-place similar to the one from which it emerged, in order to lay its eggs for the production of a new generation. For untold centuries it has been the custom of the orientals to take the matured Capri figs and tie them among the branches of trees of the commercial variety. The wasp, emerging from the Capri fig covered with pollen from its stamens, crawls into the first inviting opening it finds, and by contact fertilizes the blossoms of the Smyrna figs. Without this insect fertilization, the Smyrna figs never reach maturity, but fall to the ground when only partly grown.

In 1890, George C. Roeding opened a number of matured Capri figs, shook off the pollen, and transferred it by means of a wooden toothpick into the orifices of the Smyrna figs growing upon the trees, to see what could be accomplished by artificial fertilization. Every fig thus treated matured perfectly, while all others fell off the trees. Similar experiments were carried on for a number of years, proving conclusively that all that was necessary to make a complete success in California of Smyrna fig production was cross-fertilization of the blossoms. To accomplish this on a commercial basis by hand or in any other way than by the agency of the fig wasp was manifestly impossible.

The first figs containing the insects were imported from Smyrna in 1892, and from time to time further importations were made. These failed so often to gain a footing in their new environment that the only wonder is that experimenters did not become discouraged and give up entirely. At last the interest of the Department of Agriculture was aroused, and in 1899 Walter T. Swingle of the Division of Botany and Pathology, consignments of Capri figs, each fig wrapped separately in tinfoil, and all packed in cotton in a wooden case. Mr. Roeding received these at his nurseries at Fresno, but had no hope of better results than had attended his numerous other trials. His expectation of another failure met with an agreeable disappointment. The insects imported in the interior of the figs lived in their new environment, propagated their kind, overwintered in the Capri figs, and when these were transferred to the Smyrna fig trees fertilized the blossoms perfectly. In 1900, a crop of fifteen tons of real Smyrna figs was gathered and cured; and every year since then the industry has expanded until last year's production of dried figs in California exceeded 4000 tons.

As caprification is essential to the production of commercial figs, the grower must plant Capri trees for the propagation of the insect, as well as Smyrna trees for the sake of the fruit. However, a very few Capri trees will suffice for a large commercial orchard. The Capri trees bear three or four crops annually, one crop maturing just as its successor forms on the trees, so that when natural conditions impel the insect to forsake its old home, it always finds a new retreat waiting for it. One crop remains on the trees all winter, in which the insect hibernates until the coming of spring brings the crop to maturity and provides a successor into which it goes for the continuance of its species. When the largest crop of the Capri figs are ripe, the Smyrna figs are just far enough developed to require fertilization. The growers knock the Capri figs off the trees with light poles, and take them to the Smyrna fig trees, where they place them in small wire mesh baskets that have been previously hung in the trees for their reception. This method does not distribute the figs containing the insects throughout the trees, so in order to make sure that the figs upon the farther branches and top limbs will be properly pollenized, Capri figs are strung upon raffia and suspended from the extremities of the limbs and thrown far up in the trees. This is repeated in a few days to make sure that figs late in developing will be properly taken care of.

The figs cling to the trees with great tenacity until perfectly ripe and beginning to shrivel. This facilitates curing them, as they are, in fact, partly cured on the trees. They are then shaken to the ground, gathered up in boxes, and hauled to the drying ground. There they are dipped in salt water heated to the boiling point, for the removal of any grit or other foreign substance, softening the skins and hastening the final drying. Next they are placed on trays, and these are put out in the hot sun, where they dry in two or three days' time.

Then the large meaty figs that are not sufficiently dried are sorted out for further drying, and the others are placed in a sweatingroom. They remain here ten days, being frequently turned, and becoming soft and pliable. They are then washed thoroughly by hand in cold water, and again dried in the sun.

Next comes the grading. They are thrown into a grader operated by power. This consists of a series of galvanized iron trays, the first perforated with ¾-inch holes, the second with one-inch, and the third with 1¼-inch. Those that drop through the first tray are called three-crown, the next four-crown, and the last five-crown, while the ones too large to pass through any of the perforations are six-crown. The three-crown are not packed, but are sold in bulk to bakers or confectioners. The others are placed in galvanized iron trays with wire mesh bottoms and thoroughly steamed, for the double purpose of destroying germs and insect life, and of softening the fruit so it can be easily handled. It is then packed in paper cartons or wooden boxes, and is ready for shipment to any part of the country, being a subsidiary food product as clean and wholesome as anything prepared by human hands can well be.

COVERT ACTION IN THE SHIRT-WAIST MAKERS' STRIKE.

Trouble Was Fomented by the Sub-contractors Who Have Been More to Blame Than the Employers. Union Shop Was Then Demanded by the Federation.

There has been a good deal of hysteria in connection with the strike of shirt-waist workers in New York. Some wealthy society women have taken the part of the strikers, as well as certain college girls who have been carried away by misplaced sympathy due to insufficient investigation of the situation. How the strike originated was long since forgotten. It has been continued by the refusal of the strikers to return to work except under union shop conditions. Early in the controversy the strike was seized upon by the officials of the American Federation of Labor as an excuse for promoting the closed shop, and this notwithstanding the fact that less than 5 per cent. of the strikers were members of the federation.

The violence, disorder and contempt of the law that has characterized the strike caused the "Survey" to ask Dr.

DIEGO, Feb. 12.—Following ek's flurry in the realty market, is estimated that over half a dollars' worth of property hands, this week has not been brisk. Negotiations, however, ll pending involving transfers the end will amount to as much heavy week previous.

biggest transfer recorded since is that of 50x100 feet on the de of sixth street, between C which was sold by C. Fred g, John D. Osborn and others ghton McMurtrie for $50,000. rchaser is said to represent a te which within a year intends t a modern business block. The present is occupied by a two- rame building, which originally residence. The property is in siness district.

It is announced that two modern suburban residences to cost $10,000 each will be erected on the tract.

The Pythian Building Association will complete final details for the construction of a $75,000 Knights of Pythias hall, at a meeting of the directors to be held next Tuesday night. It is proposed to call for bids within two weeks. The site is the southwest corner of Third and E streets.

The finishing touches to the U. S. Grant Hotel building are being made and it is announced that the big hostelry will be ready for the opening within sixty days. Contractors have been delayed by the slowness of railroads to deliver steel, ornamental iron and tile for the floor of the main lobby. The tiling, which was due January 1, arrived a few days ago. The guest chambers are ready for furniture, while decorators are finishing up in the dining-room and the main work yet to be done is completion of the lobby.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

LARGE INFLUX OF VISITORS.

SOUTH PASADENA, Feb. 11.—A better spirit now prevails among realty brokers because of the large influx of winter visitors. Inquiries for home properties have increased tenfold, and it is stated that dealers cannot fill the demand for houses to rent. The following recent sales have been reported: J. W. Heath from J. Scott Way, a five-acre tract on Rose avenue, near Huntington Drive, for $1200 per acre; Miss Derby to E. H. Vannier, five acres in the Sunny Slope tract for $2685.

Mrs. J. Ingraham to B. F. Webster, five acres in the same tract for $2620; F. Lawrence Stimson to Susie D. Mill, a lot 50x158 feet, on Monterey Road, improved with a handsome six-room bungalow, consideration $5500; Charles West to A. Robert Ellmore, lot 50x150 feet on the northwest corner of Lyndon and Fremont avenue, $2500. Mr. Ellmore will improve in the near future with a fine residence.

E. E. Sweet and S. Johnson to M. S. Gillispie of Ashland, Or., lot 50x130 feet on the southeast corner of Stratford and Oxley, improved with a seven-room bungalow, $5500; B. F. Mull to M. S. Gillispie, two lots on Oxley Court, near Oxley street, each 30x120 feet, improved with bungalows, for $3300 and $2730, respectively.

The year is starting out well in the way of building permits. Inspector Saylor's report for January shows a total of $42,515 for the month against $38,345 for the corresponding month last year, an increase of $4170.

LOTS IN DEMAND.

GLENDALE REALTY IS ALIVE.

GLENDALE, Feb. 11.—Real estate continues brisk at this place. Many calls are being received for small acreage, improved and unimproved; outside building lots and lots on which to erect business houses. While the call for Glendale city lots is not decreasing, it is not growing a great deal. Following are a few sales reported this week:

H. Pampaian of Los Angeles, the three-quarter-acre home place of J. Daly, in Casa Verdugo, for $3000; A. B. Babcock, a business lot on Fourth street for $1400; the one-and-one-half-acre Corbaley place and five-room house on Sixth street, east of Adams, by Judge Austin, for $3900; Dr. M. M. Merrill, one acre and a five-room house on Sinclair avenue, for $2000.

John A. Cole and Ezra F. Parker, a lot in the Glendale Valley View tract from Effie M. Close for $500; Miss Margaret A. Condon, a lot on Louis street from John A. Cole, $650; John Lowrey, a lot in the Borthick tract, corner Damascus Court, improved with a six-room house, from M. Lawson, $3500; Ezra F. Parker, lot in the Glendale Valley View tract to John Moody for $500; Virginia W. Van Scoyoc, property on Valley View Drive to George A. Shupp of Long Beach, $3000.

HOMES IN DEMAND.

MARKET FOR FINISHED HOUSES.

MONROVIA, Feb. 12.—The quest of new homes has been the feature of the week's reality activities. Recent arrivals are seeking locations, modern and ready for occupancy. Heretofore the majority of intending residents have preferred to plan and build their own homes. In explanation of this change in mental attitude, supply dealers point out that houses built during the depression of material prices in 1908 and 1909 can be sold at a profit for considerably less than they could be built for now. Sales for the week, aggregating $19,000, follow:

S. H. Reynolds to Mrs. George T. Baird, seven-room bungalow and 100-foot frontage on East Orange avenue, two blocks from business center, $7000. Mrs. A. C. Tuffts to Dr. Frank Neal Robinson, bungalow and fifty-foot frontage on East Orange avenue by 150 feet on California, $4500.

M. Jones of Los Angeles to the Board of Education, three lots on South Ivy avenue, 150x200 feet, $3000. O. C. Barthe to M. Adminston, cottage and one-acre tract, on North J. I. C. avenue, $3000. H. J. Evans, for the Monrovia Building and Investment Company to M. Adminston, two lots on Melrose avenue, north of White Oak, $1200.

BUY VALUABLE GROVES.

INVESTORS LIKE SECTION.

POMONA, Feb. 12.—Sales made by J. A. Fitch follow: The 13½-acre orange grove in the LaVerne district, owned by H. Haskell, was sold on Monday by J. A. Fitch to W. B. Bender of Claremont, for $26,000. It is finely located on the Foothill boulevard. One-half interest in the pumping plant on the premises is included in the sale.

Through the same agency the ten-acre orange grove of Elmer Teague, San Dimas, was sold to U. M. Thomas, a prominent business man of Minnesota, for $25,000. Mr. Thomas has been residing in Los Angeles for about two years, and has looked over Southern California extensively.

During the past few days the following other deals have been closed by Mr. Fitch: P. H. Hottel to N. Metzger of Claremont, an eight-acre orange grove at Lordsburg, $5200; Frankie L. Legg to Andres Nielson, six-room bungalow on West Holt avenue, near Huntington boulevard, $3100; W. H. Adams, a lot in the Casa Grande tract.

CHOICE GROVES SOLD.

NO QUARTER FOR "SHARKS."

SAN DIMAS, Feb. 12.—A number of very choice orange groves have been sold here the last few days, among which may be mentioned: C. F. Bailey to G. S. Plummer and F. F. Yates, ten-acre grove, $19,000; C. A. Rusco, ten-acre grove and home, to J. P. Campbell, of Pomona, $25,000; R. C. Callander, twenty-acre grove in La Verne to D. C. Crookshank, of Pomona, $34,500; J. Stoker, fifteen-acre grove to D. C. Crookshank, $22,500; Mrs. Darius White, twelve-acre grove and home to J. S. Jewell, $28,000; Elmer E. Teague, twelve-acre grove to N. M. Thomas of Pomona, $25,000; J. E. Cowan, twelve-acre grove in La Verne to J. S. Jewell, $28,000; H. Haskell, thirteen-acre grove in La Verne to W. D. Bender, of Claremont, $26,000.

The highest-priced groves are in every instance owned by orchardists who have resided here for years. A movement is on foot to take some action toward putting a stop to unprincipled real estate sharks from Los Angeles, unfamiliar with local conditions, who impose upon the unwary tenderfoot. These men get the agency for worthless groves in the "Hardpan" district of La Verne, and have sold twenty-year-old orchards of a stunted growth, as five-year-old groves. They have also sold choice "orange land" at San Dimas at $200 per acre. This latter land was on the mountains three miles from here, and "all on edge."

PERMIT FIGURES HIGH.

TOWN PROPERTY IN DEMAND.

ONTARIO, Feb. 12.—City Clerk R. O. Brackenridge has just given out the figures for the building permits issued during the month of January. The total amounts to $29,134. Most important of them are: Brick building, D. H. Akey, $17,500; frame cottage, Oscar Coin, $1400; Dan Stein garage, $1200; cottage, East B street, G. C. Allcock, $1000; bungalow, Laurel and Park, P. A. Robb, $2000; bungalow, West D street, M. L. Janes, $1300; cottage, West B street, M. Barbarka, $2000; cottage, Stoner's addition, E. M. Bacon, $1100.

A great deal of town property has changed hands here. The renewed activity is attributed partly to the general knowledge that work on the electric railway from Los Angeles is so soon to be started. A great deal of advertising for this city has resulted from the bond issue of the Ontario and San Antonio Heights Railway Company, and there is constant inquiry regarding property here. The Western Realty Company, through J. B. Harvey, its local manager, reports the following sales: Two lots on West G street, Charles H. Seccombe to A. A. Palmer, $2000; two and one-half acres of oranges at J street and Euclid avenue, A. Whitson to W. C. Dunkle, $5200; house and lot on East C street, A. A. Palmer to Charles H. Seccombe, $2850; house and three lots on East Grove street, N. A. Stephens to Mrs. Vaughn, $1600; a house and lot, corner Vine avenue and C street, Mrs. S. F. Glass to Mrs. Mary LeDuc Chapin, $3750.

Harry Kelly, manager of the Ontario Realty Company, reports the following sales: Twenty acres of grapes, R. N. Smith to Dr. C. L. Mullins, $2275; six acres on South Euclid avenue, R. N. EXCELLENT DEMAND.

BIG DEAL IN APPLE LAND.

BEAUMONT, Feb. 12.—The real estate situation in Beaumont has been characterized during the past week by excellent demand for both foothill fruit lands as well as city property. The largest transaction was the sale to Oscar Crowell of Riverside of forty acres of apple land north of the Mellen ranch and adjoining the twenty-acre Poole and Williams orchard, recently acquired by Mr. Crowell, for over $500 an acre. The Beaumont Land and Water Company was the grantor in the deal.

The latter firm also sold to William S. Biggs of Banning, ten acres in the Apple Valley tract, for $1275. Mr. Biggs bought the tract for an apple orchard. This makes over $2800 worth of Beaumont property purchased by Mr. Biggs in a year. G. C. Boyd has purchased from Mrs. Emma Phillips of Los Angeles, for $200, a business lot 26x120 feet, adjoining the Beaumont Land Office on Fifth street. The buyer has begun the erection of a business building.

Extensive improvements on the Mellen ranch are being made by the new owner, C. H. Clemmer. In addition to a new ranch house and farm buildings, he is preparing to extend the orchard. Mr. Clemmer has purchased a house and lot in Beaumont.

A large force of men and teams are engaged in completing the laying of water pipe and building of roads in the La Mesa Miravilla subdivision. Over 18,000 feet of steel pipe, varying from four to six inches in diameter, will be required to complete the work.

GOOD VALUES SHOWN.

High Frontage Price on Hill—Large Building for South Grand Avenue.

The largest sale of the past week was the transfer through Charles G. Andrews, vice-president of the Wright & Callender Company, of the property at Nos. 941 to 947 South Hill street for $112,500. The buyer was Mrs. Susanna Van Nuys; the sellers the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company. The frontage price was $1500 a front foot, the site being 75x150 feet. At this figure the improvements, consisting of a three-story flat building and a two-story house, are counted in, although the buyer is said to consider the lot alone worth the sum paid for the property.

Another notable deal of the week was the sale by H. Kivel to a local investor through W. B. Merwin & Co. and R. A. Rowan & Co., of a lot 60x160 feet on the west side of Grand avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets. The consideration was $51,500 cash. The buyer plans a six-story building on the site.

Another deal of importance was the transfer by the Alta Investment Company through O. E. Farish of Mines & Farish and R. J. Widney, of the Alta Vista apartments at the northwest corner of Third street and Bunker Hill avenue. The consideration in this instance was in the neighborhood of $75,000 for a site 60x145 feet, improved with a frame structure fronting four stories on Bunker Hill and six stories on Hope.

Of the deals in residence property the most noteworthy was the transfer by Mrs. Gem E. M. Wilson to J. C. Eberhart, a manufacturer of South Bend, Ind., of the Mission house at the southwest corner of West Adams street and Magnolia avenue at a consideration of $30,000. The site is 125x from $100 to $60.

This mask is made to fit each face individually in every detail, is heavily gold plated, is furnished with electrical battery and all attachments and is absolutely guaranteed to remove wrinkles, crowsfeet, flabbiness, sallowness, freckles, pimples, blackheads, red veins, large pores, moth patches and even skin diseases. (U. S. Patent.) The use of this mask has rejuvenated the face of the famous young man of 70, Mr. Sanford Bennett of San Francisco. (See article in Physical Culture Magazine, Nov. 1909.)

This mask does all its work while you are sleeping, it weighs only about 5 oz. Its use does not incapacitate its wearer for business or pleasure and the only change there is to your skin in the morning is a gradually increasing rejuvenation, a smoothing out of old wrinkles, crowsfeet and lines, a bleaching effect and a delicate tinting, indicating the returning bloom of youth. It is wonderful to notice the change from an old face into a young one. And once restored all that has to be done is to wear the mask once or twice a week. Any one interested in the mask may find out all about them by calling at our office, where we will be glad to give all information relating to it.

HOW TO KILL SUPERFLUOUS HAIR.
An absolutely SURE process of killing superfluous hair without the use of the electric needle, which so often stimulates the surrounding hair roots. A razor will kill the roots as quickly as any depilatory—as they merely remove the hair even with the skin, leaving the roots as vigorous as ever to send forth a new growth.

It requires only patience and perseverance on your part to permanently KILL every tiny particle of down as well as coarse hairs. This method is simple, cheap, harmless and SURE. After a time the hair roots slowly thicken and darken and they will soon fall out and NEVER return. Remember this remedy is not an IMMEDIATE REMOVER as it acts on the ROOTS and NOT on the surface of the hairs.

I can't send the liquids through the mail and expressage is expensive. You can get the ingredients at any drug store for less than 50 cents. I send formula and complete directions for 50 cents.

Send self addressed stamped envelope and coin, (not stamps.)

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE.
205½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.
EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.

A resident of Los Angeles 26 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE—calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE. In fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Lillian Russell, Calve, Sembrich, Julia Marlowe, H. E. Huntington, Admiral Evans, Jefferson, Anna Held, Annie Besant, Joaquin Miller, Baron Rothschild, Fritzi Scheff, Capt. Hobson, M. Paulhan, Fritz Kreisler, Aphie James, Charles B. Hanford, Wm. H. Crane, etc. These are a few of the many NOTED PUBLIC persons—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—all positively read by Prof. Althouse, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers; therefore beware of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, clairvoyants, etc.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE, in September, 1908, PUBLICLY predicted—by the PLANETS—the election of TAFT and the defeat of BRYAN.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States.

LOUIS JAMES says: "I wish to say that your reading was entirely SATISFACTORY."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most SATISFACTORY. Your knowledge and skill is REMARKABLE."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted, when reading my hand and Horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

MME. BALDWIN writes: "The Horoscope you wrote for me is absolutely CORRECT. My friend, MME. NORDICA, the singer, first showed me her Horoscope, and recommended your work to me. Inclosed find check for four more Horoscopes—all friends of mine."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances. HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Daily and evening. Sunday, 10 to 2.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 322 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

WANTED—

ACREAGE FOR SUBDIVISION.

IF YOU HAVE ACREAGE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, WHICH YOU KNOW TO BE RIPE FOR SUBDIVISION, FINISH READING THE ARTICLE.

FORTUNES ARE BEING MADE BY COMPANIES AND INDIVIDUALS BUYING LARGE TRACTS OF LAND, PUTTING IN THE NECESSARY IMPROVEMENTS AND SELLING IN SMALL PARCELS TO HOMESEEKERS.

THE PRICE A DEVELOPING COMPANY WOULD PAY FOR YOUR LAND WOULD BE ABOUT HALF THE AMOUNT IT WOULD ULTIMATELY BE SOLD FOR.

I INTEND TO ENTER INTO AN AGREEMENT WITH SOME LAND OWNER ON A BASIS THAT WILL PERMIT HIM TO PARTICIPATE IN THE RETAIL PRICE OF HIS LAND, RATHER THAN TAKING THE WHOLESALE FIGURE.

MY PROPOSITION IS AS FOLLOWS—YOU TO PUT IN YOUR LAND AT YOUR TODAY'S SELLING PRICE. I TO FURNISH THE MONEY FOR ALL IMPROVEMENTS, SUCH AS DEVELOPING WATER, LAYING PIPE LINES, ETC. ON THE BASIS OF WHAT EACH INVESTMENT REPRESENTS IN CASH. WE WOULD BECOME PARTNERS AND BEAR IN THE PROFITS ACCORDINGLY.

A CAREFUL INVESTIGATION OF THE MANY PROPERTIES THAT I HAVE SOLD IN THE PAST 5 YEARS, SHOW THAT THEY HAVE NOT ONLY BEEN HUGE SUCCESSES, BUT THAT I KNOW THE COUNTRY LAND BUSINESS THOROUGHLY. HAVE SOLD AT TOP PRICES TO SATISFY BUYERS. ALTHOUGH THE CITY IS FULL OF BROKERS, THE COMPANIES MAKING A BIG SUCCESS OF ACREAGE PROPERTY ARE NOT ACCEPTING PROPERTY ON A COMMISSION BASIS; THEY ARE INTERESTED IN THE PROPERTY.

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS I HAVE DEVOTED MY UNDIVIDED ATTENTION TO THE SELLING OF CUDAHY RANCH LANDS. THE RESULTS OF THIS SELLING CAMPAIGN ARE KNOWN TO ALL WHO HAVE WATCHED THE MARKET. THIS LAND HAS NOW BEEN WITHDRAWN FROM SALE AND I AM READY TO UNDERTAKE A SIMILAR PROPOSITION.

WANTED—

ACREAGE FOR SUBDIVISION.

IF YOU HAVE ACREAGE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, WHICH YOU KNOW TO BE RIPE FOR SUBDIVISION, FINISH READING THE ARTICLE.

FORTUNES ARE BEING MADE BY COMPANIES AND INDIVIDUALS BUYING LARGE TRACTS OF LAND, PUTTING IN THE NECESSARY IMPROVEMENTS AND SELLING IN SMALL PARCELS TO HOMESEEKERS.

THE PRICE A DEVELOPING COMPANY WOULD PAY FOR YOUR LAND WOULD BE ABOUT HALF THE AMOUNT IT WOULD ULTIMATELY BE SOLD FOR.

I INTEND TO ENTER INTO AN AGREEMENT WITH SOME LAND OWNER ON A BASIS THAT WILL PERMIT HIM TO PARTICIPIATE IN THE RETAIL PRICE OF HIS LAND, RATHER THAN TAKING THE WHOLESALE FIGURE.

MY PROPOSITION IS AS FOLLOWS—YOU TO PUT IN YOUR LAND AT YOUR TODAY'S SELLING PRICE. I TO FURNISH THE MONEY FOR ALL IMPROVEMENTS, SUCH AS DEVELOPING WATER, LAYING PIPE LINES, ETC. ON THE BASIS OF WHAT EACH INVESTMENT REPRESENTS IN CASH. WE WOULD BECOME PARTNERS AND BEAR IN THE PROFITS ACCORDINGLY.

A CAREFUL INVESTIGATION OF THE MANY PROPERTIES THAT I HAVE SOLD IN THE PAST 5 YEARS, SHOW THAT THEY HAVE NOT ONLY BEEN HUGE SUCCESSES, BUT THAT I KNOW THE COUNTRY LAND BUSINESS THOROUGHLY. HAVE SOLD AT TOP PRICES TO SATISFY BUYERS. ALTHOUGH THE CITY IS FULL OF BROKERS, THE COMPANIES MAKING A BIG SUCCESS OF ACREAGE PROPERTY ARE NOT ACCEPTING PROPERTY ON A COMMISSION BASIS; THEY ARE INTERESTED IN THE PROPERTY.

FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS I HAVE DEVOTED MY UNDIVIDED ATTENTION TO THE SELLING OF CUDAHY RANCH LANDS. THE RESULTS OF THIS SELLING CAMPAIGN ARE KNOWN TO ALL WHO HAVE WATCHED THE MARKET. THIS LAND HAS NOW BEEN WITHDRAWN FROM SALE AND I AM READY TO UNDERTAKE A SIMILAR PROPOSITION.

PACIFIC AUTOMOBILE COMPANY—
1150-1156 SO. MAIN.
WM. GRUNDY, President.
J. R. GRUNDY, Vice-President.
C. FRED GRUNDY, Mgr.

The largest and finest stock of automobiles ever gathered under one roof in California. This stock is as carefully chosen as the stock of a diamond merchant. Every car a gem of its kind. We do not take cars on consignment; cars that someone else has worn out, but we buy and sell for cash automobiles of standard makes only, cars that are mechanically perfect, cars that we can guarantee and our guarantee is not one of the flimsy kind. This company has a cash capital greater than all other companies combined engaged in the buying and selling of used automobiles in California. We have our purchasing agents in many large cities and we buy bargains only.

Come and investigate our methods. We can save you from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. on a practically new car.

proposed Class D league for rn California that has been ned in the local papers several may be permitted by the Coast e, and it may not. A decision is point apparently depends on wing, who appears to be the ad- agent of the National Commis- n this State.

some months the managers of ur teams in this end of the and probably in the other end, chafed under the thought that have in a way developed good layers that have been taken by arious clubs in organized base- without any money being paid young amateurs. There have a dozen instances of this every and now the managers seek to round this by organizing them- into a Class D league, with ope of securing the $300 draft that is paid for all Class D s.

course, this scheme is really im- le, for Pasadena, Long Beach, Ana and Redondo could not by manner of means fulfill the popu- requirement for a Class D e, could not pay any Class D es and could not be considered ny kind of an organization un- he National Commission. How- nothing is impossible, for, since owers that be have agreed to ate Johnny Kling after he had ed his reserve on the Chicago and should be suspended for years, almost anything is pos- under the in-and-out action of ommission.

nager Henry Berry of the Los les team has been officially in- ed of the application of the four clubs for a franchise and Ewing inquired by wire if Berry would njured by the league, or if the e itself would be injured. As a er of fact, the Los Angeles team d not suffer any more than any Coast League team if any suf- g is to be endured.

BASKETBALL GAMES.

ps Sting the Spiders and the partans Win from the Thistles in League Contests.

e fifth series of the Y.M.C.A. bas- all league was played off last t in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. The rtans beat the Thistles by the score 1 to 14 in the first game of the s and the Wasps easily defeated Spiders in the last game by the e of 42 to 22.

the first game the Spartans took lead at the start and kept it ughout the game. Not a moment they in danger of being tied. This due to good team work especially Eikels and Story, forwards. The half ended with the score of 22 0. This might have been bigger if were not for the fine guarding of ok and Caster.

he playing in the second half was fastest of the evening. The Thistles ced up and started after their op- ents with blood in their eyes, but it impossible to overcome the lead t the Spartans had made.

he game between the Wasps and Spiders was a poor exhibition of ketball. The Spiders had only two their regular men. The half ended h the Wasps 33, Spiders 1. Over- fidence lost the second half to the sps. The Spiders played much bet- in this half and made up some of ir bad playing of the first half.

team will be picked from the yers making the best showing. The .C.A. will be represented by this m in all outside contests and will bably try for the State champion- p. The men so far that have made best showing are Eikels, Golding, plin, Bosdick, Story, Astchon and ds. The team will be picked some e in March.

he next series of games will be yed next Saturday night at the M.C.A. The Spartans will play the iders and the Thistles will meet the asps.

'Varsity Blows Up.

ERKELEY, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive spatch.] The Santa Clara College seball nine took the California arsity into camp this afternoon by score of 11 to 2. The 'Varsity blew at critical moments and as a result e majority of Santa Clara's runs re made on California's fifteen er- rs. The Catholics made eight mis- ays but touched the opposing pitcher r the same number of hits. Agnew lowed but three safeties, one of hich was secured by Salisbury of Los ngeles, who played in the 'Varsity ht field. The batteries were: Santa ara, Agnew and Jacobs; California, ith, Wyllie and Stoner.

PUGS COME BACK.

Conley and Austin Return to Town, the Former to Prepare for His Attell Bout.

Frankie Conley and his manager, Bob Laga, returned last night from Portland, where Conley beat Danny Webster. The boys declare the trip was a very enjoyable one in every way, but the weather was not the best. Conley intends to go out to Jack Doyle's Vernon camp today and start in on light work for his coming battle with Monte Attell on February 22.

Jimmy Austin, the little paperweight, also returned yesterday from New Orleans, where he fought Greaves on Saturday night of last week. In all probability he will meet the boy again there in about five weeks, for the next three weeks are dated up. Johnny Coulon and Kendrick are to fight next Saturday night; Grover Hayes and Frankie White on February 26, and Jack Redmond and Ferguson on March 5. Jimmy says he had less than two days to train and only fought in order not to disappoint the fight bugs, who were expecting the show.

Long Contest.

The Compton High School second baseball team was defeated by the Huntington Park High School second team 4 to 3 in thirteen innings, yesterday afternoon at Huntington Park. Batteries: Huntington Park—Church and Hubbard; Compton—Madeau and and Hartsnap.

Girls in the Swim.

The girls at the Y.W.C.A. have organized a swimming class under the direction of Miss Ella Stevers, physical director. The first lesson was given last night at Bimini, about forty girls appearing in the pool. The girls are showing great interest in the scheme.

More for Hoppe.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 12.—Willie Hoppe and Ora Morningstar have been matched to play a 1500-point championship billiard game at 18.2 balk line for a purse of $2500. The match is to be played here early in March.

Machine Wrecked.

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) Feb. 12.—After making a successful flight of three miles, which was witnessed by several spectators today, Frank Johnson, Jr., of Los Angeles, crashed into a fence with his Curtiss biplane, badly wrecking the machine. Johnson was not hurt. He said that his engine stopped suddenly when he was about twenty-five feet from the ground.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Merely a Sign That We Remember What Happened When We Were on Earth Before.

C. Jinarajadasa of Colombo, Ceylon, gave a new reason for falling in love at first sight in his lecture last night on "How We Remember Our Past Lives." He spoke in the Walker Theater building. He is traveling under the auspices of the Theosophical Society, and will remain in this city several weeks. In the course of his lecture he said:

"Most of our likes and dislikes show the remembrance of our past lives. When we like people at first sight, or dislike them, we show that we remember the past, when we were brought in contact with them in other lives, pleasantly or unpleasantly.

"The best example of this past memory is in the genius; when a man is a genius in science like Newton, or in art like Beethoven, or in generalship like Napoleon, and shows the quality when young, it is proof, I claim, that he has done the same thing over and over again in past lives.

"Each of us is reborn exactly according to what is due him. What we did in the past, good and bad, influences the character with which we are born, and the family and circumstances where we appear.

"Everyone is steadily evolving, but people are at different levels. They evolve by lives here on earth. That is why we see men of all types, high and low, savage or cultured."

SOMBRERO LED TO ARREST.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 12.—A broad-brimmed sombrero seen at the robbery of the Missouri Pacific near Eureka, Mo., by a reporter, was the clew followed by officers for hundreds of miles, and resulted in the arrest of four men here yesterday. George Ebeling said the hat was worn by himself and that he had borrowed it from William Lowe, one of the other men under arrest. The hat contained the name of a St. Louis manufacturer. From the manufacturer it was traced to a Texas firm, where it was involved in a robbery. It was reshipped to the manufacturer, thence sold to a dealer in Kansas. Detectives trailed it to Texas again and learned that it had recently gone into the possession of Lowe. The latter's arrest

STORM RAGES ALL OVER EAST.

SNOWSTORM ON LOWER RIVER WRECKS MISSISSIPPI STEAMER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GREENVILLE (Miss.) Feb. 12.—A snowstorm on the lower reaches of the Mississippi River was today the cause of a steamship accident. The Belle of the Bends struck upon a bar near Fitler's Landing before daylight. Panic broke out among the forty passengers, but the boats were lowered and they were all taken safely ashore.

FLORIDA CUT OFF BY WIND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Feb. 12.—All efforts to get into communication today with points in the Florida Peninsula proved fruitless, owing to the severe windstorm which swept that territory late yesterday, in which a small village north of Lakeland was reported wrecked.

TWO TRAINS STALLED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

HORNELL (N. Y.) Feb. 12.—Two passenger trains of the Allegheny division of the Erie and Shawmut Railway are snowed in and relief crews have been sent out.

FLOUNDERS IN DEEP SNOW.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 12.—Floundering through snow seventeen inches deep, Pittsburgh this morning sought its mills, mines and manufactories, hardly two hours after the traces of the last snowfall of the winter had disappeared.

A fifteen hour storm that started at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon crippled trolley lines throughout this section of the country, tied up all through suburban traffic and made the city streets well nigh impassible. From almost every community in Western Pennsylania and West Virginia reports are received on snow blocked highways.

Although the storm let up early today, Forecaster Henry Pennywitt, of the weather bureau predicted that there was considerable more to come. The precipitation is already the greatest since December 17, 1890, when twenty-two inches fell.

NEW ENGLAND GETS IT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—New England was visited last night and today by a severe storm of wind and snow, the result being an unusually high tide. Several wrecks of sailing vessels are reported.

TEMPERATURE DROPS HARD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Feb. 12.—A decided fall in temperature was registered in Western Missouri, northern Kansas and Southern Nebraska during the last twenty-four hours.

WITH GLOVES.

SOCIETY WOMEN TAKE TO PLOW.

THEY DIG UP THE GARDEN OF VENICE SCHOOL.

Hands That Rock Cradles Also Do a Little Harrowing—Bunch of Beach Grangers Bribed With Coffee and Sandwiches to Carry on the Good Work.

VENICE, Feb. 12.—With Mrs. George E. Sibley serving as foreman, the members of the Pick and Shovel Club, assisted by the mere men of the beach, today celebrated Lincoln's birthday by plowing and harrowing the school garden. The occasion was made one of merriment, and at Mrs. Sibley's command of "Ready, plow," society women started on the job. Those who assisted in preparing the soil for the spring crop were Mmes. Kinney, Watt, Hartman, Motter and Goldsmith. After the women came the candidates and voters, who also showed what they did not know about agricultural pursuits. This bunch of grangers included R. A. Phillips, F. K. McCarver, W. A. Rennie, Abbot Kinney, George Nettleton, J. H. Parent, and Andy Anderson. Luncheon was served to members and the Pick and Shovelers rewarded their helpers with sandwiches and hot coffee. Following the breaking of the ground, City Clerk Watt delivered an address, dealing with the life of Lincoln, in honor of whose memory the day was observed as a holiday.

Plans are being drawn and work is soon to be started on a three-story building at the corner of Windward avenue and Trolleyway. Andrew McNally, one of the owners, was at the beach today, and said operations would be commenced soon. The new structure, which is to be an apartment-house, with storerooms on the ground floor, is to cost $30,000, and will conform ot the general architectural style of the Venetian buildings, with wide arcade in front.

BIG FOUNDRY COMPANY FAILS.

Creditors Declare That the Concern Has Liabilities That Aggregate More Than $4,500,000.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Central Foundry Company, a corporation capitalized at $14,000,000, which manufactures cast-iron pipes and fittings, went into the hands of a receiver today. Judge Hough of the United States District Court appointed Waddell Catchins as receiver. The claims of the petitioning creditors amounted to about $1200, but the creditors allege that liabilities amount to more than $4,500,000.

The petitioning creditors state that the company has property worth $1,000,000, and employs 1500 men. The property of the Central Foundry Company consists chiefly of seven operating foundries, which are located in Newark, N. J., Dundalk, Md., South Pittsburgh, Tenn., Vincennes, Ind., Medina, N. Y., and Anniston and Bessemer, Ala.

The company also owns foundries at Wilmington, Del., and controls the Central Iron and Coal Company of New Jersey and the Central Railway Company of New Jersey.

NOSE ALMOST SEVERED.

Man Is Disfigured by Blow With Heavy Mug in a Saloon Row. Arrest.

His nose almost cut off by a blow with a heavy glass mug, George Moria of No. 717 Jackson street, a junk dealer, seized his opponent, William Schetochin, and held him until the police arrived. The men had a quarrel in Pitzeu's saloon, at the corner of First and Vignes streets.

The fight, it is said, was about adjusted, when the men lined up at the bar for a drink of peace. After draining his glass, Schetochin smashed it across the face of Moria, the breaking glass inflicting a deep wound at the bridge of the victim's nose and glancing down, almost severing that organ. Schetochin, who is a Russian laborer, living at the corner of Vignes and Turner streets, was arrested.

FIRST TRAIN OVER BORDER.

Construction Cars of San Diego and Arizona Railroad Cross Boundary Near Tia Juana.

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 12.—The first train on the San Diego and Arizona Railroad, now building from this city to the Colorado River, crossed the Mexican border line near Tia Juana today. It was a construction train bearing material. Track laying will be begun on the Mexican part of the line next week.

TEST WIRELESS EQUIPMENT.

The new equipment of the Point Loma wireless station, which has just been completed, is being tested, and the results thus far show that it is the highest powered station on the Pacific Coast. It has 11,000 volts, and during the tests has been working with Honolulu, Sitka, Pensacola and Colon. The results show that it has a radius of more than 3000 miles. The tests were made during ordinary at-

Railroaders Resent Discharge of Two Men by Boss and Peace Officers Fear Violence.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOZEMAN (Mont.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] About sixty men, employed by the Northern Pacific near Chestnut, went on a strike last night and Sheriff Sales and Deputy Battenfelder were summoned from here this morning, as the authorities feared that there might possibly be some violence.

The men were engaged in straightening the course of the stream through Rocky Cañon, which, during the last few years, has damaged the roadbed of the company, and they were well supplied with dynamite and giant powder.

The trouble arose over the discharging of two workmen by the boss and the men struck to force the reinstatement and to compel the discharge of the boss. The feeling seems to have got rather strong.

The Contrast.

In Chicago, property on the women's street has been sold for as high as $40,000 a front foot. The men's shops are on a street not much more than a stone's throw away, and there is no property there worth half the sum, little of it worth more than one-fourth of what is paid for property on the women's street. It is worth while for investors to keep these things in mind. A good many investors in real estate in Los Angeles are new at the business. They have not inherited their property and have no inherited knowledge of values. They have not had wisdom begotten of years of experience. A good many of us have made a little money here in the last twenty-five years in the rise of property and are owners of business real estate we never hoped to acquire. The experienced fellows with their eye-teeth cut from long chewing on the real estate bone know these matters and take advantage of them. Just make up your mind on which streets the women are going to shop and hold on to anything you have there. Next decide where men of fashion and taste whose expenditures are much higher than the average man will have their shops and secure a piece of property there. There is a parallel situation in residence property. Buy where the restrictions are highest, where the costliest homes go up, if you want to reap the benefits of the largest increase in values. It is easily realizable that there are persons of small means who can not take advantage of knowledge like this. They need not be deterred. Anywhere in a city growing in population as Los Angeles has been doing for the last twenty-five years and is practically sure to do until the middle of the present century will increase in value just in due proportion as the population grows.

READY FOR WRECKERS.

Architects Parkinson & Bergstrom have awarded the contract for the razing of the old Metropolitan Trust building at the northwest corner of Sixth and Spring, to the Whiting Wrecking Company, who will begin the work on March 1. Motley H. Flint, vice-president of the Los Angeles Trust and Savings Company, stated yesterday that the magnificent eleven-story banking and office structure which that company will erect on the corner, will be rushed to completion immediately after the wreckers are through with the old building.

MARYLAND EXPANDING.

Famous Crown City Hostelry to Build Large Wing and Extend Historical Pergola.

When additions for which plans are now under way in the offices of Architects Hunt & Grey are completed, the Hotel Maryland in Pasadena will be one of the largest hostelries in the Southland. A new wing, three stories in height, and 48x195 feet in ground area, will be started April 1, and the famous and almost historical Hotel Maryland pergola will be extended to a total length of nearly a quarter of a mile. Several new hotel bungalows are also planned. The wing addition alone will represent an investment of about $80,000.

The ground floor of the large addition will be used as a dining-room. The upper stories will be occupied by guest rooms. The architecture will follow the style of the present building. The structure proposed will extend from the west line of the hotel to Euclid avenue. The entire addition will have a basement under it. In this a complete system of Turkish baths will be installed.

Probably the most beautiful of the new features planned will be the pergola additions. These will commence at the corner of Colorado street and Los Robles avenue and extend around the lawn to connect with the present pergola. The square within will be elaborately terraced and gardened.

D. N. Linnard stated yesterday that the costly improvements were necessitated by the constantly-growing popularity of the Hotel Maryland and the consequent demand upon the present space.

NEW TOWNSITE.

The Redland & Yucaipa Land Company reports a great interest upon the part of the people of the section in the newly opened 11,000 acre tract surrounding the townsite of Yucaipa, northeast of Redlands. B. B. Harlan, president of the company, has already begun the erection of a $10,000 hotel and other buildings are planned. The tract has been cut up into five and ten-acre pieces.

EASTERNER BUYS RANCH.

Jas. A. Althouse has sold to N. Z. Osmum, of Clear Water, Illinois, a twenty-seven and three-fourth-acre Orange ranch, situated five miles southeast of Whittier, for the sum of $3750. The sale was made through the agency of J. Howard Johnson, of Whittier.

BIG STRIDE.

PERMITS REACH HIGH TOTAL.

VALUATION OVER HALF-MILLION IN TEN DAYS.

Permits for Homes Number Hundred and Eighty-six and Represent Value of Three Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars—Year Promises to Be Record-Breaker.

The great stride in building activity which was so notable in January is being continued this month without a hint of letting up. Already in the ten business days of February to date the half million mark in permits has been comfortably passed, and that without any unusually large construction items in the make-up of the total valuation. The actual figures for the period in question are 341 permits at $529,787 valuation. The totals for the corresponding period of last year were 218 permits and $296,718 valuation.

Of the permits issued by the chief inspector of buildings to date 186, representing a valuation of $349,086 were for homes in various parts of the city. If the present activity continues without a check, the grand totals of the year for all classes of buildings will be in excess of those of any other year and all previous records for home building will be left far behind.

THE ARCHITECTS.

The following items are from the Southwest Contractor and Manufacturer: Frederick Noonan is preparing plans for a fourteen-room, two-story brick grammar school, 165x68 feet, for the Alhambra School District. Blue brick will be used on the exterior and the building will be equipped with the latest appliances.

S. Tilden Norton is desiging a three-story, Class A steel and brick addition, 40x100 feet, to the Clara Barton Hospital on Olive near Fifth, which provides about sixty additional rooms. The first floor will be fitted up for nurses' quarters. All floors and partitions will be deadened and equipment of the most modern type will be installed.

Train & Williams are preparing plans for a two-story brick hotel building to contain stores on the first floor and thirty-five rooms above, to be erected by J. W. Jameson at Taft. Plans are also under way for two-story store and theater building at San Bernardino for W. H. Swan and R. E. Swing. It will be 55x140 feet of pressed brick construction, and with marble and tile lobby. The theater auditorium will seat 750. Plans are also being prepared for a $15,000 church at Bakersfield for the First Presbyterian congregation, designed in Tudor Gothic style. Drawings are on the boards for a unique seven-room modified Swiss chalet residence at Eagle Rock, for Harry Winters.

F. M. Tyler is preparing plans for a one-story pressed brick store building, 60x90 feet, at Adams and Dalton for John C. Briggs, and for a two-story, ten-room frame residence at Second and Vermont for H. Sloan.

The Orena estate contemplates erecting a seven-story, Class A hotel building to contain 200 rooms, on Flower street between Sixth and Seventh. Additional stories are also contemplated for the Orena and Acacia hotels, owned by the estate, which were designed by Parkinson & Bergstrom.

H. D. Salveter is drawing plans for a seven-room frame bungalow at Sunset boulevard and Edgecliff road for Dr. D. D. Thornton.

G. A. Howard, Jr., is preparing plans for a seven-room bungalow on Kingsley Drive, near Eighth, for J. F. Roblnette, and has let a contract for a new thirty-eight foot store front, with plate, prism and Florentine glass set in copper frames, for the Anderson-Scranton building, at Tulare.

C. W. Buchanan has completed plans for a two-story, eight-room Swiss chalet for Michael Cudahy to be erected at the Cudahy ranch.

J. J. Blick has let the contract to Mathew Slavin of Pasadena for erecting a two-story, ten-room Colonial residence, 33x50 feet, at Pasadena, for H. I. Stewart.

BIG TRACT SOLD.

J. B. Coplen has added to his holding near Corona by the purchase of 190 acres of alfalfa land lying along the Santa Fé railroad in that section. The purchase, which was made through the Waybright-Butler Company, brings Mr. Coplen's total investment in

A RECORD LEASE.

Million-Dollar Rental to Be Paid by Bullock's for Six-Story Building Adjoining.

One of the biggest leases ever recorded on this coast was concluded yesterday by J. J. Bullock, who is to acquire for a term of years at a total rental of $1,000,000, the six-story building immediately adjoining the Bullock Department Store on the north and at present occupied by the California Furniture Company. The latter concern will vacate the structure within ten months to take possession of the seven-story building now under way for them on the other side of Broadway, between Sixth and Seventh streets.

The lease was secured from Elizabeth Hollenbeck and the trustees for the Hollenbeck home. The huge deal was put through by E. W. Cason & Co. The site secured has a frontage of seventy-one feet by a depth of 145 feet, and the building is a substantial one.

The structure will be entirely remodeled by the lessees at a cost of many thousands. It will give Bullock's an added floor space of approximately 71,000 square feet and a total floor area of close to six acres. The acquisition of this added space was necessitated by the constantly growing business of the store.

PLAN LARGE RESORT.

The Clover Crest Resort Company of Monrovia has recently incorporated in California with a capitalization of $150,000, of which $40,000 is paid in. Hal M. Siemons, one of the incorporators, states that the company will spend about $15,000 in constructing a large dining hall, and a number of California bungalows, of Swiss chalet type, all to be ready for one hundred and fifty guests by June 1. Frank O. Eager of Monrovia is the architect and G. P. Lux of Los Angeles will have charge of the landscaping. The company owns eighty acres of land in the foothills north of Monrovia.

CHURCH BUYS RECTORY.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church last week purchased from W. H. Richards a handsome residence on the south side of Burlington avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, which will in the future be used as the rectory of that parish. The consideration was $10,500. The property consists of a lot 50x150 feet in size, improved with a two-story frame house of modern construction and appointment.

This house is being built on lot 301 of Burck's Golden tract, the size of the house being 30 feet wide and 50 feet deep. It has a very broad front, with a wide cement porch running across the entire width of the house. The living-room, music-room and dining-room all have quarter-sawed oak floors, with beamed ceilings in the dining-room; large sliding door between the living-room and music-room, thus giving the opportunity of throwing the three rooms into one, which is convenient for entertainments. The living-room and dining-room have paneled walls and are finished off with bookcases, buffet, handsome fireplace, etc. The kitchen in this house is unusually large, with a pantry built off and finished up with convenient cabinet work. It is an unusually attractive place and handsome in appearance.

Price $2950. Terms, $350 cash, balance $30 per month, including interest.

No. 9—837 W. Fifty-sixth st., 6 rooms.

Lot 300, Burck's Golden tract. Lot 40x121 to 14-foot alley.

Here we strike the ideal bungalow, and the one which has advertised Southern California. It is built with a broad expanse being 30 feet wide, with a low cement porch with brick columns running across the entire width of the house. The den, dining-room and living-room are all finished off with quarter-sawed oak floors, the den being 12x13, and so arranged with sliding doors that it can be turned into a bedroom. The living-room and dining-room both have paneled walls, the latter having beamed ceilings. The kitchen is spacious, with plenty of cabinet work, making it convenient for use.

Located at the highest point on Bonnie Brae, near Seventh, we have this beautiful ten-room home, on a lot elevated ten feet above the street with granite retaining wall. This home was built about one and one-half years ago at an expense of $15,000, and is in perfect order, having been occupied but a short time. The finish throughout is superb—you can see your reflection in all woodwork, including floors, which are covered with exquisite rugs. These rugs are included in the above price, as are the hangings, which were made especially for this house, and are practically new. On the lower floor we have a large reception-room in ivory and gold, with cut-glass fixtures and beautiful wall coverings. The hall, living-room and dining-room are in mission oak, with a finish like a piano, and carefully selected hangings. Kitchen and pantries in eight-coat white enamel, with screen porch, laundry, ideal in arrangement. The lot is 50x190 to an alley leading to Seventh street, which is paved. The lot is worth $10,000 today and the house another $10,000, but for a few days we can offer the property at the ridiculous figure of $12,750. In five years the lot will be very valuable for income property; in the meantime, you will have one of the most beautiful homes in the Westlake district, and only five minutes from the heart of the city.

Located on a broad 200-foot boulevard and commands an uninterrupted view of the surrounding hills and mountains, with snow-capped Old Baldy in the back ground. It is easier and quicker to reach the center of Los Angeles from this point than it is to reach it from many parts of the city itself. The house is new, splendidly built, contains eight rooms; good size reception hall; beautiful living-room with beamed ceilings, paneled about seven feet high; mission finish; deep, built-in window seats and bookcases; open fireplace with old gold brick mantel; lighting fixtures in this room are very artistic; den adjoins living-room; walls here are also paneled and there are many quaint touches given the room; dining-room is most charming, with its many windows overlooking mountains and valley; beamed ceilings, paneled with beautifully marked wood; very artistic built-in buffet with leaded glass doors and knobs and plate mirror; hardwood floors downstairs, pass pantry and kitchen have every possible modern convenience; good sink, many closets and cupboards; screen porch with laundry tubs; bedrooms are all finished in white enamel, wall tinted in dainty colors, large windows wherever possible and from every bedroom the view is simply superb; roomy large closets and wardrobes for each bedroom; bath fitted with modern plumbing, medicine chest with mirror; a home complete in every detail. Price is $4750, only $500 cash required; balance to be paid $40 per month. This is an exceptional opportunity for any man to own his own home—and a new modern one at that. Let us take you out to see it.

FOR SALE—
—$17,500—
Which is $5000 below value.
In the heart of the exclusive West Adams district. A beautiful home of nine large sunny rooms; all modern conveniences throughout. Separate servants' quarters; large garage.
Located on the very crown of the hill, fronting two streets, 100x480.
Just consider what property of such size and location is worth. Values within one block stand at $225 per front foot. The lowest figures on adjoining property would make this estate actually worth $22,500 on the present market. Then consider the extension of the West Adams car line now nearing completion, and the effect it is having on doubling values in this exclusive neighborhood.
Then consider the outlook—a view without comparison in the city, overlooking the magnificent Santa Monica Valley for miles, to the ocean beyond—An unobstructed view over the entire city of Los Angeles, and surrounding suburbs. The most beautiful and costly homes in the city are in this particular district.
This is not only a beautiful modern home, but an exceptional investment.

THE IDEAL RANCH HOME.

26 acres in VALENCIA ORANGES and WALnuts, bearing. The LOCATION is ELEGANT, on beautiful wide avenue; fine corner, right in one of the prettiest foothill towns tributary to Los Angeles; grammar and high schools right near; only short walk to station, and a FROSTLESS BELT.

THIS IS ONE OF THE HANDSOMEST PROPERTIES ON THE MARKET, well improved; good 7-room hard finished house, beautiful ornamental trees, lawn, flowers, grape arbor and the finest variety of DECIDUOUS FRUITS one can imagine—practically everything for home use and several varieties of each; also a few navels, lemons, sweets and grapefruit; good barn, several good outbuildings, corrals, splendidly arranged chicken houses and yards; 600-gallon tank, windmill and deep 7-inch well; water piped everywhere for the greatest convenience; also 100 inches water for irrigation; full water stock; one acre fine stand alfalfa.

The soil is a rich loam, with elegant black sub-soil, and the handsome Valencia grove and walnuts are sufficient evidence of its richness. Everything has also just been heavily fertilized, sufficiently for two years.

FORCED CIRCUMSTANCES place this splendid property on the market. Everything is included—a fine team, wagon, harness, splendid new surrey and new buggy, all farming implements and tools, fine cow, all chickens and plenty of wood. This property at $16,000 is a "SNAP." It's worth today $20,000. With a little development it will be worth $25,000. A visit to the place itself will so convince you. Only 45 minutes' run from Los Angeles, fare 25c.

FOR THE HANDSOMEST AND BEST PROPERTY in California, for $16,000, see this. Terms.

FOR SALE—

PAY

AND SECURE A SELECT LOT IN BEAUTIFUL
ARLINGTON PARK.

IN THE HEART OF THE SOUTHWEST.

PAY THE BALANCE ON EASY TERMS.

A BROAD 51 TO 53 FOOT FRONTAGE LOT, LIKE THOSE IN ARLINGTON PARK.

Is an absolute necessity to the observing, wide awake, bungalow builder who wishes to embody and carry out all the strictly down to date ideas in bungalow construction, because it is the extra broad and pleasing frontages that attract the eye of the prospective purchaser, and above all one likes to feel that he has plenty of elbow room with his next door neighbor, and you cannot carry out your plans and feel the same pleasure of living on a cramped up forty-foot lot as on the large lots in
ARLINGTON PARK.

You may often wish for a wide lot, but think you are compelled to buy the narrow forty foot lot because it is cheaper, but this is not the condition in
ARLINGTON PARK.

As we are selling beautiful 51 to 53 foot lots at only $1000 to $1050 on very easy terms, and we can show you decided advantages to be derived from investing in
ARLINGTON PARK.

The improvements will be the best that money can buy, and no expense will be spared in carrying out every little detail that goes to promote the general welfare of a first class tract.
ARLINGTON PARK.

Will have wide macadamized streets, graveled, tamped, oiled, sanded and rolled smooth as a floor. Arlington Park will have five foot cement walks, 10 foot parkways instead of the usual five foot ones on other tracts, and ornamental shrubs and shade trees along each and all the streets.
ARLINGTON PARK.

Has electric lights, city water, elegant car service, and, in fact, every convenience that goes to make up the ideal city home.
ARLINGTON PARK.

Is selling rapidly. Many homes are now being built, and now is the time for you to get in on the ground floor and reap the early harvest that is sure to follow.
ARLINGTON PARK

Is located in the heart of the southwest, along Arlington ave., Van Ness and Cimarron, at Jefferson street, the great southwest cross-town street.

Don't delay. Go out to
ARLINGTON PARK

today. Tract office, corner Jefferson and Arlington streets. Take West Jefferson car to Arlington street.

MR. APARTMENT BUILDER
HERE IS WHAT YOU HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR

An elegant close in unrestricted lot in the Westlake district, near Burlington avenue and Orange, for only $3200. This property is excellently suited for flats or apartments and if improved at once would yield as great an income as a lot costing three times as much and not any closer to the business section. This lot is 51.48 feet frontage by 134.5 feet in depth and the price is only $3200.

Don't overlook this for good close-in lots at this ridiculously low price are not to be had, but this particular lot must be sold at once. We guarantee this to be absolutely the cheapest unrestricted lot in the Westlake district.

FOR SALE—

Millside Tract at Wilmington is located within 2 to 5 minutes' walk of where 6 large ocean-going vessels docked and discharged their cargoes last week. These cargoes of lumber were for the mills of the Consolidated Lumber Company and the Pacific Lumber Company. This location is where the celebration was held Saturday afternoon, which was attended by representatives from all the large commercial organizations of the city, which commemorated the completion of that part of the inner harbor near which our Millside Tract is located.

Now, remember, we are only putting on 95 parcels of ground, a good portion of which has already been sold. You can buy a piece of ground from us in Millside Tract, 120x125 ft., for $1000 (only a part of which need be cash,) which you can cut into three 40x125 ft. lots and sell each lot within 6 months for $600 each.

Property anywhere around the harbor is good, but as the harbor at our tract is completed, and the mills are in actual operation now, you will not have to wait for profits if you buy in Millside.

FOR SALE—
OF INTEREST TO BUILDERS.

It will pay you to see us about some lots we have at Wilmington, within 2 to 5 minutes' walk of the mills of the Consolidated Lumber Company and the Pacific Lumber Company, and which lots we can sell you for less than $350 each, and on which you can build a 4-room inexpensive house to cost not over $650, every one of which you can sell for from $1250 to $1500 on a legitimate basis and reasonable terms, or you can rent these same houses for $13.50 per month.

Where could you find a better proposition? There is a legitimate demand for at least 100 houses at the present time.

The mills adjacent to our Millside Tract will employ from 1000 to 1300 men, and there is urgent need for homes for these men to live in.

BARGAIN.

BEST BUY ON BROADWAY.

YOU PROBABLY NOTICED the sale of a lot on Broadway between Seventh and Eighth streets for $5500 per foot.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION. If an inside lot on Broadway is worth $5500 per foot, don't you think one of the best corners on that thoroughfare is worth at least as much?

OF COURSE IT IS, and much more, in fact; but we can deliver it now at a figure of about $1000 per foot less than the inside lot sold for in the same block.

THE PURCHASER HAS MADE at least $1000 per foot as soon as he buys this corner, of which there are only a few for sale at any price.

YOU COULD NOT BUY the opposite corner for less than $7500 per ft. THE OWNER KNOWS THE VALUE of good corners and intends to improve his with a very handsome and substantial building.

REMEMBER THAT THIS CORNER is in the heart of the new business center. NOT A QUESTION OF WAITING ten years or so, but is already established.

IF YOU ARE SEEKING a high class investment, don't overlook this.

EIGHTH STREET AT BROADWAY.

$800 PER MONTH.

Can lease the property for a term of five years at a rental of $800 per month.

PRICE $135,000.

PONDER OVER THIS FACT, that within five years you will have gotten back more than one-fourth of the purchase price in rentals, without additional expense, and the ground value will have more than doubled.

ANOTHER THING TO REMEMBER, Eighth and Broadway will always remain the choicest and highest priced property, in the center of the shopping district.

SURROUNDING IMPROVEMENTS. The largest and finest establishment of its kind, west of Chicago, is located directly opposite this choice piece of property.

THE CORNER ADJOINING. Could not be purchased for $7500 per foot, the owner now contemplating the erection of a very large and handsome building.

GUARANTEED INVESTMENT. If you are looking for a high-class conservative and guaranteed investment, this is your one opportunity, act quickly. FOR FURTHER PARTICULARS regarding this choice business property SEE

FOR SALE— ONLY—$3200—ONLY

MR. APARTMENT BUILDER

HERE IS WHAT YOU HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR

An elegant close in unrestricted lot in the Westlake district, near Burlington avenue and Orange, for only $3200. This property is excellently suited for flats or apartments and if improved at once would yield as great an income as a lot costing three times as much and not any closer to the business section. This lot is 51.48 feet frontage by 124.5 feet in depth and the price is only $3200.

Don't overlook this for good close-in lots at this ridiculously low price are not to be had, but this particular lot must be sold at once. We guarantee this to be absolutely the cheapest unrestricted lot in the Westlake district.

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.

Alhambra.

FOR SALE—
HOMES IN ALHAMBRA.
WHY A HOME IN ALHAMBRA?

Because it is the best city in California for families. Look at this combination; no other city in California can match it, viz:

The purest of mountain spring water. High elevation, good air.

Clean streets; well shaded, fine trees.

Low taxes; clean city government.

Fine breeze every afternoon. (No high winds.)

Scarcely ever frost or fog.

Beautiful school buildings, highest grade.

Best of superintendents and teachers money can hire.

Live newspaper, awake to Alhambra's interests.

No saloons, and "cooler" empty.

Good churches and more building.

Good clubhouse, well managed.

Choice society, settled by choice families from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore; lecturers, writers, historians, editors and musicians of the highest order.

Surely of all localities in California Alhambra leads for home and family.

We have the climate, fruit and flowers, and we have the lots, cottages, bungalows, houses, mansions, villas, from $1000 to $100,000. We have the cream of Alhambra and San Gabriel property listed.

Fine residence lots, $500 to $1250.

Single acres, $500 to $3500.

We can sell you one-acre home place or ten-acre dividend-paying orange grove. We also have 4000 acres of the finest alfalfa land in California, subdivided into 5, 10, 20 acres, at $75 to $150 an acre. Come and make your selection now.

See our adv. under Orange Groves.

D. A. ROSS & CO., 25 W. Main, Alhambra, Cal. x13

FOR SALE—IN ALHAMBRA, WHY NOT own one of those fine large lots in our beautiful Alhambra. They have sold rapidly, but there are still plenty for you. Our $800 lots are all sold but two. They are 50x200 feet. Water, graded streets, cement curb, and gas will be in very shortly. It is not a lonesome place, plenty of houses already built. Only four or five blocks from the car line, an easy 7-minute walk. The view of mountains and valley you have never seen equaled. They will advance in price without any question. Then we have those splendid lots of 100x300 feet, all covered with orange trees and beautiful shade trees. Graded streets, curbs, and part of these lots have gas. They are located on the main boulevard between Pasadena and Ramona Park, or Alhambra. These lots run from $1500 to $2000. We have also 100x210, same location, and are splendid bargains, most of them in Valencia oranges, and are located only 4 blocks from the High School and the car line. These run from $1350 and up. Take your wife along and come and see them. Our automobile is always in order to take you out. We are sole agents for all this property and will treat everybody courteously.

FOR SALE—
Suburban Property.

South Pasadena and Oneonta Park.

FOR SALE—THESE ARE DECIDED BARGAINS.

Beautiful suburban home place, near Oak Knoll, on Monrovia car, this property consists of 2¼ acres; covered with full-bearing orange trees, with an abundance of water; house is new, has 6 rooms on first floor, with fine large veranda, clinker brick pillars, beam ceilings, paneled walls, beautiful buffet, full oak floors, very large bedrooms, fine large bath, servant's room; buffet kitchen, and 4 large rooms can be made upstairs, if desired; auto shed, chicken corrals, etc. This is the way we define a bargain. The land value is $5000. The house cost $4000 to build, so you can see that our price of $7000 is decidedly under value. Gas and electricity can be had at city rate. This is a most beautiful property. Let us show you. One-half cash will handle it.

Five-acre ranch, close to Alhambra, near electric car line, 30 minutes from Los Angeles, in walnuts, variety of fruit and berries; 7-room house, barn, corrals, 5 shares of water stock. Price has always been $5000. Can deliver for short time at $4500, and on good terms.

A large list of one-acre pieces; in oranges, live oaks, and beautiful shrubbery, from $1000 the acre up. All are extra special bargains. You can't make a better investment. A few lots that are at sacrifice prices, 75x160, east front, covered with 18-year-old Valencia oranges. Gas, electricity and street work all in. Two blocks from Oneonta Park Station.

A SUBDIVISION PROPOSITION.
6170 ACRES.
IN COLUSA COUNTY.

This land lies 1 mile west of the main line of the SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD, AND TWO MILES FROM THE TOWN OF ARBUCKLE.

—SOIL—

2250 acres of this land is practically level, this being the 5 sections nearest the railroad, the soil is a deep, reddish loam, with an extra fine gravel through it. There is absolutely no hardpan, alkali or large stones on the tract. Of this 5 sections 1200 acres is now in grain, which will produce 12 to 20 bags of wheat to the acre, depending upon the season. Adjoining the town of ARBUCKLE and on identically the same class of land there can be found, beautiful almond orchards. APRICOTS never fail here, and are always perfectly clean. ALFALFA sown last year without any spring rain, made a fine stand. Oak trees dot these 5 sections. ORANGES, LEMONS, and all classes of FRUIT can be found in the yards and around ARBUCKLE, adjoining this tract; the balance of the land is rolling, and of this rolling land there is practically 3000 acres that is clear, but dotted with oak trees. The balance of the tract is covered with trees and bush, but the soil is identically the same as the level land.

—IRRIGATION—

Water can be had on this tract at 60 to 100 feet in abundant quantities for pumping purposes.

This land will retail at from $75 to $150 per acre, and as investment this tract will double in value within 12 months.

THE PRICE ON THIS IS $15 per acre. Terms, 1-3 cash, 5 years for the balance, and releases can be had from time to time as it is sold off.

FOR SALE—
I'LL PLANT—
I'LL BRING YOUR VINES INTO BEARING FREE.
You can have a producing country place, a vineyard that will take care of you and show you a handsome profit. You don't need much money. You don't need to do any of the work of development. Just select your land. Choose the variety of vines you want me to place on it. Pay $2.50 per acre cash and $2.50 per acre monthly. I'll do the rest. I will cultivate and care for your vines free of charge for 2 years until they come into good bearing, with a full stand of vines guaranteed. Then your vineyard will be ready for you, a producing vineyard. And it's located in a section famous for grapes, where the growers make handsome profits. This land is at Etiwanda, a short ride from Los Angeles on the Santa Fe. Some growers there got $40 a ton for their table grapes last year, raising 8 tons to the acre. This is on the basis of $1280 income from 5 acres of land. Look into it. Take up the facts. You can see for yourself. I'll sell you this land for $90 to $200 an acre. It's level, with water piped to every 5 acres. If you want to get a place of your own that will take care of you, a well located, self-supporting profitable country home, this is your opportunity. FOR SALE—
BETTER THAN AN ORANGE GROVE.
$11,000 cash investment required, but it is worth more: two parties own 160 acres and control about 280 acres more of fine mountain ranch, near Los Angeles; with postoffice and daily mail; 160 inches perpetual water; altitude 4000 feet; 50 acres in apples, part of which has yielded as high as $400 per acre net. Apples guaranteed to be as good and profitable as Hood River fruit; parties do not want to sell, but prefer to interest third party satisfactory to them on basis of $11,000 for third interest, $3000 to apply on debts incurred and property bought for benefit of ranch; balance to go strictly into improvements; ranch and improvements thus far stand each party more than $11,000, need more money for immediate improvements; present parties will assume and agree to pay balance of purchase price evidenced by encumbrance, running 5 years, with interest 6½ per cent. net. Fine trout fishing and deer and quail and deer hunting at hand; a strictly first-class proposition that the right party cannot afford to ignore. Above conditions bed rock and cannot be lessened. FOR SALE—2900 ACRES. 2900 ACRES.
AT RIALTO! AT RIALTO!!

$290,000—½ CASH. Bal. 2 yrs. 5 per cent.

Crossed by Santa Fe Ry. (1 mile.)
Crossed by oiled road, L. A. to San B'doo.
Will be crossed soon by Electric Railway.

About 2 million gallon cement reservoir.

730 acres of it Water Land.

25 to 30 inches already developed.

No finer subdivision scheme in California. It lies between the new subdivision now being put on the market by "The Fontana Development Company" on the west, by Rialto proper on the east. It's strictly O.K., as to location, transportation, soil, climate, and is almost as level as a lake.

Look at every other large acreage subdivision proposition on the market, then you will be better able to appreciate the advantages of this tract of land.

FOR SALE—BARGAINS IN ACREAGE.
$18,000—60 acres close to city. All fenced. Can be handled on payment of $6000 cash. Will take $5000 of other property as part payment on remainder. Lies southeast of town on car line.
$6000—Five acres, fronting on South Park avenue, near Manchester. This is a rare bargain. Will be ripe for subdivision soon.
$8000—14 acres, 20 minutes from Sixth and Main, with 18 rods of frontage on Long Beach car line, level as a floor and richest kind of soil. The best piece of vacant land between this and the new harbor. Easily worth $10,000. Ripe for subdivision and adjoins a subdivision now selling lots at $400 each. Near two good schools.
2137 acres near Perris, Riverside county, of the very choicest orange and alfalfa land. Water 18 feet from the surface; every foot of it ready for the plow. This is one of the very best buys in that rapidly developing valley, and offers a splendid opportunity for a syndicate wishing to obtain something for quick subdivision. We can deliver this property at $45 per acre for the 2137 acres and throw in 1000 acres of hill land. Every acre can be covered by water developed on the property. We have a few days only to place this property at the price named. Very easy terms.
$8000—40 acres of level land ready for subdivision, adjoining the town limits of Hemet, only seven blocks from the commercial center of the town. It will take $5000 to handle this.
We have some good exchanges and other bargains.

FOR SALE—
WALNUT, ALMOND AND ALFALFA LAND.
We can demonstrate to any one that our land is peculiarly adapted to the growing of walnuts, almonds and alfalfa. We are in a frostless belt. The farmers realize this fact and have started planting walnuts and almonds on all sides of us. The alfalfa can be planted in between the growing trees, thus insuring an income while your orchard is coming into bearing. These crops have never failed in our section of the country, besides they produce so well and make the land so valuable that there is reason to believe this is the coming industry in our neighborhood. We noticed that all young orchards were either walnuts or almonds and alfalfa, but before making the above statement we wanted to be sure, and to be able to demonstrate these facts. Now we say any one who buys land in "The Woodland tract" can become very wealthy by planting walnuts, almonds and alfalfa. We have 3000 acres of the richest land in Yolo county, all under irrigation which we now offer for $125 PER ACRE, ON TERMS,
in tracts of 20 acres and more.
Seeing is believing, and we can show you grand walnut trees adjoining us that bear wonderfully as the owners will show you. You know what walnut land is worth. Now look into this if you want to make money. Send for our booklet.

DELANO,
THE LAND OF EARLY PRODUCTS
SOLVES
THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Read this from the "Western Empire;"
The only way to be sure of a living, regardless of strikes, lockouts, panics and high prices, is to collect your living straight from the soil. The only way to be sure that the landlord will not raise your rent or turn you out is to be your own landlord. The only "job" which permits you to be your own "boss" is the job of tilling your own soil for your own benefit.

$300 WILL PUT YOU IN THE WAY OF INDEPENDENCE.

Delano lands are the pick of the San Joaquin Valley. $300 will pay the first payment on 10 acres of $200 land with water to it in cement pipes, all level and ready for you to go to work. The first crop will pay your next payment besides keeping you. You can start an orange orchard, which will make you rich.
We have lands as low as $125 per acre.

BUSINESS INVESTMENTS—

TAKE NOTICE—
INVESTORS AND LAND BUYERS.
I am in the city few days to interest capital in the purchase of 3000 or more acres of high-grade fruit and alfalfa land, adjacent to the oil fields in Kern county. Flowing wells, pure, unmineralized water near surface; all possible oil land, and in one body. Oil fields need food supplies, and the land is free from alkali and hard pan, suitable for subdivision. Every one knows west side lands are the most fertile, so do not confuse this offer with cheap trash, offered at low price. The land is worth $150 per acre, but I will sell at $15 per acre, cash. The oil prospect ought to be worth many times the price asked, besides this is the last opportunity to secure such valuable land in this State at such low price.

If you have the money and mean business, will take you in the syndicate, or sell you the whole tract. Will be pleased to meet interested parties and give full particulars. Address D, box 200, TIMES OFFICE. 13

FOR SALE—WILSHIRE BLVD., THE WELL known Coronado Apartments, No. 675 Coronado st., between Wilshire blvd. and W. 7th st.; double 3-story modern mission building; 12 3-room and bath flats, completely furnished and renting for $350 per month; price $45,000. Will exchange equity for part cash and part city or country property.

TEN ACRES, SUNNY SLOPE DISTRICT, CALIFORNIA.

Half navels and half Valencias, 8 to 10 years old. This is one of the cheapest pieces of property along the Monrovia electric line. Vacant land in this locality is selling for more than the owner is asking for this improved ranch. There is, at least, $2500 worth of fruit on the trees and included in this price. For an investment as well as a home this cannot be beat. Price $18,000. Half cash.

TEN ACRES, SUNNY SLOPE DISTRICT, CALIFORNIA.

700 navels, 25 Valencias, and three rows of seedlings all 12 to 16 years old. This property is located near the electric line. Owner will sell on easy terms or take Los Angeles property in exchange. Price $18,000.

TEN ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

2-3 Valencias and 1-3 navels, 8 to 16 years old. Contract water costing only $1 per acre per year. Located close to the electric line with all conveniences of the city as gas and electricity are now on this street. Income from this ranch is about $3800. Price, including crop, $20,000.

TWENTY ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

11 acres Valencias, 16 years, 8 acres navels, 16 years old and one acre of tangerines, 6 years old. Has a crop now on the trees, valued at $6000 to $7000. Has 60 shares of Covina water stock, best of soil and in excellent condition. This ranch cannot be duplicated in this district for less than $3000 per acre. Price $32,500.

TWENTY ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

Half Valencias and half navels, 12 years old. Improved with a 6 room cottage, barn, etc. This property is located on a double clean corner and it is seldom that a property of this quality is ever placed on the market, but owing to the age of the present owner he wishes to retire. Crop on the trees is worth at least $6000. Has been heavily fertilized and fumigated this last year. Close to the electric line and a beautiful home place as well as an investment. Price $40,000, including crop.

TWENTY ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

The cream of this district. 10 acres of Eureka lemons, 8 acres of Valencia buds, 6 years old and 2 acres of Valencias, 14 years old. Improved with an 8 room modern house, completely furnished with the best of furniture, garage and barn. Has electricity, also gas and water under pressure for domestic use. Cement curb on all sides of this property, nice drive, lawn, etc. This is not only a beautiful home, but has an income of $10,000 per year. Price $60,000.

TWENTY-THREE ACRES, GLENDORA, CAL.

14 acres of navels, 5½ acres of Valencias, ½ acre of seedlings all full bearing. Improved with a modern 7 room house, barn, etc. and a crop now on the trees worth $7000. Has Azusa water stock which costs about $1 per acre per year. Price $45,000, including crop.

THIRTY ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

20 acres in Valencias, lemons and navels and 10 acres of good vacant land, but not set out. Fine modern 8 room bungalow, 2 room servants' house, barn, team, implements, etc. Has Covina water right and a better buy cannot be found in the valley. Price $35,000.

FORTY ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

1400 Valencias and 600 navels. Balance of land vacant. This ranch is, without a doubt, the finest ranch we have on our list, considering age of the trees, which are only 6 years old. Crop last year ran $6500 and the present crop on the trees should bring $10,000. Has a good well on the property, throwing 60 inches of water, which is more than enough for the entire ranch. This ranch will surely be worth $50,000 inside of another year. Price $35,000. Reasonable terms.

FIFTY-ONE ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

The finest located ranch in this district, also the finest soil in Los Angeles county. 30 acres of Valencias one year old. 20 acres of strawberries. This property is under the Azusa and Covina irrigating systems and is improved with an 8 room California bungalow new and modern. Has city water, cement curb and fenced all around, and although there is no income to speak of at the present time, this ranch will be worth $100,000 inside of 5 years. Price $42,000, with easy terms.

FIFTY-FIVE ACRES, UPLAND, CAL.

10 acres of Valencias. 22 acres of navels, 4 to 8 years old. Balance of land is vacant. All good orange land. Crop on trees worth $6000. Improved with a modern 10 room house, barn. Water costs only $1 per acre per year. Owner will take good Los Angeles property in exchange and might assume. Price $55,000.

FORTY-SIX ACRES, GLENDORA, CAL.

This is considered the best income producing ranch in the foothills of Glendora. Price of this ranch for a country home alone is worth the price asked. 6½ acres of navels, 14 years old. 12 acres of Eureka lemons, 14 years old. 6½ acres of Valencias, 7 to 14 years old. 20 acres of olives, gum trees and cedars and vacant land. Has a 9 room house and also a 14 room modern bungalow. Has canyon water for domestic use and pump water for irrigating purposes. The income from this ranch is $12,000 net. Price of this beautiful property is $75,000.

SIXTY-SIX ACRES, SAN GABRIEL VALLEY, CALIFORNIA.

One of the finest large ranches to be found in the San Gabriel Valley. 56 acres in Valencias, Thompson improved navels, Washington navels, Malta bloods and lemons, 4 to 16 years old, 10 acres of parkings, drives, etc. Improved with a 14 room modern house, foreman's cottage, barns, etc. Included in this price are three teams, implements, 300 shares of Covina water stock and crop on trees at time of sale. Owner will take good Los Angeles property, some cash and balance to suit. Price $120,000.

All the above properties are as advertised and as we handle nothing but country property we can show you more good paying ranches than any other agent in Southern California. We do not handle any run down properties and only those showing a good income on price asked. As we are practical orange growers it would be to your advantage to see us before buying.

FOR SALE—
ORANGE GROVES.

Orange and lemon groves in the best citrus growing districts.

If you are looking for a good orange grove at the right price, better look over the following groves which have stood the test of the recent cold weather.

$19,000—10 acres; one-third lemons in full bearing; balance Washington navels about 17 years old; in first-class condition; fine orange crop on trees; estimate 2500 boxes; lemon trees loaded with fine fruit; practically free water; 4-room bungalow.

$8000—10 acres; about 1000 trees; not in full bearing; crop about 1000 boxes choice fruit.

$18,000—10 acres, 17 year Washington navels, with crop.

$18,000—San Dimas section near the foothills; over 9 acres; a first-class grove in first-class condition; one-third navels, one-third Valencias, one-third lemons, a good combination. Better look it over.

Several other fine groves in the San Dimas and La Verne districts with and without improvements.

High grade, unfrosted oranges are bound to command good prices later on. If you want to secure the fine crop on any of these groves, better soon get busy.

FOR SALE—
"ENORMOUS INCOME" GROVE.

INCOME WILL BE BETTER THAN $18,000 this year; OWNER'S STATEMENT, 47 acres, 7 acres of two-year-old trees, Valencias and navels, all uniform, vigorous and thrifty. On this 7 acres is fine 9-room house, good barn, outhouses, windmill and tank, etc.; also hired man's cottage, and another large barn. This is a swell corner property, right on So. Pacific Railroad and right beside packing-house. Across the street is 40 acres, set solid to full-bearing orange trees, Valencias, navels and sweets, GREAT BIG GIANTS; WE ARE WILLING TO BET YOU NEVER SET EYES ON A GROVE SO LADEN DOWN WITH FRUIT AS THIS GROVE IS TODAY, it is simply marvelous, and worth going miles to see. The soil is a rich, heavy, sandy loam, with deep, black sub soil. Ground on entire 47 acres is all level, very easy to work and irrigates to perfection, requiring hardly any fertilizer. Grove has been fumigated this year and is in the famous frostless belt; abundance of cheap water any time. Both 7 and 40 acres are corner properties, right at railroad station, near several fine little towns and about 40 minutes to Los Angeles. For a certain reason owner will sell off all or any part of 47 acres at the rate of $1500 per acre. Terms. REMEMBER, WE CAN MAKE A SHOWDOWN ON THE INCOME.

FOR SALE—THE BEST LOCATED, AND one of the best built residences on the beach. Situate on the crown of the Fourth-street hill, opposite Pier avenue. From its windows can be seen a view unsurpassed on this bay; beautiful by day in its entirety; enhanced at night by the dazzling brilliancy of the electric illumination beneath. Location is warmer in winter and cooler in summer than Los Angeles or the sand.

The house, built to order, has eight large rooms, reception hall, bathroom, two toilets, closets in plenty, large basement room, with cellar. Tiled porch 9x40, and two chimneys of Chatsworth Park stone. Cosy fireplace of Arizona sandstone in living room. Alpine plaster, plate glass center windows, beamed ceilings, hardwood floor; can heat by stoves, fireplace, gas or furnace if desired.

Lot 75x155, utilized by choice roses, geraniums, shrubs and rare plants. A thrifty orange tree covered with unfrosted golden fruit, shows the even temperature here enjoyed.

There is $3500 of first grade furnishings, including a $1000 ten-piece set of hand-carved Japanese teak wood furniture, and ebony cabinet, two elaborate screens worth $300, set of rattan furniture, French Wilton rugs, Victrola and records, embroidered wall tapestries, cloisonne, silver and bronze vases, Satsuma and other porcelains; porch palms and plants. Fine oak dining-room set, made to order, with Haviland china; a home ready for immediate use, furnished at $16,500, or unfurnished at $14,000; $10,000 cash, balance terms. Offered that I may improve other property. Residence, JOHN W. LINCOLN, 3002 Fourth st., between Marine and Ashland sts., Ocean Park P. O. x13

FOR SALE—$3000, THE VERY CREAM OF the best located RESIDENCE LOTS on the Coast are those between Third and Fourth sts., south of Ashland, opposite the Pier ave. section. They are 50x155; have clean, free soil; street work done; 10 degrees warmer in winter than the sand. Grandest of ocean views by day, enhanced at night with brilliant illumination of myriads of electric lights, visible in their entirety from no other point. Don't allow others to dissuade you, but SEE and be convinced. These are the BEST and CHEAPER than anything else offered. Can offer 50, 75, 100 or 300 feet frontage with clear title. Can show fine, golden, unfrosted oranges now fruited on my own place; plants and flowers in profusion. See me only for CORRECT prices.

San Pedro.

FOR SALE—AT SAN PEDRO.
THE POINT FIRMIN TRACT.

$430,000 appropriation has been made by U. S. Government for San Pedro.

The government is spending millions here.

The $10,000,000 of harbor bonds, which will be voted by Los Angeles city will make great harbor improvements. The 148 acres in outer harbor will be the site for great warehouses, docks and general shipping business.

Lots in the Point Firmin tract are sightly overlooking the whole harbor, the 148 acres and the big $3,000,000 government breakwater. Lots run to water's edge and command the finest view on Pacific coast.

We sell these lots cheaper than lots elsewhere in Southern California—$1000 to $2500 for large lots. Easy terms.

COLYEAR'S,
509-511 S. MAIN ST.,
(Where bargains Reign.)

After our annual stock taking we find many samples of furniture which have been slightly damaged or scratched, which have been placed on our second floor, with our slightly-used goods, at a great special reduction this week.

And again we wish to call your special attention to the immense lot of slightly-used furniture and carpets on our second floor; goods that have been taken in part payment for new furniture; here you will find bargains galore in bedroom sets, odd dressers, iron beds, washstands, folding beds, chiffoniers, buffets, china cabinets, bookcases, hall trees, extension tables; library tables, mirrors, pictures, center stands, couches, Morris chairs, rockers, chairs, in fact, everything for housekeeping.

Special extra 25 per cent. discount this week. Five hundred slightly used carpets and rugs, some excellent patterns in all grades; some just as good as new at less than half original cost.

Our salesman will be pleased to show you through our establishment, whether you purchase or not. Easy terms can be arranged if desired.

Another $450 upright piano for $350. Why not save $100?

HOW TO BORROW MONEY.

Read all the "MONEY TO LOAN" ads, compare them carefully; pick out three which you like best; have a personal interview with the manager of each company; then you are in a position to judge which firm you prefer to deal with. We invite comparison of this sort and feel we are running no risk in placing our business methods and the contract we offer against those of any other concern in the city. Take our advice on "HOW TO BORROW MONEY," it will cost you nothing, except a little time, for which you will be well repaid in the satisfaction of knowing you are dealing with the right people. We advance money to housekeepers on PIANOS, FURNITURE, LIVE STOCK, WAGONS, CARRIAGES, ETC. The service we offer is quick, quiet and polite. Call, write or 'phone.

COLD CAUSES DEATH.

Well-Known Citizen Succumbs After Long and Painful Illness—Was President of Charitable Society.

Charles F. Rapp, a well-known citizen, died yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at his residence, No. 1427 Santee street, after a long and painful sickness resulting from a severe cold which settled on the lungs. Mr. Rapp was born sixty-three years ago in Berg Rhenish, Bavaria. The family came to America and settled in St. Paul in 1858. Mr. Rapp was possessed of a beautiful baritone voice and musical talent. He took an active part in church music as well as German musical and singing societies, and soon became popular. For many years he conducted a successful grocery business in St. Paul. In 1873 he married Miss Catherine Reis, who is left a widow. Sickness and the death of several children brought the family to Los Angeles, where he again carried on a grocery business at Pico and Santee streets.

Mr. Rapp took an active interest in the Catholic characters of Los Angeles and in the choir work of St. Josephs Church. At the time of his death he was president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of that parish. Besides his widow he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Anna C. De Temple, and two sons, George and Carl F. Rapp, both in business in this city.

FICKLE SPOUSE CAUGHT.

Man Accused of Deserting Young Wife Arrested at Redding—Detective Goes After Him.

Louis Conte, wanted here on a charge of wife desertion, was arrested yesterday in Redding and Detective Hosick left last night for the northern city to bring the prisoner back to Los Angeles for trial.

Conte, it is said, made violent love to a pretty girl of some means in Redding about a month ago, finally winning her as a bride. They came together to Los Angeles for their honeymoon. Conte professed to be delighted with the city and its people, so much so that he declared his intention of making this his home. With this understanding, he induced his young wife to turn over to him $1700, saying that he would use the money to establish himself in business.

NEW WHOLESALE HOUSE HERE.

George P. Ide & Co., one of the largest manufacturers of shirts and collars in the United States, will open a branch house in Los Angeles. They have been represented here by an agent for some years, but now take cognizance of the expansion of this city into a metropolis and feel the necessity of having their own establishment as in New York, Chicago, San Fraicisco and other large cities. The firm has leased the ground floor of the W. P. Jeffries building at No. 121 Winston street, and on March 1 will open the new branch house. Their representative here will be John T. Gibson.

WOMEN ARE FAVORED.

Y.W.C.A. Offers Excellent 'Opportunities for Gymnasium Work—Children's Classes Interesting.

Women of Los Angeles have opportunities for physical training. Among these is the gymnasium work at the Young Woman's Christian Association. No other department of the association has grown more rapidly nor done more creditable work than this department. The gymnasium is well equipped with up to date apparatus.

Classes meet regularly, morning, afternoon and evening, and the work given is a course of Swedish, German and American gymnastics. Every pupil upon registering for the course is examined by a physician, and if it is found that she should not take all of the regular exercises her work is especially prescribed.

Miss Ella Stevers, who received her training at the Boston Normal School, is the physical director.

Besides the floor and apparatus work, folk-dances and games, including volley ball, basket ball, and baseball are played. During this term swimming and tennis will also be taught.

Especially interesting features in this department are the children's classes, which meet Saturday morning. From 10 to 11 children from 5 to 13 years of age are taught drills and exercises and games adapted to them, and from 11 to 12 a class of older children is on the floor. During all the classes the gallery is open to women visitors.

COLLECTOR IS ACCUSED.

Meat Dealer Says Embezzlement Offense Is Second Time Employee Has Gone Wrong.

W. T. Brown, a collector for C. C. McClintock's meat market, No. 121 South Olive street, was arrested last night by Detectives Murray and McCann on a charge of embezzlement.

Brown is alleged to have kept $80 belonging to his employers, failing to make returns on collections. About a year ago, it is alleged, Brown embezzled from the same store and left the city. No charge was made against him, and when he wrote repeatedly, begging for forgiveness and asking for another chance, he was told to return to the place he had left. An arrangement was made with him by which he was to be paid a salary from which a certain amount would be deducted until he had made good the amount of his previous defalcation. This leniency, it is asserted had no effect on Brown, and he returned to his former tactics.

Brown has a wife and little child, and when asked for an explanation is said to have advanced the plea that he needed the money for his family.

ANTICIPATION REALIZED.

Madam Carreno Plays With Local Woman's Orchestra at Private Concert.

Members of the Los Angeles Woman's Symphony Orchestra were complimented yesterday forenoon by a visit, at Blanchard Hall, from Madam Carreno, acknowledged the greatest living piano player. Madam Carreno made the visit under arrangements of two years ago, when she was in this city, and played, with the local orchestra, the Emperor Concerto by Beethoven.

The concert, which was private, no one being present except the players, was heartily enjoyed and the local musicians were highly complimented by their distinguished guest, who noted much improvement since her last visit.

Two years ago Madam Carreno was the guest of the Woman's Symphony Orchestra and played with them at that time. Upon leaving here she requested that the orchestra take up for practice the number rendered yesterday so that when she came again she might play it with them. The orchestra has been practicing in anticipation of yesterday's pleasure since that time.

PET BUNION IS SPLIT.

Laborer Bowled Over by Racing Vehicle—Treated at Receiving Hospital.

Knocked down and bowled across the street by a racing vehicle, John Mooner, a laborer, sustained no more serious injury than the splitting of his pet bunion beneath a horse's hoof. He was able to walk home after a visit to the Receiving Hospital, although all who saw the accident thought the man had been killed.

Mooner stepped from the curb at First and Los Angeles streets, just as an unknown young man in a wagonette came along at a furious gait, racing with a man on horseback. The racers continued like the wind down First street after the accident, going so fast that it was impossible to stop them or get their names.

The accident occured at about 6:30 o'clock, when the street was crowded with people on their way home.

SUSPICIOUS FINANCIALLY.

Detectives Arrest Three, Well "Heeled," Alleged Race Touts on Charges of Vagrancy.

Having too much money to spend and two little work to do was what got W. R. Cosgrove, H. F. Whitmore and J. D. Clark into jail on vagrancy charges last night.

Cosgrove had $105.45 on his person when searched at the Police Station; Whitman had $77.95 and Clark had $61.25.

The men were not suspected of being implicated in any burglaries, or anything of the sort, but they are race track touts, the police say, and therefore are considered dangerous characters, as they manage to keep themselves pretty well supplied with cash without having to work for it. The men were arrested by Detectives Beaumont and Roberts and will be given a chance to explain their finances in the police court.

STREET CAR DELIVERY.

Early Newspaper and Passenger Service.

To facilitate an earlier delivery of The Times in the southeastern and southwestern parts of the city, arrangements have been made with the street railway companies by which yellow car starts from The Times Office, corner First and Broadway, at 4 a.m. daily. It runs via Broadway to 12th, to San Pedro, to South Park avenue and Slauson avenue.

An interurban car, running via Hill street to 16th, to Burlington, to Vermont and to Santa Barbara, leaves The Times Office at 2:50 a.m., taking papers to the southwestern section.

Both cars carry passengers and will undoubtedly prove a convenience for many late night and early morning workers.

NEARER LOS ANGELES.

SHIP CHANNEL TO WILMINGTON.

CONSOLIDATED LUMBER COMPANY HAS CELEBRATION.

Party of Prominent Men Taken to Company's Plant—Gigantic Job of Excavation—Big Undertaking Has Almost Been Completed—Mono-Rail System.

More than one hundred citizens, including the lumber dealers of California, local capitalists and Los Angeles city officials, were guests yesterday of the Consolidated Lumber Company on a pleasant trip. The occasion was a celebration of the practical completion of the ship channel from San Pedro to the company's plant at Wilmington. The party left the Pacific Electric Company's station at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon in two special cars, and, arriving at Wilmington, were shown through the yards of the Pacific Lumber Company and the Consolidated Lumber Company.

At the wharfs of these immense plants the visitors saw many things of interest, among them three ocean-going vessels laden with lumber from the North, tied up to the wharfs, three miles closer to Los Angeles than the harbor at San Pedro. They also saw in operation at the plant of the Pacific Lumber Company, the mono-rail system of unloading lumber from the vessels that now are enabled to tie up at the wharf of the company, through the individual enterprise of the Consolidated Lumber Company, from which the Pacific company leases its ground.

The Consolidated company uses forty acres of ground in the operation of its plant, and also leases forty acres to the Pacific Lumber Company, with wharfing privileges. The officials of the Consolidated Lumber Company believe they have opened up a new era of enterprise to Los Angeles by excavating a ship channel from San Pedro to Wilmington. The work of digging the channel was begun a year ago last October by this company, and now is practically completed. About three hundred men have been employed, and the digging of the channel and building of the 2000 feet of wharf have so far cost $210,000, according to the statement of W. T. Wheatly, general manager of the Consolidated company.

On yesterday's trip there was represented from $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 of capital invested in the lumber industry in the State of California, and all the members of the party expressed themselves as much interested in the plans of the Consolidated Lumber Company. The party was under the direct charge of Mr. Wheatley of the Consolidated company and enjoyed every minute of the time. After an inspection of the plants of the two lumber companies, the party boarded the steamer Warrior, commanded by Capt. Edward Mahar, and was taken for a trip to San Pedro and return. This proved to be one of the most enjoyable features of the afternoon. Upon the return of the Warrior to the wharf of the Consolidated company the party boarded the special cars for the return to the city, arriving shortly after 6 o'clock.

Capt. William Banning of the Banning line of steamers was present and entertained a party of friends on board his fine steam yacht, Compernello, during the afternoon.

The ship channel from San Pedro to Wilmington, a distance of three miles, has a depth of eighteen and one-half feet at low tide and is about two hundred feet wide. There is a turning basin opposite the plant of the Consolidated Lumber Company, and ocean-going ships of comparatively deep draught easily can make a landing.

The completion of this big enterprise is due to the efforts of James Tyson of the Charles Nelson Company of San Francisco, the St. Paul and Tacoma Lumber Company of Tacoma, Wash., and W. T. Wheatley, vice-president and general manager of the Consolidated Lumber Company, with the coöperation of the Salt Lake Route, the Banning Steamship Company and and Southern Railroad Company.

The officers of the Consolidated Lumber Company are: President, A. G. Foster; vice-president and gepenal manager, W. T. Wheatly; second vice-president, Horace Wilson; secretary and treasurer, C. H. Condee; assistant manager and auditor, F. L. Bortells.

FIREMEN ARE HELPLESS.

Gasoline Explosion Starts Fire in a House Beyond the Reach of Water—Total Loss.

L. Hurley's home at No. 876 Ametnyst street went up in smoke last night while the firemen stood helplessly by, watching the fire eat away a fine two-story frame building worth $2000 and $1500 worth of furniture and household goods.

The house was located in the extreme northeast of the city, beyond the reach of the mains, and there was no way to obtain water enough to do any good. The fire began with the explosion of a gasoline stove in the kitchen, and the flames spread with such rapidity that it was impossible either to check the fire or to save much of the contents of the building.

MISSING TAILOR RETURNS.

When all his friends were preparing to mourn for him as lost forever, Louis Botwin, the little Russian tailor who was reported yesterday morning to have been missing for a week, walked coolly up to his shop at No. 105 North Vignes street and asked a policeman to open the door for him. He declined to say where he had been. Botwin was turned over to his friend, Henry Fisher, who had reported the disappearance to the police and who was sure that Botwin had succeeded in a second attempt to commit suicide.

FIRMS CENSURED WRONGLY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Announcement was made today by the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange that Tucker, Anthony & Co., and Van Schack & Co., two of the firms censured by the committee in its statement regarding the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company, had furnished further information to the complete satisfaction of the exchange authorities that their subscriptions to the Hocking pool were for the account of a customer and that they were ignorant that this customer was acting for or had any relations with Lathrop, Haskins & Co. in the matter. The committee declared that these two firms should not be included among the Stock Exchange firms whose acts were declared to merit severe condemnation.

AMBASSADOR PRAISES LEOPOLD.

Says Late King of Belgians Made Mistakes in Plays Because of His Small Theater.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—High praise for Leopold, late King of the Belgians, omes from Henry Lane Wilson, ex-Minister to Belgium, who leaves for his new post as Ambassador to Mexico next week.

"Leopold was intellectually the superior of any reigning monarch in Europe," said Mr. Wilson, who has just arrived in New York, after a brief visit in the West. "He played his part in a limited field of action, but if he had been Emperor of Germany, or King of England, he would have been esteemed the first figure of his time.

"In financial or commercial life he would have been a Morgan or a Rockefeller.

"All his ideas were on a grand scale, and whatever mistakes he made were due mainly to the difference between the part he wished to play and the little theater in which he had to play it."

NEGRO PREACHERS FORM UNION.

African Baptist Ministers Demand Payment for Orations, Funerals and Weddings.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

RED BANK (N. J.) Feb. 12.—On account of the increased cost of living, the preachers of the African Baptist church, gathered here at the Atlantic Coast Baptist Ministerial Conference, have agreed hereafter to make a fixed charge for sermons or addresses delivered at funerals, marriages and semi-public functions.

The charge for a public oration or a political address will be $10, and the fee for funerals, weddings and minor functions, $5.

Any pastor violating the agreement is to be fined $1, and deprived of the right to preach for thirty days.

ADVISES CONNECTION.

State Railway Commission Rules Against Exclusive Contracts by Telephone Companies.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

HARRISBURG (Pa.) Feb. 12.—The State Railroad Commission, in a decision announced today upon the complaint of the Consolidated Telephone Companies of Pennsylvania against the exclusive contract by the Bell Telephone Company and the State Belt Telephone Company of Slatington, Pa., rules that exclusive contracts are illegal and strongly recommends that there be an interchange of local business.

In the decision the commission says: "The convenience of the patrons would be served best if the lines of all telephone companies were connected."

EXPLORER TO BE GIVEN HONOR.

Col. Charles Chaille-Long Will Receive Medal from the American Geographical Society.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Col. Charles Chaille-Long, the explorer, will come from his home in Baltimore to New York early next week to receive from the American Geographical Society its medal for eminence in exploration. The honor is a long-deferred one, the society thereby reaffirming its faith in Col. Chaille-Long's discoveries along the course of the Victorian Nile in 1874.

The occasion will revive the memory of what in the last generation was a feud between explorers almost as notable, and fully as bitter as the recent disagreement in matters polar.

Two hundred boy students from the Morris High School of New York City yesterday scoured the parks and waste places of upper New York City in a search for Cornell Barnes, the fifteen-year-old fellow-student, who has been missing from his home for several days. It is believed the boy wandered away in a temporary derangement due to overstudy. The search was unsuccessful.

FREE MONTHLY OIL PAPERS ARE PLENTIFUL

It is surprising what a number of monthly oil papers are distributed by the different promoters. To hear some of the extravagant claims made for these papers, you would think the regular weekly papers were being crowded out of business, and the dailies were getting a run for their money.

With all that, they serve their purpose. This is a day of specialties, and if it were not for the publicity given the oil industry by these self-same papers, our dailies would not contain all the valuable information they do. Desire for knowledge, creates the demand for news.

The "California Oil Fields," a monthly paper devoted to the oil industry, and edited by Sagar-Loomis Company, San Francisco, for the current month, contains a very instructive little map of California, showing the relative size of this State, as compared with ten other States. It also gives the location of every oil field. Literature of that kind is instructive, and cannot help but do California a great deal of good. This paper is given to every person interested in California's greatest industry, upon application.

The Liberty Oil Company is being financed by the above-mentioned firm, and this property bids fair to bring in their Well No. 2 better than 200 barrels per day. This well was started with 16-inch casing, and they are down several hundred feet, having shut off a big flow of water at 150 feet, and they expect no trouble from this source. Should this well come in as expected by their head driller, Mr. John A. Magee, the price of stock will undoubtedly go to several dollars per share, as the Liberty Oil Company's future is before it. They own a forty-year lease on 125 acres of proven oil land in Ventura county, and a large well of this kind would make it possible to pay immense dividends on their small capitalization ($500,000) as there is room for over fifty wells.

It is rumored that the stock will advance from its present selling price of 20c per share, the last of this month. A number of prominent people have lately become identified with the Company, and it looks as if the stock was a positive bargain at the present price.

The ounces and values estimat for the UNITED STATES ALON in 1909 are as follows:

Fine Ounces, 4,800,369. Tot value in dollars, $99,232,200, b bear in mind that the figures f 1909 are only estimates, as offic data will not be furnished un about eleven months after t close of the year.

The world's gold production 1909 marks an augmentation output of almost 100 per cent. the last 12 years.

Notwithstanding the steadily increasing production of gold, the have been times during the pa year when leading financial cente competed keenly for the new supplies, resulting in a loss at th close of the year in the Unite States of $15,772,988 in the visibl stock of gold. French and German banks also showed losses. Th Bank of England a very small gai with large increases to institution in Russia and Austria-Hungary.

A general rise in prices ha taken place, not only in the Unite States but all over the world—i free trade Britain and protectioni Germany. This universal advanc is general as to goods, which only explained by the increasin gold supplies and not by trusts tariffs or unions.

During an era of rising price general business thrives and ne ventures and developments are fostered and encouraged.

Statistics show that wages hav not risen as fast as cost of living and strikes and rumors of strike will be only an attempt to overtak living costs.

A partial remedy for this situation is offered by Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale, by an adjustment o interest rates, in which he suggests that:

"If prices are rising 10 per cent a year, interest must be 15 pe cent. that there may be a real ne rate of 5 per cent. The interes rate acts as a brake. If the rat is abnormally low, investment i abnormally great. Foolish enterprises are financed and a fe years of apparent prosperity culminate in a crisis. This is the rock towards which we are heading an will strike in a few years unless interest is adjusted to the rise i prices. If prices rise 10 per cent per annum, 11 per cent. interest should be regarded as low, bein equivalent to only 1 per cent. whe prices are stationary."

CONCENTRATED CONTROL.

The present doubts of financiers engaged in enterprises like Standard Oil, U. S. Steel, American Sugar and American Tobacco as to the stand that courts and legislators will take toward such corporations, make immediate recovery to recent high levels a doubtful probability.

LOCAL SITUATION.

From the above figures it is apparent that in the largest financial centers uncertainty as to security prices has resulted in more or less liquidation and accumulation of funds for other purposes rather than for stock market operations. This condition we expect will sooner or later be reflected in our local market.

California enterprises based upon unquestioned legality in conducting business operations, together with large earnings and the consequently regular and substantial dividend disbursements, should be attractive to the large class of monied people who are looking for just what we have to offer in this part of the country.

There are quite a number of excellent investments in our market today. The space here forbids even a reference to them in detail, but we shall be pleased to correspond with all who may be interested.

PICKETING A DEN.

Patrolmen Sent Out to Make Themselves Conspicuous and Watch Gambling Place.

Two officers were detailed yesterday to picket the gambling den in the rear of No. 533 South Main street, a description of which was given in The Times yesterday morning.

Patrolman Hackett and Mojonnier were placed there with instructions to make themselves conspicuous, let it be known that they were keeping a watch on the place, and thus "head off" the gambling.

"I had a report of this place, and instructed two men to investigate it," said Capt. Haupt yesterday. "They went down there and made an investigation, but reported that they were unable to get a man inside or unable to get in themselves, because a former patrolman was watching the door, and that he knew all the officers and private detectives. I had no evidence upon which to make a raid, and therefore I could do no more than picket the place.

"The former policeman, mentioned in The Times, was not proprietor of the place, but an employé, according to the information furnished me," said Acting Chief Dixon. "I gave orders two days ago to picket the place, and I understand the men were ordered there for duty Friday night. I was informed that a former policeman was on duty at the door for the purpose of preventing any police employés from entering. I was also informed that two other former policemen were employed there."

IDENTIFIED.

"DAYLIGHTER" OLD OFFENDER.

HE HAS SERVED FOUR TERMS FOR BURGLARY.

Real Name of John Page Is Said to Be Frank Beal—Bureau of Identification Has His Picture and Part of His Record—Wants no Lawyer to Defend Him.

John Page, arrested by Patrolman Schreiner on West Twenty-seventh street, Thursday afternoon, following an exciting chase, was yesterday identified as Frank Beal, a four-term penitentiary bird and bad man from San Francisco.

Page, the name given by Beal at the time of his arrest, was merely an alias, and a very poor attempt to hide his identity, for the bureau of identification carried his pictures, descriptions and a part of his history.

When Beal stated, at the time of his arrest, that he had been a burglar all his life, he told the truth. When he bragged that the police had never been able to apprehend him, he lied.

An investigation into his past showed that he had served two terms in Folsom and three in San Quentin. One of the latter, however, was a transfer from Folsom to suit the prisoner, making four sentences.

Two of these were from San Francisco. The other two are not listed. It is believed that his first sentence came more than sixteen years ago, probably from San Francisco. Both were on charges of burglary in the second degree. In August, 1899, he was sentenced to serve eight years in San Quentin, on a charge of second degree burglary. He was released in 1905, on good behavior, and promptly went to work again, being arrested and found guilty on a similar charge and sentenced to five years in San Quentin, February 13, 1906. He was released last September, after earning his rebate for good conduct. Little is known of his actions since that time. He says he went to New York, and then worked his way West, robbing in every city of importance along the route, and getting into Los Angeles from San Francisco.

He says that he had been in Los Angeles only one day when arrested in an attempt to rob a house at No. 720 West Twenty-eighth street. The officers working on the case do not believe this statement. They think that Beal had a good season here as a "daylight" burglar, and then left for San Francisco or some other point, where, through the medium of a woman confederate, he sold the plunder, and had just returned for more loot when arrested. He had $680 in his pockets at the time of his arrest, and the police believe he acquired this from the sale of stolen property.

Beal yesterday gave his address on Wall street. His room was searched, and his trunk and an empty jewel case were removed to the station. It was reported that nothing of importance was found.

Beal has been given an opportunity to see an attorney, but thus far has refused any legal aid.

"I've tried that attorney game before," he remarked yesterday. "All they do is get what little money I have, and they do me no good. I get it just the same, and I lose my liberty and my money, too. I've got a roll now, and I guess I will keep it."

He will be charged with attempted burglary, unless sufficient evidence upon which to base a more serious complaint is found.

The Southern California Investment Company reports four bungalows under way in its tract at Fifty-second and Denker. The sale of five lots at prices ranging from $640 to $880 is also reported.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

The Investment Building Company reports an active business in the Ingomar tract in Hollywood, together with contracts to build a number of bungalows in Los Angeles.

The Fontana Development Company last week awarded to Johnson & Shea of Riverside a contract for 50,000 feet of water pipe for its water distributing system at West Rialto.

E. E. Johnson, who for fifteen years collected taxes and licenses for the city of Los Angeles, and proved himself not only one of the most honest as well as capable but one of the most considerate of the public convenience of any person who ever served the city in any capacity, has gone into the real estate business. He has secured offices in the Mason building, on the corner of Fourth and Broadway. Mr. Johnson has been in Los Angeles for a good many years. In politics and otherwise he has made a numerous clientage of friends and no doubt will prove a successful operator in his new line of business. He knows real estate and Los Angeles affairs generally and should prove a wise counsellor to those who seek his advice or services.

B. Cooper Corbett, architect, has moved his offices from the Pacific Electric building to rooms 1128-29 W. P. Story building.

ELECTED ARCHITECT.

John C. Smith has been elected by the trustees of the Belvedere school district as architect for the new brick school building which that section will soon erect. The appropriation calls for the expenditure of $35,000 for site and building. The structure will have eight or more rooms and be two stories in height.

COST OF MARKSMANSHIP.

Great Skill Required of Gunners Who Become Almost Like Machines.

When a twelve-inch shell costs $600 or $800 and a broadside from the fleet that girdled the globe would have footed up $50,000, the cost of target practice can be imagined, says the Baltimore American.

Yet, the more the projectiles cost the more it pays to have men who can put the shells where they will do the most damage. Shots that miss are pure waste—a waste that may be appreciated from the fact that if those sixteen battleships that went around the Horn had been in action, their twelve-inch guns alone would have belched forth $32,000 worth of steel and powder every minute.

That's why two or three millions a year for our enlarged navy will be considered economical.

Then comes the real test. Close records are kept of practice where real ammunition is burned up. Furthermore, every officer is keenly alive to the necessity of seeing that his men make good records.

When the scores are high the officers in command of the good guns are favored in every possible way. They get the best assignments and are made to feel that they are high in the graces of the Navy Department.

On the other hand, the officers whose guns make poor records are required to explain in writing for their failure and receive small consideration.

The enlisted men, in addition to being the heroes of their comrades, receive extra money when they make records. Gun pointers, for instance, receive from $6 to $10 a month more than their regular pay when their percentage of hits is above a certain standard.

Once the range is secured these men must never, for the smallest fraction of a second, get out of the path of their gun. With a double motion to contend with the smallest variation means a miss. This can be appreciated for the fact that the average time that elapses from the time the button that discharges the gun is pressed till the projectile actually leaves the muzzle is three-tenths of a second. With an ordinary roll at an ordinary range, if the pointers lost the target for even that three-tenths of a second the projectile would miss its mark by five hundred yards.

The calculations and allowances that must be made are enough to make one dizzy. Yet on a battleship this is the ordinary routine. The men are keyed up to their work. There are both money and preferment for those who succeed. The officers choose their crews with the utmost care, for the welfare of both depends on the scores.

After a time the men become almost as perfect machines as the guns they handle. Every man has his part and does it. There is no friction, no failure. That is why America leads in marksmanship.

OPEN-AIR CURES.

Becoming Recognized by Physicians and Patients Suffering from Many Complaints.

Recent experiments in open-air treatment of disease were declared to have shown astonishing results by Dr. William P. Northrup in a lecture delivered yesterday at the Academy of Medicine, says the New York Herald. Dr. Northrup's address was the first of a series of twelve on prevention of disease, which are to be held at the academy under the joint auspices of the Public Health Education Committee of the Medical Society of the county of New York and the Hygiene Committee of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs.

Dr. Northrup declared that the generally accepted theory that foul air consisted of a deficiency of oxygen and a large surplus of carbonic acid caused by breathing was erroneous.

"The familiar symptoms of headache, dizziness, nausea, and faintness in crowded inclosures are caused by heat storing in the body," he said. "This heat storing is due to increased moisture in the atmosphere and its stagnation. In the Black Hole of Calcutta the victims died from the increased heat moisture and heat stagnation, not lack of oxygen."

It is steam heated persons who catch cold, Dr. Northrup said, and he declared that if temperature of rooms was kept beneath 70 deg. there would be a great decrease in pneumonia and many other ills. He said that outdoor treatment was now regarded as an almost certain cure for pneumonia, measles, and scarlet fever.

"The poor should wear clothing in preference of crowding in overheated rooms," he continued. "The body heat should be governed by coverings, and not by overheated air.

"There is no reason why children should not be as healthy in New York as in the country. Anaemic children are not made so by living in the city, as opposed to the country, but because in cold weather they are huddled in overheated rooms."

Dr. R. G. Freeman, visiting physician of the New York Foundling Hospital, told of having checked an epidemic of measles and scarlet fever in that institution by taking all of the patients to the roof, where they remained until cured.

"When the epidemic broke out," said Dr. Freeman, "we expected to lose many babies, but, thanks to the open-air treatment, there was not one death."

After the addresses Dr. Freeman declared, in answer to a question, that no baby was too young for the open-air treatment, provided it was warmly clothed. He also said that cold baths were better for young babies than warm baths if the baby glowed when taken from the water.

"Just dip them in and take them right out," he said. "You need not be afraid even if the water is very cold."

OIL— A 100-Barrel W
Is worth $100,

A number of men once combined their capital and went into the Oil business. The Standard Oil Co. was the name of their combination. None of them was rich when they started. None of them could have accomplished singly what they did in association. John D. Rockefeller borrowed money to get his start.

We would not advise borrowing money to invest in Oil, but we do declare that good opportunities are open in California—here and now—for a combination of men to get a lease on good ground, put down a well or two and found a fortune. It is a fact that 90% of California Oil companies are successful as against 90% of failures in mining.

We have good ground—160 acres in the Big Sespe District of Ventura county, where well drilling is least expensive, where the quality of oil is most remunerative, and where wells produce for years and years.

We have good neighbors, whose new wells pump about 100 barrels a day and whose old wells pump 60 to 65 barrels. We have water, wagon road and pipe line already on our property. We can be reached from Los Angeles and return trip made the same day. We have evidences of Oil pulsating out of our ground in the gulches. We have everything to inspire confidence in bringing in a producing well.

A 100-barrel well is worth $100,000. It will cost $10,000 to put it down. If you subscribe any part of the Ten Thousand you will be entitled to equivalent proportion of profits from production.

A few shares at 10c a share. Par value $1.00. Honest men to deal with, who put their money in with yours for common effort and reward. Bank references. Square deal and quick action. It won't take long to prove the ground. It should not take you long to decide how many shares you will take.

GAME OF HER YOUNG LIFE.

May Sutton Pushed to Wall by Miss Hotchkiss.

First American Girl to Win Set from Champion.

McLoughlin Defeats Bundy in Gruelling Match.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CORONADO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Coronado tennis champions 1910:

Men's singles—Maurice McLoughlin.

Ladies' singles—May Sutton.

Men's doubles — McLoughlin and Hardy.

Mixed doubles—Hazel Hotchkiss and McLoughlin.

Ladies' doubles—May Sutton and Mrs. Bruce beat Hazel Hotchkiss and Golda Myer 6-3, 2-6, darkness postponing final set.

Consolation men's singles—Winne Mace.

CORONADO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] May Sutton won the challenge match in women's singles from Hazel Hotchkiss after three sets of the hardest kind of tennis, the final score being 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

Maurice McLoughlin successfully defended the challenge cup from Tom Bundy by a 10-8, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 score. Both McLoughlin and Bundy have two legs on the Coronado trophy.

Never in the annals of American tennis was such a match played as in the challenge contest of ladies' singles between World's Champion May Sutton of Pasadena and national champion Hazel Hotchkiss of San Francisco. Miss Hotchkiss gave invincible May the most sensational match ever played on American soil.

The northerner won the first set ever scored against May by an American player, and won a total of thirteen games in a whirlwind exhibition, which forced the Sutton to rally her hardest to win the match. It was better than a "Sutton against Sutton." Hereafter the bogey of the tennis courts will be "a Hotchkiss against a Sutton."

"The Australian tennis enthusiasts would have been standing on their heads at witnessing such playing," said McLoughlin, after the struggle. The Sutton contingent must be closely related to the rooters of the Antipodes, then, for during the last two sets of the match the Sutton sisters and a line of grand stand fans were doubled over the stand railing like seasick kids returning from Catalina.

May played the aggressive game through the first set, quickly running out three games on two-point margins. Hazel preferred to meet the champion's driving strokes deep in the back court and returned many impossible cross-court volleys with her reliable back-hand strokes. The regularity with which Hazel got May's choicest drives quickly ground the edge off of her opponent's game.

Whenever Hazel forced the net she invariably won her point. For once May was unable to pass her opponent with her terrific forearm drives. Had Hazel played the net more consistently she might have won, but she preferred to hug the back line and try to defeat May where the champion was strongest. May lobbed pretty accurately when Hazel followed her serve and this may have made the northerner more cautious.

STARTS OUT WELL.

Hazel won her first game on a deuce score in the fourth session of the opening set. This was a pretty good feather at the start, being the first vantage game ever forced on May by an American player. The northerner took the net position on May's serve and chopped one of May's hardest drives to the side lines out of the Sutton's reach. Hazel repeated the net play three times, allowing May but a single point in the game.

May braced and passed Hazel after hard volleying, winning the sixth game. Hazel again broke through May's serve and won the seventh, but lost the next two and set. May's last point being cinched on a clever cross-court bat. The stands began to sit up, the chappies forgot their hairline trouser creases, and the Sutton sisters began to hug the rail.

Hazel ran out two straight in the second set, the first game on long rallies ending at the net, and the second through May's faulty service. May then had a gift of luck, pulling out two games, the deciding point being gained by the balls trembling over the net.

Hazel took her own serve game and May followed suit. With the sun in her eyes Hazel then rallied superbly, smashing May's hardest drives with beautiful back-hand drives, which found the vulnerable spots near the side lines, and netted three games and the set by 6-3 score.

"Too steady for me," said May between sets. The champion had her fighting face screwed into unladylike shapes, while Hazel was as cool as a veteran. May took the first three games, the third being the first love game of the match. Hazel was playing with all her strength, but many drives fell into the net. Miss Hotchkiss ran out an ace and May pulled down another game.

Every point was won only after long rallies and the pace was fierce. May was puffing like a roped calf and the sisters were hanging on the rail by their elbows. Hazel ran out three more, the first from a deuce score and the last on faultless service.

With the score 4-all the real rooting began, the impartial crowd pulling alike for both players. The last two games were the best of the whole match. May found the side lines with lightning drives, yet Hazel made returns which were little short of marvelous. The northerner lost, 6-4.

The victor took fifteen games to thirteen for the vanquished.

Hazel's showing throughout the tournament has been a revelation of

FOX TERRIER BEST.

Smooth Coated Animal for Fourth Time Wins Honor of Best Breed in Dog Show.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—For the fourth successive year a smooth fox terrier has been judged the best dog, regardless of age, breed or sex, at the annual bench show of the Westminster Kennel Club in Madison Square Garden.

The honor has been awarded this year to Sabine Rarebit, owned by F. H. Towler of Orange Tex.

For three years Warren Remedy, owned by Winthrop Rutherford of Allamuchy, N. J., has carried off this championship, but she was beaten in her own class this season by the Texas dog.

Cause of Higher Education Given Black Eye by Rough-House Tactics at Stanford Ball Game—Annual Scrap After Contest Ends With Several Unconscious.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The annual baseball game between the sophomores and freshmen ended in a riot at the beginning of the ninth inning this afternoon. The teams usually fight for possession of the ball, after the game, but they could not wait until the game was over this year.

The score was 8 to 4, in favor of the "Sophs," at the beginning of the last period, and it was evident that the "freshies" had no chance to win. The ball was passed by one of the "baby" players to a classmate, who was in an automobile, prepared to make off with the trophy. Before he could get away, the "Sophs" in a body charged the machine, and immediately 150 men were engaged in a fierce "rough house."

Many of the students who were drawn into the fray were "dolled up," in preparation for social engagements in the evening, and much good clothing was reduced to rags. The fight was prolonged, and rendered more complicated because bystanders threw several balls among the combatants.

Finally the "Sophs" got away with one ball by relaying it across a field to a student who was mounted on a wheel. The "Freshies" then got away with one. Which classes secured the right ball probably will never be known.

Several students were knocked "cold" in the scrimmage, and not a few were stripped of nearly all their clothing.

An all-star baseball nine, including Stanford and California ex-'varsity players, defeated the Cardinal 'varsity by the score of 5 to 1. The turf diamond on the football field was used for the first time, and proved satisfactory.

Bert Ball of Los Angeles, was behind the bat and "Mickey" Reed twirled. Mow Mitchell was at short stop and McFadden was shifted to second base.

Thelle and Rutledge members of the Stanford team last year formed the All-Star battery. Stanford was unable to clout the ball at the right time. Thelle held his old team mates down to two hits. Ball played a heady game and showed a lack of practice in throwing to second. The line-up:

Stanford.	Position.	All-Stars.
Ball	catcher	Rutledge
Reed, Jones	pitcher	Thelle
Ganong	first base	Peters
McFadden	second base	Orr
Mitchell	short stop	Sampson
Tallant, Jordan	third base	Friene

AUTO SHOW LIGHTS SOON TO BE DIMMED.

Crowds Visit Exhibit at Grand Avenue Rink and Hempel's Show Is Great Success—Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Worth of Cars Sold.

THOUSANDS of persons have visited the Automobile Show of Southern California and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of cars have been sold. Money has been plentiful and good times are to come for the dealers in the future.

There is not a disappointed exhibitor at the rink. Everybody has done well. Prospects are numerous and cars have been sold in every booth. One dealer disposed of his entire show display and must send to his factory for cars to begin work with tomorrow.

Everything has been done in a business manner. Hempel has been careful to give every exhibitor a square deal and tomorrow every man who had anything to do with the show will have a chance to study in black and white just what was spent and can find out just how much rebate he will receive.

There has not been a hitch. Aided by Les Henry, who had been at the show every minute, Hempel has ended the week with everybody pleased and with no kicks coming. Though the men in the booths are tired they are perfectly satisfied with results.

Lights at the Auto Show will be turned out tonight and the Grand Avenue Rink will be darkened. The show has been a success from the start and every dealer and exhibitor interested in the exhibit will receive a fair-sized rebate. There is not a dealer at the show who has sold less than one car. This means that everybody has numbers of prospects to work on during the coming weeks.

Crowds have visited the show every night. Great interest has been manifested in the cars, and as a result at least 200 machines and perhaps more will be added to the large number of automobiles owned in Los Angeles. The high and low-priced cars have benefited and there has been no disposition on the part of the buyers to select any particular model.

The last week has been notable in low-priced circles. The machines at $1000 and less have had a wonderful run. The public at the auto show lingered long around the booths where the low-priced product was on display. Everybody who visited the show had a desire to own a motor car and went away with the full determination of purchasing a machine if possible.

There was something doing every minute in the high-priced booths also. The salesman in the Watson Auto Company's section is still wondering what happened. He has been selling cars for only a short time. A visitor wandered into the booth during the show, asked the price of the Fiat Gunboat, one of the handsomest cars on the floor, and when told it is $6500, wrote his check in full for the amount and will take the car tomorrow.

This was only one of many scenes enacted on the floor of the Grand Avenue Rink during show week. The crowd last night thronged the building the broke the record for the week. The Royal was leading in the voting contest for the most popular car last night, with the Dorris second, and the Firestone-Columbus third. William P. Bosbyshell was the most popular autoist, with F. O. Nelson a close second.

TILLINGHAST ROASTED AFTER AN INVESTIGATION.

New England Aero Club Director Unable to Find Evidences That So-called Aviator Ever Left the Ground. Opportunity Given to Make Good His Statements.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WORCESTER (Mass.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Wallace E. Tillinghast, the Worcester inventor, who claimed to have made a hundred ascensions in an aëroplane of his own invention, has been denounced by J. Walter Flagg of this place, director of the New England Aëro Club, who was appointed by the club to investigate the claim of his fellow townsmen.

Tillinghast startled the country recently with a statement that he made a flight from Boston to New York on the night of September 8, 1909, reached an altitude of 4000 feet and remained in mid-air forty-six minutes while the motors were being repaired by two machinists. He refused to give any details of the trip.

Tillinghast would give no particulars but promised the New England Aëro Club to exhibit the Aëroplane this week at the Boston Aëroplane show. He has made no entry and Mr. Flagg has made an informal report. Mr. Flagg says:

"I believe this man is a fakir, that the claims he has made are unfounded, and I do not believe he has made a single flight. You may better understand how thoroughly convinced I am of the truth of the report I have made when I add that it is done regardless of the fact that Mr. Tillinghast said to me, 'I have done all they say I have, and more. I have made 100 flights in my machine and more.' He had a chance to give out a sensible story based on scientific principles, and refused to do it.

"After a searching investigation I do not find one fact to warrant the statement that he has ever made an ascension or completed a machine in which to fly."

TWO MILLION DOLLARS WOR OF AUTOS SOLD.

Three Hundred and Twenty Thou and Spectators See Great Exhib and Dealers from Siberia, Mexic and England Admire Late Mod Motor Cars.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive patch.] The annual Chicago auto bile show at the Coliseum closed night, after having broken all ords of previous shows in attendan retail sales to individual buyers in the number of cars and access ies displayed.

Two hunrred thousand tickets w sold during the week, the largest tendance being on Thursday even dealers' night, when 1000 dealers ga ered from every corner of the Uni States were in attendance, bring with them prospective buyers from far distant as Saskatchewan, Cana and Mexico City.

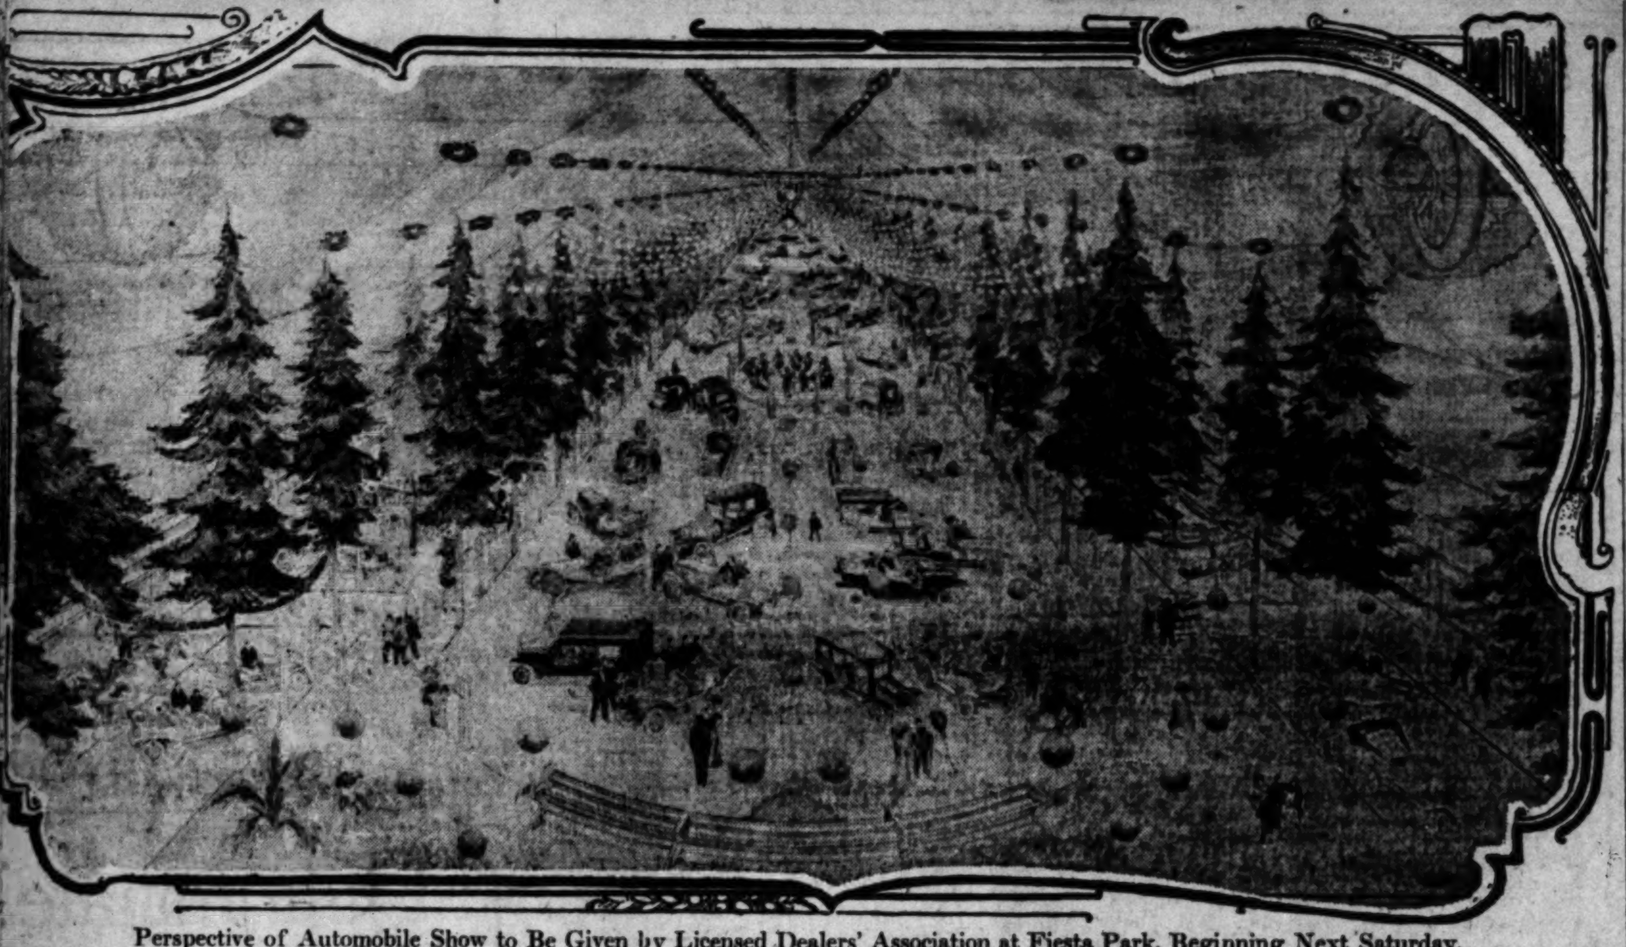
In striking contrast to previ shows, there were few dealers c tracts closed by manufacturers, th contracts having been made bef the show, while the numbe of c ous spectators was greatly reduc The management reports that all p vious sales records have been brok Thomas B. Jefferey & Co. are giv credit for the largest gross sales d ing the week, the total Saturday ni for the Rambler aggregating $250,00

The motorcycle exhibit assumed proportions of a big feature this ye fifteen different makes being displa The sales of these vehicles indica how generally they are being adop for practical as well as pleasure pu poses.

From a mechanical standpoint, chassis of all cars exhibited showe general tendency toward standardi tion of parts, the higher-priced c appearing much the same in their sential features, as they have pre ously. The older manufacturers giving more attention to the care making of parts rather than to th rapid production, while the ne concerns are incorporating in th cars as many of the standard featu as possible in order to tempt t buyer with good features at a lo price.

The weather for the week was pe fect for outdoor demonstrations, d fering in this respect from autom bile show weather of past years, wh outdoor exhibitions were hampered at least one snowstorm.

There was much comment upon t manifest change in the public at tude toward the automobile, few pe ple questioning the ability of the ca to adapt themselves to all practi uses.



Perspective of Automobile Show to Be Given by Licensed Dealers' Association at Fiesta Park, Beginning Next Saturday, ne preparation for which a fortune is being expended and on which the ideas of the keenest auto dealers of America are being lavished to make it one of the greatest successes of the country.

ON ANXIOUS SEAT.

USTLING MOTOR CARS WEST BY EXPRESS FOR AUTO SHOW.

Licensed Dealers to Secure Cream of Chicago Exhibi-tion for Fiesta Park Auto Classic—Wonderful Display of This Year's Models in Preparation—Manager Con-well Keeps Things Moving.

VERY inch of canvas is in place for the Licensed Automobile Show which is to open at Fiesta Park rday night. The immense inclos- is to be decorated by Wednesday on the day following the first of 200 cars will be placed on the 80,- feet of floor space. The show, in opinion of Manager Conwell, will se anything ever seen in the t.

alers who are to exhibit at the nsed Show are on the anxious seat. ral thousands of dollars' worth of some new automobiles are on the here from the East. At least a n carloads are lost en route. All e cars must be here by Wednes- and the wires are being kept hot een here and Kansas City and ago.

least a dozen dealers have been rying the last few days over the pect of getting cars here in time the show. P. H. Greer is trying cate two carloads of Mitchells ch were shipped in plenty of time the show. He has heard nothing e cars for ten days.

rman W. Church has shipped his edo-body Stoddard-Dayton by ex- s that it may get here in time for show. The car left Chicago last t and should be here by Thursday Friday. The Stoddard-Dayton Mo- Car Company will have a hand- e display and have taken one of larger spaces in the big show.

M. Young is to exhibit a polished Columbia chassis which will be of the show attractions. This car nished so carefully that each part be handled with a white silk glove out soiling the fabric. In addi- Young is to exhibit a Columbia ing car and a Columbia Torpedo. e of the mechanical attractions at show will be a Lozier chassis, in ion, from the motor back to the rential. Even the cylinders will pen that the operation of the pis- rods can be watched carefully. rear wheels will be elevated and electric motor will be attached to crank shaft and the car, with its y part in motion, can be carefully mined. Nash & Fennimore are to e a handsome display of the Lo- which will include the Briarcliffe els and the big touring car.

earns cars are to be exhibited by Elmore Motor Car Company. D. Rose has purchased enough space show the Stearns and the Elmore touring cars and roadsters. The -powered cars are to be given a minent place and the factory is to itself proud by sending its complete fit of new models here for the show.

ONE YEAR AHEAD.

he Eastern Motor Car Company exhibit the only 1911 model in the w. A six-cylinder Stevens-Duryea the type which the factory will make this coming year, is to be the center of the booth attraction of the Stevens cars. Messrs. Dunbar and Sparks are prepared to make a particularly handsome exhibit as already two of their big touring cars are here.

Miller & Williams will show Pullman cars. They will exhibit a Pullman toy-tonneau touring car with a glass inclosed motor which will be kept running constantly. Their exhibit is to be choice as it is the first time the Pullman has been exhibited in an automobile show in Los Angeles.

Premier cars are to be shown by the Schwaebe-Atkinson Motor Car Company. The concern is just removing to its new quarters on Olive street and every Premier model now being made by the factory is to be exhibited at the Licensed Show.

There will be a full line of Buicks. The Howard Motor Car Company will show the Buick White Streak, the Buick "forty," winner of the Los Angeles-Phoenix race, and a big Buick touring car, besides a Buick roadster.

The Woolwine Motor Car Company will show the Oldsmobile in the close coupled type, finished in gray and blue. These two types are radical departures from the regular Olds models. The same concern will show the Cartercar in the touring car and roadster classes and will enter the commercial car exhibit with the Rapid line of trucks.

H. O. Harrison is to be one of the large exhibitors at the licensed show. He is bringing Everitt cars by express from the Chicago show especially for the exhibit. These cars will be shown in Los Angeles for the first time and will attract considerable attention. They will enter the $1500 field with a strong bid for recognition. The Everitt is made by the Metzger Motor Car Company, with William Metzger as president. This prominent manufacturer was one of the men who first made the Cadillac and later the E. M. F. cars famous.

In addition to the Everitt line, Harrison will also show the Peerless in every model. There will be a big Peerless touring car, a close-coupled Peerless, a limousine and a town car. These high-class machines, which will be among the highest-priced models at the show, will be exhibited in a booth near the center of the big inclosure. Harrison will reach here from San Francisco this week to superintend the placing of his exhibit.

W. E. Bush will show his Pierce-Arrow cars. Incidentally, Bill is the luckiest man at the exhibit. He is entirely sold out, but the factory will send two handsome Pierce-Arrow cars here for the show in order to give Bush a chance to make good on his floor space.

TWICE MANAGER.

The Maxwell-Briscoe Company will show a full line of Maxwell cars. The classy little Maxwell "Baby," the $900 two-cylinder Maxwell and the Maxwell touring car will be shown. J. S. Conwell, manager of the Maxwell branch, is also manager of the automobile show.

William R. Ruess will exhibit a full line of Pope-Hartford cars. Here the bright colors will predominate, as the decorators have been given a chance to make good on the Pope, and the result is something startling. Dressed in their brightest hues, the Popes will attract a deal of attention.

Jackson cars are to be sold by the Thompson Automobile Company. A full line of the popular models will be on display, and C. H. Thompson will be on hand to introduce the visitors to the new Jackson models, just from the factory.

The Bekins-Williams Motor Car Company is to exhibit the Atlas. The Elmore, which the Elmore Motor Car Company will show, and the Atlas are the only two-cycle models to be seen at the show. The Atlas is not as well known now as it will be after the show is over. The local agents are shipping new models direct from the factory for the show. The Atlas will be shown in two models.

Mora cars are to be shown in four models. The cars are not here yet, but the local agents expect them early this week. They are doing everything in their power to hurry them across the Rocky Mountains.

PLENTY OF POWER.

Herbert Brown will show the Knox. His handsome big Knox close-coupled touring car, one of the finest machines ever turned out by the Knox people, is here. The car has plenty of power, lines that are particularly pleasing, and is ideal for touring. A Knox roadster will be shown here for the first time.

Wilson & Buffington will make a particularly handsome display of Thomas cars. The center of the booth will have the big Thomas limousine recently purchased by W. T. Wyatt, of the Mason Operahouse. There will also be a Thomas town car and a big touring car. In addition to the Thomas line, the same concern will exhibit a full line of Moline cars.

The Wade Motor Sales Company will show the Marmon cars. These classy machines are in the licensed ranks and have made good in the East in several gruelling contests. The Marmon records are to be displayed in the booth, and the story of the Marmon achievements is to be told by the agent.

Ralph C. Hamlin had a cause for worry yesterday when he learned that his handsome Franklin Torpedo, which is to be the center of his exhibit here, had been billed elsewhere. He wired at once, and late last night received the news that the car will be sent to Los Angeles by express, and will leave the factory tomorrow. He has purchased the car outright in order to show it here.

This handsome air-cooled model is to be the star of Hamlin's classy exhibit. The first of the interior equipment for his cars reached Los Angeles yesterday, and Hamlin will have everything that is possible for the convenience of those using limousines and town cars. In addition to other things the Franklin limousine will contain two silver-mounted thermo bottles, a medicine case and surgical instruments.

THEY'RE ALL HERE.

FLANDERS TWENTY HERE.

Handsome Little Four-Cylinder Long Looked for Can Now Be Examined at Leisure.

The Flanders "Twenty," one of the lowest-priced four-cylinder cars on the market, is here. This is the machine which Flanders of the Everitt-Metzger-Flanders Company promised to build so cheaply that the "automobile industry would be revolutionized."

When the machines reached the garage of the Lord Motor Car Company Friday they were immediately surrounded by a curious throng of autoists who are anxious to see what the East has paid so much attention to. The Flanders is a nobby little machine.

At a time when the low-priced car is commanding great attention, the Flanders appears with a price that is startling. The Lord Motor Car Company has a polished steel Flanders chassis and a complete modern Flanders car. There is every reason to believe the model will prove particularly attractive to those desiring a low-priced car that will deliver the goods.

The Lord Motor Car Company is preparing to make a large exhibit at the Licensed Show. The Flanders will be shown as the lowest priced car in the booth and the Studebaker will be the top-notcher. The firm has plenty of floor space on which to exhibit.

There will not be an exhibit at the coming Licensed Show which will be more complete than that of the Lord Motor Car Company's, which will consist of two Flanders at $850. Two E. M.F.'s at $1400; one seven-passenger Studebaker touring car $4150; one seven-passenger Stundebaker landaulet, $5250; one Studebaker electric victoria, $1950; one Studebaker electric landaulet, $2400.

L. J. Ollier, factory representative of the E.F.M. company, is in Los Angeles and will be here until after the show to further the interests of the E.M.F. and Flanders cars. Ollier represents the E.M.F. company in territory west of Denver.

The Pasadena branch of the Lord Motor Car Company is nearing completion rapidly. In about two weeks they will be able to occupy this salesroom and garage, which will be the finest in Southern California.

AUTOMATIC TANK FILLER.

Los Angeles Man Invents Bucket for Gasoline Which Has Self-closing Device—May Be Boon.

Here is the latest in the accessories line—automatic funnel bucket for filling the gasoline tank. All that one need do is fill the bucket with gasoline, take off the cap to the tank, and turn the fluid loose. It will not overflow, as a valve in the bottom of the bucket is self-closing as soon as the tank is filled. There is a screen which is to go with the bucket.

F. E. Brown of this city is the inventor. Brown purchased an Elmore, and after filling the gasoline tank a number of times in the ordinary way, hit upon the automatic plan for filling the receiver. Then he patented his bucket.

The bucket has a handle for operating the valve, and can be used either for filling gasoline, water, or any other fluid. It would be of service for filling milk cars. Brown is in business on East Ninth street, and expects to put the buckets on the market at once. He will exhibit his patent at the Licensed Automobile Show.

Grand Prix Is Off.

A rumor is current in Europe to the effect that the Automobile Club of France, while deciding not to hold a Grand Prix race next year, on the grounds of insufficient entries, has granted permission to private parties to organize an international race. The report runs that the event will be restricted to cars of not more than eighty horse-power, and that a sum of $20,000 will be offered in prizes. The Dieppe Circuit is mentioned as the course for the race.

Large Speedway.

The board of trade in Little Rock, Ark., is backing a movement to convert the Clinton Park tract in that city into a speedway. The plot contains 106 acres, and, by incorporating a loop, a course three and one-half miles in length can be laid out.

GOING SOME.

ORTUNE SPENT IN EXPRESS CHARGES ON AUTO SHOW CARS.

ORMAN W. CHURCH, Coast representative for the Stoddard-Dayton Motor Car Company, spend several thousand dol- s to get his cars here for Licensed Automobile Show. He bring a complete line of Stod- ds and of Baker electrics, and will e them crated and shipped direct m the factory and from the Chi- o Automobile Show.

ncluded in the long list which the ddard-Dayton people will show is a en-passenger fifty-horse-power tor- lo model, which is now on its way express. A big fifty-horse-power ousine will also be shipped in the ne way in order to get it here in e for the Fiesta Park exhibit. This is just finished at the factory, and said to be one of the handsomest chines the concern has ever turned . It is finished with light broad- th with the metal parts silver- ted.

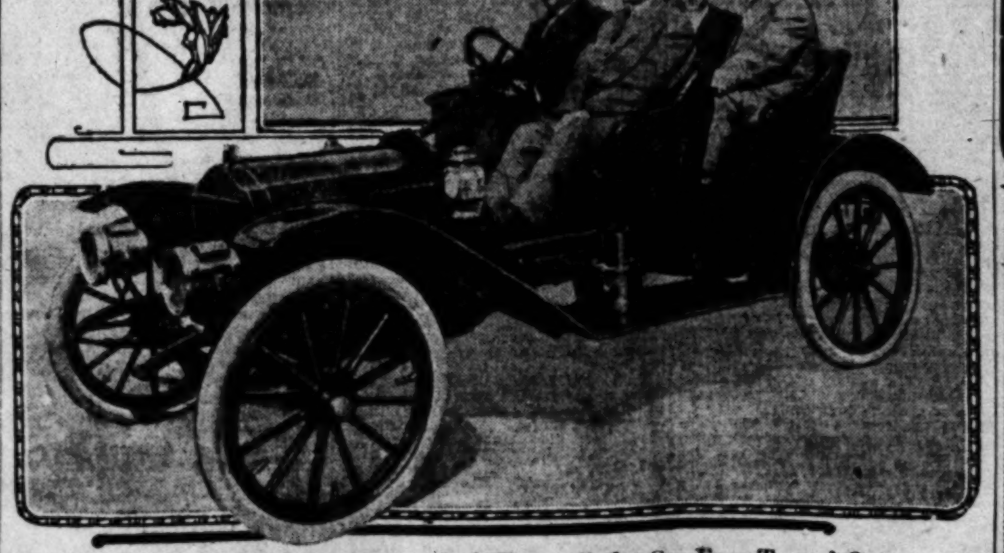
nother handsome Stoddard will be Model T limousine, which sells for , and the Stoddard coupé, which sells for $2100. There will also be a Model F touring car and a Model F polished chassis, and a Model K four-passenger demi-tonneau Stoddard.

There will also be a Model K five-passenger close-coupled Stoddard, a forty-horse-power Model A touring car, a forty-horse-power Model C toy-tonneau Stoddard, a thirty-horse-power Model B touring car and a thirty-horse-power roadster.

The Stoddard-Dayton people will also make a complete exhibit of electrics showing every Baker electric model. Chief among these will be the Baker shaft-drive, which is the latest thing in the electric line now on the market.

There will be a Baker coupé four-passenger model, a Baker Victoria, with top finished in blue, a particularly handsome model, and a Victoria with buggy top finished in maroon. Another Baker Victoria will be finished with leather-upholstered top.

Again, the Baker electric display is to be costly. Church must ship his cars from Cleveland here by express, at a cost of $19.50 a hundred. They will also come crated, and the railroad company guarantees to get them here in time for the opening date.



Flanders "Twenty," Lowest-priced Four-cylinder Car Ever Turned Out, which the Lord Motor Car Company received yesterday. This machine has proved a sensation in the East and is to be one of the attractions at the coming Licensed Show.

AUTOIST FINDS AN HONEST MAN.

Diogenes would have ended his quest for an honest man had he carried his lantern down Spring street yesterday morning. Harry Olive, who sells Stoddard-Dayton cars, claims to have found the man the old Greek philosopher sought for in vain. Harry says the man's name is W. B. Haines, of No. 1064 West Seventh street.

When Olive returned to his Stoddard touring car yesterday and found the two front lamps smashed he was angry. He surveyed the damage and then gave vent to his feelings. While he was looking around for additional damage he espied a card stuck carefully into the top of the coil box.

The card contained the name of Haines and a note to the owner of the car which read.

"Backed into you and smashed your lamps. Sorry, but can't wait. Will pay you in full."

The name and address was signed to the note.

There is a sequel. Olive called on the man who smashed his lamps and refused to receive payment because he said it felt so good to find an honest man.

LIKES THE OLDS.

Tacoma Man Who Bought One of the First Cars Comes Here and Will Purchase Late Model.

John E. Heasty of Tacoma, who is here on a visit, was one of the first men to purchase an Oldsmobile. He now owns a 1910 Olds, but has driven Oldsmobiles for the last seven years. He is enthusiastic over the work of the cars, and says he is satisfied with them and does not want any other model.

Though he has been approached by agents for almost every other car, Heasty has never owned anything but an Olds. From the first time when he drove the old curved-dash buggy piano-top body car until the last finished product, he has stayed with the same make of machine.

Heasty purchased his present model in Omaha a year ago, and now he wants the very latest. He has placed an order with Woods R. Woolwine for a 1910 Oldsmobile "Limited," one of the latest cars turned out by the factory, which will be exhibited by the Woolwine Motor Car Company at the Licensed Automobile Show.

Big Racing Track.

It is said there will be erected and made ready for use at the next Lakewood, N. J., season an automobile racing course which will cost at least $500,000. The course will be eight miles in length and complete in every particular.

The Cadillac "Thirty" exhibit at the Licensed Show will be complete. Don Lee will show a touring car and a roadster, a stripped chassis, and will show a motor in operation, with the clutch and transmission exposed.

Motor Ambulance.

The latest thing in Indianapolis is a motor ambulance which, to all outward appearances, is but an elegantly appointed limousine pleasure car. A double floor eliminates all sound of the machinery while the patient is in the car, and, having all the outward earmarks of an ordinary car, the machine avoids arousing the morbid curiosity of street crowds.

WHERE ARE THEY?

CHALMERS CARS ARE LOST WHILE EN ROUTE TO SHOW.

EARLE C. ANTHONY, manager of the Western Motor Car Company, has lost two carloads of Chalmers-Detroit cars. They are a part of his exhibit at the Licensed Show and Earle is anxious to locate them, so anxious in fact that he is burning up the wires in his efforts to find his lost machines.

These cars are to form a large part of the exhibit the Western will make at the Licensed Show and unless they arrive there will be a vacant space in the otherwise handsome display of Packards, Chalmers, and Hudson cars. Railroad officials are also conducting a hunt for the machines.

Though a three-day search has been made all along the line from La Honda to Chicago, the Chalmers have not been found and the local agent is waiting for news which does not come. Meanwhile he is going ahead with plans for the show and expects to make one of the largest exhibits at Fiesta Park.

The first choice of space gave Anthony 2300 feet. He was obliged to add 400 feet to this, giving his company a total of 2700 feet on which to display its large line. The space is located near the band stand and also near the center of the large exhibit.

The Western Motor Car Company will show a Packard thirty limousine and a Packard thirty touring car. There will also be a Packard "18" limousine and a Packard "18" town car. There will be a Packard thirty phaeton.

The Chalmers line will consist of a Chalmers forty, a pony-tonneau, roadster and touring car all in the forty model. In the thirty-horse-power types the inside-operated coupé, the touring car, the roadster, and the pony tonneau with a polished chassis will be shown. The forty-horse-power cars are included in the lost shipment.

For the first time the Hudson touring car will be shown. This is a low-priced machine which has attracted considerable attention in the East and is certain to be popular here. The regular Hudson roadster, which proved such a good seller, will also be shown.

The greatest demand in Europe at the present moment is for low-powered four-cylinder motors, as small, as light, and as silent as possible. The overall length of motors has been cut down in a remarkable degree since the introduction of the monobloc method of casting.

Twenty-seven dieffrent makes of cars, all of which are either manufactured or sold in Grand Rapids, Mich., are to be displayed at the show to be held in that city on February 17, 18 and 19, under the auspices of the Grand Rapids automobile dealers and manufacturers.

In the future all automobiles owned by the city of Cleveland, O., will be painted bright yellow with blue trimmings. It is expected that this striking and distinctive coloring will serve to give city cars a right of way, and, in addition, it may prevent unauthorized pleasure excursions and joy rides.

erican-Made Cars Versus Foreign Types.

BY F. E. MOSKOVICS.

comparison of the mechanical de- of the cars exhibited at the Auto- le Show of Southern California the two great national shows at York, shows a remarkable simi- y in the general mechanical trend. rally, the local show, being small- s more condensed and for some oses easier of analysis.

e pressed steel frame has entirely rseded the old channel iron and d frame construction with one eworthy exception, the Franklin, this car by great specialization has loped the wooden frame to a re- kable degree. With this exception pressed steel frame is now uni- ally used. In running gears, the I n front axle of either the Lemoine he inverted Elliott types has al- t universally been adopted by the t conservative designers.

e few are still daring enough to with the tubular type and several llent examples of pressed steel s patterned after the famous cia are shown. In the rear axle gn and construction, so far as rican cars are concerned, the shaft e has practically superseded the n and in this field there are two inct types, the more expensive floating type rear axle and the f or semi-floating type.

e difference between the two types at in the full floating type the load ics are entirely carried by the axle sing and the driving strains only carried by the axle. Excellent ex- ples of this type of construction are n in the American, Dorris, and on local California and Durocars. robably the most remarkable de- pment from the mechanical stand- nt of rear axle design is shown in 45-horse-power shaft drive Fiat. s axle represents one of the most nderful examples of the art of pressed el ever used in mechanical construc- n and to the writer's definite knowl- re it took the engineers at the Turin tory several years to develop the s which turned out this job.

DISTINCT ENGINES.

n engine design the American prac- e has developed a school typically own, copying the foreigners where perience has proven them right. The merican engineer has avoided the le complications of manufacture and all which make the foreign motor difficult to produce in quantities. der American manufacturing meth- , jigs and fixtures are substituted the thumb rule accuracy and skill of European workmen; or, as one at American manufacturer put it the writer, "it is the total elimina- on of the personal equation of the kman."

n Europe the generalities of design ve been practically standardized ile in this country there are still ny different ideas as to the best type motor—for instance, in Continental rope with one exception, every high ss car is now built with the cylin- s cast in pairs and valves on opposite es. This relates to motors above een horse-power.

he exception to this rule is the rld's famous Renault. Here we are re catholic and the choice seems to about evenly divided. Excellent ex- ples of the valve of one side con- ction at the local show are the Rambler, the American Lexington, and the smaller Durocar. With the valves on opposite sides the Fiat and Isotta represent the best of foreign engineering practice and the Royal and the larger Durocar are excellent samples of the American school.

The overhead valve type has made great strides in the last few years. Two beautiful examples of this design were exhibited at the rink—the Pennsylvania and the Dorris. Both these cars have the usual snap and vim of the overhead type.

Another example of clever engineering on an entirely new line is exemplified by the Ford with its nicely designed cylinders cast en bloc. By a clever arrangement of a copper gasket the head is quickly removable for the cleansing of the combustion chamber of carbon and also allows almost perfect inspection of the valve seats.

In finishing the inspection of the motors a word might be put in on general arrangement of detail under the bonnet.

To a practiced engineer this is as important as neatness and dress to the woman. Excellent examples of pains and thought in design are evidenced in the Firestone-Columbus, Whiting, Sterling and Auburn. In clutches the sliding gear has practically displaced the planetary and in this field there is quite a discussion as to the location of the transmission. The opinion seems to be about evenly divided, our best engineers placing them on the rear axle and also in the middle of the chassis.

AXLE DESIGN.

The best instances of the rear axle type are the Pennsylvania, Sterling and American-Simplex. With the transmission in the chassis type the Fiat, Isotta, Dorris and Royal are excellent examples. In clutch design our engineers again have diversified ideas. The object being always to design a light free-acting clutch, and the present show displays a fairly even distribution among the multiple disc and the cone clutches.

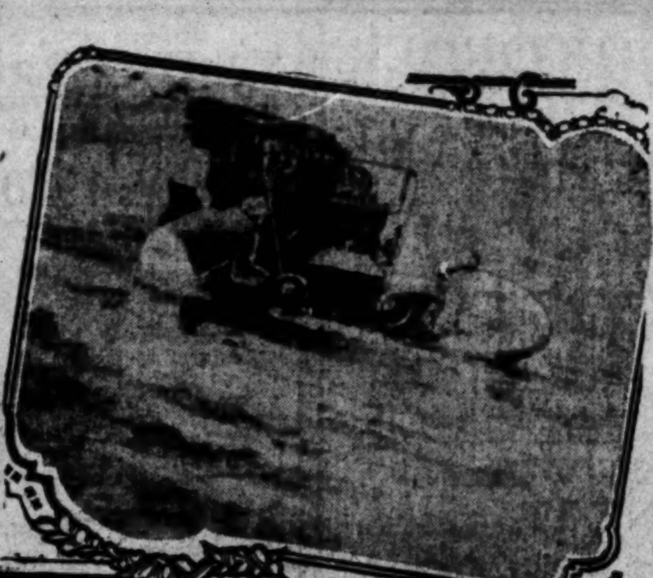
The foreign school is well exemplified by the Fiat and the Isotta, both showing light multiple disc clutches. Good examples of the cone clutch are the American and the smaller Durocar. In generalities of design the American practice has made remarkable strides in the last year. Especially in those little niceties of design and detail which please the eye of the connoisseur.

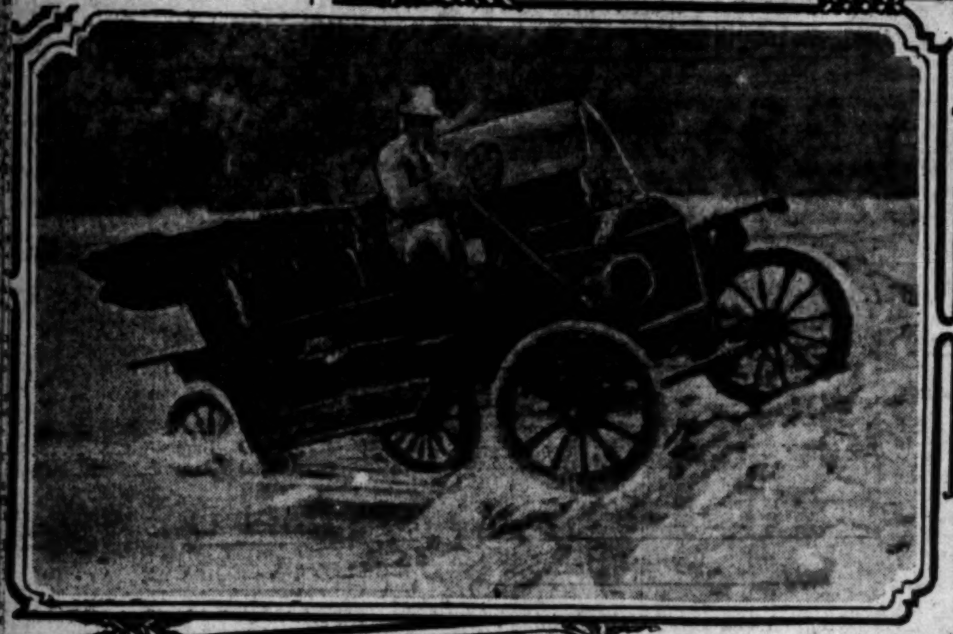
More care is being taken in the location and housing of ignition wires, and special emphasis might be placed on the almost total use of gracefully designed copper and brass tubing for water and inlet piping in place of the crude and cumbersome plumbing of former days.

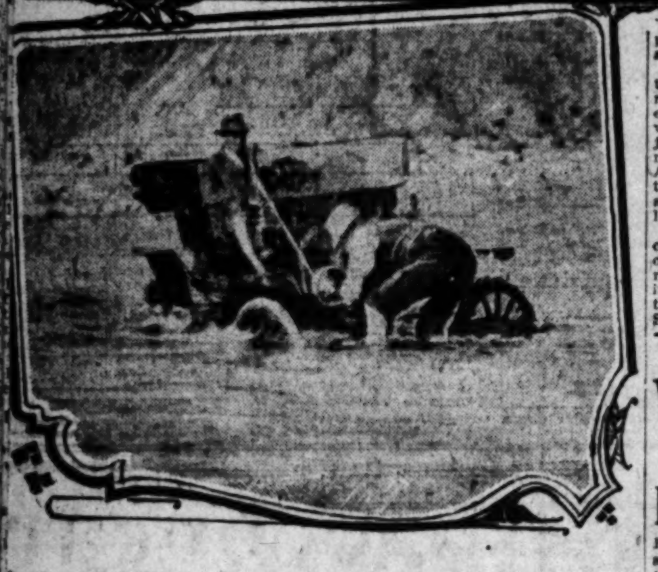
This also covers the neat and careful handling of oil piping and the really ingenious disposition of this formerly unsightly device. All in all, the American automobile manufacturer is today equal in mechanical detail to the foreigner, and in the field of quantity production there is simply no comparison.

The best example of this is that at the last New York show two of the most famous English automobile dealers were the guests of the writer and when closely questioned as to the object of their visit to this country admitted that they were here to purchase American medium-priced cars, as neither England or France could produce anything to compare with our cars listing up to $1500.

Charles W. Letts of the English firm of Charles Jerrott Letts and Company of London, concessionaries of the Lorraine-Detrich was especially profuse in his praise of the performances of the Ford and the Cadillac in the late Scottish reliability trials.







Fording the Swollen San Gabriel River in a Ford.

ere the water is too deep for a horse to cross. E. Roger Stearns and party were the first to cross the stream this year in an automobile, the Ford tourabout, which is seen covered with water and then emerging on the opposite bank. When the car wheels became wedged between the huge rocks it was necessary for the autoists to enter the icy waters and give the car a lift.

MITCHELL RECORD.

Greer and Robbins Sell Twenty-four Cars During Week While Auto Show Is in Progress.

P. H. Greer, of the Greer-Robbins Company, reports show week the biggest of the season. While the exhibitors at the Automobile Show of Southern California were selling cars the Mitchell agents were disposing of Mitchell models on South Main street.

Here is the list of sales which the firm vouches for: Twenty-four were delivered to the following named persons: Arthur Braly, A. Skinner, W. Dickinson, T. J. Grass, Hollywood; Gill Bros., Oxnard; Kessler Machine and Supply Company, San Diego; McKinsey & Bellows, Long Beach; T. J. Beckwith, Oxnard; Erb & Drury, Bakersfield; A. L. Ryder, Pasadena; Dr. H. Reed, Ontario; Los Angeles aqueduct, Dr. B. Bakewell, Santa Barbara; A. J. Snow, Oxnard; Frank Menter, Ontario; O. E. Lyberger, city; Tom Herndon, Tucson, Ariz.; Dr. D. W. Edelman, Osborne Iron Works, Redlands; Southern California State Hospital, A. A. Gordon, T. W. Taylor, T. W. Neal, Ventura; C. C. Warren, Glendora, and several to out of town agents.

Irish Witicisms.

T. P. O'Connor, the witty Irish parliamentarian, discussed at a dinner in New York the bull.

"The bull," said he, "isn't confined to Ireland. It was an Englishman, you know—an English judge—who, being told by a tramp that he was unmarried, replied: 'Well, that's a good thing for your wife.'

"And it was a French soldier, who, sleeping in his tent with a stone jar for a pillow, replied on being asked if the jar wasn't hard: 'Oh, no; I've stuffed it, you see, with hay.'

"And it was an American politician in New York, who cried the other night from the tailboard of a dray: 'If we remain silent the people will not hear our heartrending cries!'"—[Washington Star.

MOUNTAIN TORRENTS.

WATER COVERS THE ENGINE AS FORD CROSSES SAN GABRIEL.

FOR the first time this year an automobile has crossed the San Gabriel River at the upper ford. E. Roger Stearns and a party of four succeeded in crossing the stream above the power-house, where the water is four feet deep. The rushing mountain waters, icy cold, almost engulfed the car.

Dashing into the stream at top speed Stearns took the shallower part of the crossing easily and then turned the nose of the car into the deep water. The river swirled and eddied around the Ford and the water finally covered the carburetor. Then the little machine, which had made such a gallant fight, came to a sudden full stop.

Wedged between huge rocks the wheels could not be budged, the engine could get no more gasoline, the muffler was entirely under water, and it was out of the question to try to make the car move itself. The auto was in midstream and in danger of being whirled down the river.

With the water pouring into and through the rear seat floor, with the rear wheels almost out of sight in the water, and the front wheels blocked it was necessary for the passengers to get down into the icy waters and lift the car.

Gingerly the men slipped into the stream and began to tug. The rocks were rolled away from the front wheels and the car was drawn forward until the water could be drained from the carburetor. Then with the muffler exposed the Ford engine was cranked.

Though the water had been half-way up the cylinder walls the engine had not been hurt in the least and the motor began to hum away as comfortably as ever. With his foot on the clutch and the engine in low speed Stearns sent the car ahead, and the motor showed how well it can pull.

Inch by inch, then foot by foot, the rocks were crossed until the car came out on the opposite bank, above the regular road and at a place where the sides of the stream are almost perpendicular. This proved a severe task for the car, as it was necessary to climb where traction could hardly be found.

Over the shifting sands the Ford was driven to the point where the river is entered for the return crossing. This was made without stalling the engine, though the water again threatened to cover the little car.

It will be some time before auto parties can go up into the San Gabriel Cañon. The road has been washed away, and heavy rocks are a menace to tourers. The river is in no condition for motor cars.

Snow waters which are coming from the drifts melting in the hills these warm days have made the stream a torrent. It will possibly be weeks before the waters come down to the normal flow. The cañon is prettier than ever, as the wild flowers are just beginning to appear.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The Jamestown Jockey club, with a race course at Norfolk, Va., has applied to the New York Jockey Club stewards for a license to hold a two-week's meeting beginning April 1.

Should the dates be granted, eastern racing will actually begin this year at Jamestown instead of Aqueduct. As there will be no other racing at any eastern track on the dates asked for, horsemen predict that after several seasons of ill-success, a profitable meeting may be held at the Virginia course.

FOUR-CYLINDER DUROCAR.

Handsome Car Is Shown for the First Time at Automobile Show of Southern California.

One of the attractions at the Automobile Show of Southern California was the four-cylinder Durocar, manufactured in Los Angeles and shown for the first time. The car was exhibited by the Durocar Motor Car Company and is a beauty.

Here is a machine which appears to have plenty of power, is classy in appearance, and has the four-cylinders which so many demand. The two-cylinder Duro always made good and the four-cylinder seems to be able to sustain the proud record of the smaller model.

Crowds examined the car and experts passed opinions on the machine, all of them favorable. The four-cylinder motor is placed under a rangy hood which gives a stylish appearance to the Duro, which is larger than the former model turned out exclusively by factory. The Durocar represents the combined labor of men who have made a careful study of the automobile industry.

It is reported in Syracuse, N. Y., that an automobile stage route will be established between Seneca Falls and Ovid.

What does this element of simplicity mean to the man who buys the car and runs it?

Here's the Answer

A much lower original cost without any cheapening in the quality of materials—for the manufacturer can and does put the same materials into this machine that you find in $5000 machines. It also means simplicity and ease of operation.

Cobe Trophy Race.

Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin are after the Cobe trophy race for 1910. The initial contest at Crown Point, Ind., proved profitable, and the Indiana people feel that it will be hard to find a better circuit. W. C. Moore, president of the Wisconsin State Automobile Association, has a scout car out on the roads near Racine and Lake Geneva, and Frank B. Wood, strong for the Illinois course, announces that he has a circuit admirably suited for road racing.

Horse Passing.

Reports from San Francisco indicate that the hay market of that city is being seriously affected through the rapid increase in the number of automobiles, both of the pleasure and trucking classes. Livery stables and carriage companies claim to feel the passing of the horse, and one large carriage company has sold at auction because it could no longer make business pay.

BALLS AND STRIKES.

Henry Berry of the Los Angeles team would like to get his hands on Ote Johnson, the Portland third baseman, who was taken by the New York Americans, but there seems to be no chance, for in the big town they think that Ote is as much of a wonder as Hal Chase, and they have not seen him work, either. He would be a rosy-cheeked peach for the Angels, but probably could not be bought for less than $3500.

The probabilities are that Catcher Jess Orendorff, who has been taken by the Chicago Cubs from the Los Angeles team, may be put on the ineligible list, for he says he cannot go to Chicago for the money Murphy offered him. He has returned his contract to Murphy unsigned. Murphy offered him $1500 for seven months' work, and Orendorff wants $2400. He declares he could not support himself in Chicago and his family in California on $1500 a season. He asserts he does not desire to appear as a hold-out, but he cannot help himself.

Business Manager Bancroft of the Cincinnati team says that the twelve passes issued by Pitcher Karger last year is not a record, by any means. Banny declares he gives away more passes than that every day in the week.

Tris Speaker, the fine outfielder of the Boston Americans, has signed his 1910 contract at his own figures, and the club is satisfied.

Pitcher Jack Chesbro may be a back number, but he is far from being "broke," as some fans imagine. He has $25,000 invested in a lumber business at Conway, Mass., and is not forced to play baseball.

Ruth Bekins, and the American Simplex,

ADDED HONORS.

CHAMPION OF CHAMPIONS IN MATTER OF ARRESTS.

JACK JOHNSON is champion of champions in the matter of police court records. The black pugilist has been in more mix-ups with the law in the last year than any ring celebrity of the present or past, and in a number of cases has been compelled to pay a fine. His mania for auto speeding has been the cause of most of his trouble, but he has also been "pinched" for fighting as well as having been made defendant in ordinary civil suits. Johnson went from Buffalo to New York to answer to a charge of assaulting Norman Pinder in a saloon row, and the case was adjourned. As the negro pugilist left the court he was served with papers in a $10,000 suit for damages by Pinder. He threw the papers on the floor.

Following is his "record" in recent months:

May 21, 1909—Johnson's automobile seized by sheriffs in Philadelphia on writ of attachment in suit to recover board bill.

May 22—Forced to settle a bill of $400 presented by a negress for nursing his brother.

May 30—Arrested, charged with violating the speed laws of Boston, and fined.

June 2—Johnson pleaded guilty to charge of violating speed law regulations. Paid $5 fine.

June 3—Arrested in Boston in suit brought to collect old debt of $41. Later smashed his automobile in a wild ride through city.

July 16—While at Crown Point, Ind., had a road race with automobile. Machine skidded; opponent's axle broken. Young white woman seriously hurt as result of reckless driving.

August 5—Arrested in London, Ont., on telegram from Chief of Police, of Woodstock, charged with exceeding speed limit. In a wild ride ran down another automobile and smashed it. Paid fine.

October 21—In a parade in San Francisco drove his automobile recklessly through the streets; arrested for violating speed law.

January 2, 1910—Jumped contract with Terre Haute Theater; manager attached trunks. When constable served writ Johnson jumped on his baggage and yelled: "I'll hit the first man who touches it." Arrested by police.

January 4—Held up by constables and made to pay costs for jumping contract to show at Duquesne Garden, Pittsburgh.

January 14—Arrested in Boston, charged with assaulting taxi driver and breaking window in cab.

January 20—Arrested in New York, charged with assault on another negro in bar-room, and held in $1000 bail.

January 19—Fined $50 in Brantford, Can., for speeding his automobile last summer.

February 5—Arrested for allowing vicious bulldog such liberties that he bit a passerby on the street.

WINTON TOURERS.

Tourists Make Round Trip to San Diego and Another Trip Down from Seattle in Six-Cylinders.

James H. de Veruve of Seattle is in Los Angeles with his Winton "six," with which he will tour Southern California. The handsome big car is a 1910 model, shipped from the factory to De Veruve just before he started for this city.

Another Winton "six" owner, F. A. Williams, and his wife, are here. Williams drove his Winton from Seattle, making the run leisurely. He had no trouble on the way. He expects to pass about a month in Los Angeles. Before returning to Seattle the party will visit San Diego and take a short run into Lower California.

Miss Edith Copley of San Diego left this city Thursday morning in a Winton "six," purchased from the W. D. Howard Motor Car Company, and drove the big machine to her home, over the inland route. The young lady is an expert driver, and handles the Winton with great skill.

Col. Fred Jewel, another enthusiastic Winton owner, who lives in San Diego, made the round trip in a Winton last week, and found the roads in much better condition than they have been for some time past.

ably again be represented by the Lady Maud. Capt. Harris, who commanded her during the last race, expects to steer her over the course again. The Lady Maud is a 68-foot boat, with a 55-foot water line. The Seattle Yacht Club will undoubtedly reënter the Gwendolyn II, owned by Capt. Lloyd Johnson, a yawl much resembling the new Winsome. By winning second in the last race, though only 38½ feet on the water line, she has done more toward popularizing the race for smaller craft than any other vessel.

The beautiful Hawaii, schooner, 54 feet water line, and 70 feet over all, should again attract the attention she received in the 1908 contest, and with better luck, may realize the hopes of her builders, and take the trophies to the islands. There is talk this year of another possible entry from Honolulu, but yachtsmen hereabouts know nothing definite concerning the boat.

The keel of the Siwash, the 47-foot sloop to be built for Charlie Fulton of the S.C.Y.C., has already been laid at Terminal Island, and the boat will be ready long before the race is sailed if all goes well. The Siwash will probably be the smallest boat in the contest, as her water-line length is only four feet more than the required thirty feet. Beside these vessels there are nearly a dozen boats in San Francisco Bay that are considered as possibilities, as they possess all the necessary ocean-going qualifications.

SOME NEW CONDITIONS.

The conditions governing the 1910 race state that all entries must be bona fide cruising craft of substantial construction and rig, having full decks and water-tight cock pits. Yachts having fin or bulb keels or balanced rudders are barred. The measurement for computing time allowance is to be the length of the boat over all. A time allowance of sixty minutes to the foot will be allowed for the full course of 2096 miles. The lower sails are to be only those usually carried by the yacht when cruising. No restrictions are placed upon the use of light sails. There are no restrictions as to the number or character of the crew, but the commander of the vessel must be a bona fide member of an organized yacht club.

An idea of the elements of danger that enter into an ocean race for small boats may be gained from the following requirements that are inserted in the conditions:

"Stores and water sufficient for thirty days must be carried, as well as anchors, chains or hawsers, side lights, two compasses, sextant, chronometer and life belts or jackets for each member of the crew. Yachts must carry such small boats or tenders as they use when cruising. The committee reserves the right to reject an entry if the boat is in any way unsuited for ocean racing or is defective in hull, rig or stores. No weight carried, either in the form of stores or ballast, may be jettisoned except as a measure of safety."

SANTA BARBARA SOCCER.

Thistles and Rangers To Take Strongest Line-up to the Channel City.

Thistle and Ranger soccer teams are to play an exhibition game at Santa Barbara today. The contest was originally scheduled for February 22, but has been brought forward in order to give the Los Angeles teams a chance to take part in other games on Washington's Birthday.

Both teams will play their strongest line-up, as with the continual postponement of the league championship games the followers of the two elevens are deciding the relative merits of the teams on the exhibition and practice contests won by each aggregation. During the first weeks of play the Rangers found little difficulty in getting the better of the Thistle team, but since both squads have mustered their full fighting strength for the year the Thistles are having things much their own way.

Last Sunday's 5 to 0 victory for the Thistles has given the blue team the idea that they are no longer in the Rangers' class, and the reds will do their best to break through the string of defeats and smash the Thistle confidence.

The teams will leave Los Angeles at 8 a.m., and will line up at Santa Barbara as follows:

POSSIBILITIES.

MANY CHANGES ARE IN SIGHT.

Football Experts Wondering What They Must Do.

Strongly Favor Cutting Out All Diving Tackles.

Proposed Reforms Considered Very Radical.

A radical revision of football is under advisement by the Intercollegiate Rules Committee in charge. Greater safety for the player and more variety for the spectator are felt to be essential if the game is to be permitted to live by public opinion.

The Rules Committee has adjourned until March 25, after appointing a subcommittee to consider three plans of reorganization. The subcommittee is composed of A. A. Stagg, University of Chicago; Dr. W. L. Dudley, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., and O. W. Savage, Oberlin, O. When the Rules Committee reconvenes it will pass formally on the recommendations decided upon in the meantime by the subcommittee.

In the main the committee now feels that injuries to players are largely due not so much to mass plays as to savage tackles.

Accordingly, it was recommended that there be no more diving tackles; that a rigid physical examination of all candidates be insisted upon with medical supervision of all players throughout the season; that buffeting with the shoulders of ends, racing down the field after the ball, be abolished, and that the back who receives a punt be protected, on the other hand, from unnecessary violence by the ends.

Under one of the three plans suggested, playing halves would be shortened from thirty-five to thirty minutes, with fifteen minutes intermission, and the halves themselves split again in four periods of fifteen minutes' play, with intermission of five minutes.

It is a question in the opinion of the committee if it would not be wise to abolish football between high schools, or at least between high schools and colleges, where the players are more mature in physique.

The three plans upon which the submittee will report provide in substance for the following and the changes of alignment and play:

First plan:

1. Seven men on the scrimmage line.
2. No pushing or pulling of the man with the ball.
3. Prohibition of diving tackles.
4. Ends going down the field not to be body checked.
5. Players going down the field under a punt not to approach nearer than five yards to catcher of punt until he has touched the ball, and then not to tackle him, or charge forward unless he starts to run with the ball.
6. Eliminate onside kick.
7. First man receiving the ball to be allowed to carry it anywhere.
8. Forward pass allowed over any part of the line to men on ends of the line or behind the line when the ball is put in play.

Second plan:

1. Divide the halves as already specified, play to be resumed by the side in possession of the ball when the precedink period closes.
2. Seven men on the line of offense and three of the backs to be at least four yards in the rear of the line.

This would eliminate the tandem play perfected by Harvard.

3. Forward pass to be made and caught only by players standing behind the line when the ball is put in play.
4. In offensive plays between the two twenty-five-yard lines the team with the ball must advance it ten yards in consecutive downs or forfeit possession. On this article the committee states itself open to further advice.

Third plan:

1. Seven men on the line of scrimmage, with the back field of offense limited to four men, center rush always in the center and no interchange of players permitted.
2. Eliminate neutral zone and onside kick.
3. No runner with the ball to receive any help when he has reached the line of scrimmage. This would reduce the weight of the attack.
4. Distance to be gained, seven yards in four downs.

TRACK MEN LAZY.

Trainer Moulton of Stanford Hot After Athletes Who Do, But Little Practice.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 11.—"Dad" Moulton, the Cardinal veteran trainer, went on the warpath yesterday, seeking the scalps of the new men who signed up for track work and have not been reporting regularly for work. "Dad" seldom "breaks loose," because the men usually are eager to coöperate with him, but he has found it necessary "to speak a word," as he said.

The trouble was caused by the failure of a large number of men to turn up at a recent try-out that "Dad" had arranged for the new material. Less than one-third of the athletes appeared on the track, and after "Dad" had waited an hour after the scheduled time, he put the few faithful freshmen through the mill and then prepared a statement for the university press.

"The full squad must get out and work from now on and report to the trainer on the track for special work," he said. "The loss of Roth, Miller, Crawford, Hemphill, Bradford, Rawles, Fletcher, Adams, Sweet, Morris, McGregor, Worthington and Coonan of last year's team makes it hard to get a strong team together unless everybody who can lends a hand. There are a good many men signed up who have not come out. This should not be so. There are some men who intend to sign up later on. But now is the time. We want all men intending to help on the track to sign up this week."

The trials of the few men who turned up were satisfactory. The best work was done on the track by Tom Coleman, Kenyon Lee, Millsap, King, Smitherum, Morrison, Snyder, Leamany Taylor, Andrews and Scholefield. Only two men made the 100 yards in 10 4-5s. One made it in 11s., and the others in 11 1-5s. and 11 2-5s. "Dad" says it will take hard work for the century men to get down to 10 1-5s. or better, and that's the reason he has registered a complaint. The time is short and the weather is likely to be bad next month. In the 440 and 880-yard races the performances were better.

The student body is considering the advisability of employing a professional "rubber" to take charge of the work in the training quarters, and superintend the student workers. The student "rubbers" are to be paid 50 cents an hour in order that they will

BETTER SCORES ON THE RANGES.

THIRD MATCH OF THE INDOOR RIFLE LEAGUE.

New Rifle Ordered to Replace the Springfield Army Gun, Which Is Considered Inaccurate With Twenty-two Cartridges—Outdoor Shoot Today at Glendale.

The indoor rifle team of the Los Angeles Rifle and Revolver Club shot its side of the fourth match of the series of the N. R. A. Indoor League Friday night at the Harvard School range. The club was pitted against the Tacoma Rifle and Revolver Club and for the first time since the series started is practically certain of winning, although the results of the Tacoma team have not been received at the time of writing.

The local team scored 889, or 23 points better than the match against St. Paul, one week ago, 21 points ahead of the score for the week preceding, and 77 points better than the score for the first match shot in the series. It is expected that the new rifle, which was telegraphed for nearly a week ago, will arrive in time for the match next Friday, in which case the scores of the local men are certain to run higher.

Investigation has demonstrated that none of the leading eastern club teams use the gallery New Springfield army rifle, which the local club uses, and which has developed to e inaccurate on the long indoor range of seventy-five feet. The accuracy of the outdoor New Springfield is as high as the indoor rifle is low.

The leading club of the league, the Winchester Rod and Gun Club, uses a special single-shot rifle, with long rifle smokeless cartridges, while it is necessary to use .22 shorts in the government rifle on account of the short chamber.

Crossman was high for the third time for the local club, with the score of 184. C. F. Nichols ran second, with 180, Nichols and Crossman tying for high five shot score, with 49.

Andrews of Glendale failed to appear, and Irvin Hague shot in his place, scoring 177.

Kellogg was low man, with 172, and was "bumped" off the team for next Friday by E. L. Stevenson of Pasadena, one of the alternates. The team will consist of Crossman, E. D. and C. F. Nichols, Hague and Stevenson.

The Tacoma club has not yet scored above 800. The Y.M.C.A. Triangle Club shot against the strong Seattle club and scored 692, higher than it has shot before, but not within 100 points of even speaking distance of the Seattle team, which has not fallen below 900 in the three preceding matches. Hammond was high for the Cadets, with 152.

STRANGE CONDITIONS.

INFIELD PLAY HURTS BATTING.

AMERICAN LEAGUE INSIDE MEN ARE POOR STICKERS.

Nap Lajoie Is Only One That Ever Led His Organization in Hitting. In Rival Body the Outfielders Make Weaker Showing; First Sackers Being the King Pins.

Nap Lajoie is the only infielder who ever led the American League in batting. Nap turned that trick four times, .342 in 1901, .355 in 1903, .381 in 1904 and .328 in 1905. The first American League champion batsman was Sam Dungan of Kansas City, who batted .337 in 1900. George Stone led in 1906, with .358, and Ty Cobb has been the one best ever since.

Coming back to the superiority of outfielders over the infielders as batters, of the leading thirty hitters during the ten years' history of the league, only seven outside of Lajoie have been in the list. They are John McGraw, Charles Hickman, Harry Davis, "Nig" Clarke, Al Orth, Jim Delehanty and Eddie Collins.

Hans Wagner is the only National League shortstop who ever led that organization in hitting. Wagner has been the top-notch swattist seven different seasons. The first time that he forged to the front was in 1900. That year he played in the outfield part of the time and at short the rest of the season.

He led the next time in 1903, repeated in 1904, finished second to Cy Semour, then of the Cincinnati Reds, in 1905, and has been the leader every season since then.

National League records for the past thirty-eight years show that the infielders have supplied the majority of leading hitters. Sixteen times have outer gardeners topped the sluggers at the close of a season. Twenty-one times has the premier been an infielder.

Ten times the top-notcher has been a first baseman, four times he has turned up in the person of a second-sacker, and once a third baseman topped the list.

Only one catcher has ever led the National League in batting, and that was the famous Mike Kelly, away back in 1886. He was with Chicago, and batted .388 in 118 games. However, he was not behind the bat in all those contests, playing the outfield when he was not wearing the big mitt.

A single pitcher also has the honor of being a league leader, if we except "Roaring Bill" Kennedy, who topped the list when with the Pirates a few years ago, but was never accredited with real honors, because of the few games in which he took part. The other case is that of John P. Luby of Chicago, who was on top in 1890, with a mark of .342 in thirty games.

MOVING UP.

NEXT TENNIS TOURNAMENT SLATED FOR LONG BEACH.

PACIFIC COAST tennis enthusiasts are to have a chance to see the brilliant playing of the Coronado tournament duplicated next week, in the second big southern contest of the year, at Long Beach. The Long Beach tourney is scheduled to begin next Friday, and is to continue until the following Tuesday, Washington's Birthday.

An unusually strong list of entries will probably be attracted to the Long Beach contests on account of the arrangement of the playing dates. Saturday will be one of the four days of play, and Washington's Birthday, another, so that local players will be able to play through the tournament with the loss of only Friday and Monday from business. As the mixed doubles and probable the men's doubles will not begin before Saturday, entry in these would mean the loss of Monday alone.

About the only San Francisco player entered in the Coronado tournament who will not be able to stay over for the Long Beach matches is Dr. Sumner Hardy, the former Pacific Coast champion. Maurice McLoughlin, Hazel Hotchkiss and Miss Golda Myer will probably be present at Long Beach.

Several of the ablest Los Angeles tennis experts who could not get away for the Coronado tournament will add class to the Long Beach entry list. Simpson Sinsabaugh, Variel and Hendrick all expect to enter. Douglass of Occidental, regarded as about the best of the present college generation of racqueters, will probably hand in his name. Douglass is about the equal of Winne Mace, though the Occidental man is thought to have a shade the advantage. Mrs. Farquhar is another probable entry in the ladies' singles, as well as both Miss Alice Ryan and "Bonny" Ryan.

Miss Mary Brown, the 17-year-old girl who defeated Florence Sutton in the Thanksgiving tournament at Hollywood, expects to play at Long Beach. Miss Brown has not developed the physique necessary to hold the a place among the first half-dozen women players of the country.

An interesting point in Miss Brown's play is that in spite of her slight build she uses a very heavy racquet, usually one weighing fourteen and one-half ounces. Against Florence Sutton at Hollywood she played with a fifteen-ounce racquet—about the heaviest made. Ordinary women's racquets usually weigh twelve and one-half ounces or only twelve ounces, and even the strongest men rarely play with a racquet weighing more than thirteen and one-half or fourteen ounces. Sinsabaugh, Bundy and other local experts prefer to use the thirteen and one-half-ounce weight.

Men's singles, ladies' singles, men's doubles, ladies' doubles and mixed doubles will be played. First and second prizes will be given in each event. The tournament will be played on the courts of the Hotel Virginia, as it is held by the Hotel Virginia under the auspices of the Southern California Lawn Tennis Association. It is the second open annual Hotel Virginia tournament.

The playing in the challenge match between McLoughlin and Bundy at Coronado will probably be repeated at Long Beach with the conditions reversed, McLoughlin being the challenger and Bundy the defender. The match will be the challenge sets for the Virginia cup, which must be won three times for permanent possession. Bundy won the trophy last year, the first time it was played for, and must defend it against the winner of the open tournament. McLoughlin is expected to win through the men's singles and challenge for 1910 possession.

Entries for the singles events will close next Wednesday, February 16, and the drawings will be made Wednesday evening. Drawings for the doubles will be made later, as usual, in order to allow those entered in singles to pair off for the team work. The Tournament Committee at Long Beach consists of Jean C. Drake, A. M. Goodhue and Carl S. Stanley. The Management of Play Committee consists of S. M. Sinsasabaugh, T. C. Bundy and R. H. F. Variel, Jr. Entries in the tournament can be made through any member of

PLAN ROWING REGATTA.

California Sends Challenge to Stanford for Races This Spring.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 12.—A rowing regatta between the students of Stanford and California undoubtedly will be held this year. The local rowing club received a letter from the boating association of the University of California yesterday suggesting that eight-oared and four-oared races be held before the end of this school year. As the Stanford oarsmen are anxious to try conclusions with the Californians merely the details of the regatta remain to be arranged.

J. C. Huston, president of the Lagunita Club, in reply to the communication from the rival organization, expressed the willingness of the Cardinal men to compete in the proposed races and also suggested that a junior four-oared event be added to the programme. He proposed that the races be held on one of the old intercollegiate courses, either at Sausalito or the Oakland estuary.

Interest in aquatics has not abated since the universities removed their support from the sport, and the inter-club regatta will undoubtedly receive the same student support as if it was fostered by the student bodies instead of by private clubs within the universities.

A large number of veteran oarsmen, and many new men of ability, are practicing daily on Lake Lagunita and Stanford is expected to be represented by strong crews.

FOOTBALL EMBLEMS.

Gold footballs were presented to the regulars of the Los Angeles High School Rugby fifteen of 1909, as well as to Manager Hirsh and Coach Noble of the squad, at the meeting of the school student body Friday. Those who received the golden honors were: Hodges, Wilson, Grant, Dorn, Walbridge, Parman, Morrison, Beach, Blades, Harrigan, Boyle, Newman, Rivers, Rubio, Capt. Geissler, Manager Hirch and Coach Noble.

Little Glidden.

The Minnesota State Automobile Association is laying plans for its "Little Glidden Tour" for the coming summer. Last year's run from Minneapolis to Fargo was held with such success that there is talk of a longer run for this season.

Road Improvements.

The Ohio State Highway Commission has filed estimates for the needs of the department for road improvement for 1910. It asks for $880,000 or $10,000 for each of the eighty-eight counties in the State.

Tom Hyer, First Heavyweight Champion, who is historic figure in annals of the prize ring and was quite a political power in New York.

FIRST RECOGNIZED.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONS OF AMERICAN PRIZE RING.

[Copyrighted by S. J. Kelly.]

TOM HYER, champion (1), 1849 to 1852; weight, 187 pounds; height, six feet one and one-half inches.

Tom Hyer was the first champion of the American prize ring. This great pugilist played an almost historic part in the early political life of New York city. Preceding the advent of Hyer, Bill (Boss) Harrington and Andy McLane had fought for the championship of the two cities of New York and Philadelphia, in 1832. McLane had beaten Jim Sanford the "American Phenomenon." George Kensett had fought Ned Hammond, but setting aside the vagaries of their claims Tom Hyer was the first to stand in proud pre-eminence as the "American champion" in all the glory of green tights, massive bared chest and bulging pink muscles that fancy lithographs picture the champion to be.

Stripped, Hyer presented the appearance of a professional. Huge chest, long rangy arms with extreme width of shoulders, springy hips and lower limbs, suggesting an enlarged and heavier outline of Bob Fitzsimmons of the present day, while a well-set fighting head added to his game-cock tout ensemble.

Hyer was an instinctive ring general of the highest order. A cool-headed fighter, having a left-hand lead, followed by an immediate rangy right-hand swing. This double blow, used constantly in his fight with Yankee Sullivan and backed by his great reach and fine stamina, gave him a lead in that battle that was never overtaken.

DECISIVE MEETING.

Events that led to the meeting of Hyer and Sullivan, the former's decisive victory, and the acknowledgment of Hyer as first champion of the ring, antedate the battle of these pugilists eight years. Sullivan, born of Irish parentage, had fought and obtained celebrity in the British prize ring. On coming to America he had proved a game, rapid, hard-hitting fighter. By defeating Hammer Lane, middleweight champion of England, Sullivan had added to his reputation and he returned to this country with a desire to add to his laurels. The most likely candidate for honors at his hands was young Tom Hyer. In some manner Hyer had acquired the reputation of a fighter, a reputation which persistently surrounded him, although he had never fought in the regular roped arena of the prize ring.

Sullivan's first step in the initative was the promoting of one "Country McCloskey" to fight Hyer. McCloskey did, and Sullivan, as one of McCloskey's seconds, had the satisfaction of seeing McCloskey thoroughly whipped in a long battle on a hot September day in 1841.

Hyer then allied himself with one of the political parties which attempted to control New York's city polls and who attached to themselves numerous pugilists whose party positions closely resembled those of the modern quarterback and halfback to a football team, on voting days.

Sullivan, whose active maulers were in equal demand by politicians, attached himself to the opposing faction. This appearance of political rivalry was a thin covering for an intense fighting enmity which caused Hyer and Sullivan to move in ever contracting circles.

Sullivan's second step in the initiative was the attempt to whip Hyer one night in 1848, in an oyster cafe at the corner of Broadway and Park place, N. Y.

The fight created an uproar on Broadway. Waiters fled from the place in fright while the affair was in progress and the doors of the resort were locked.

Patrolman George W. Walling, afterward Chief of Police, gained entrance to the café and found Hyer coolly placing a precussion cap on a pistol, which were the weapons then in vogue. In a booth was the beaten Sullivan.

MOB ON FOOT.

Hyer declared that he was preparing to sell his life as dearly as possible, as he expected that Sullivan's friends would soon arrive in a mob and would murder him. Arm in arm Walling led Hyer from the place, and none too soon, as a howling mob of Sullivan's admirers soon filled the resort and pandemonium reigned.

This affair resulted in a match between Hyer and Sullivan for $5000 a side. The match was ratified in August, 1848, and the great battle took place February 7, 1849. Although harassed by the authorities on Chesapeake Bay, the fighters and their excursion made a landing at Rock Point, Kent county, Maryland. The day was bitterly cold. Snow was swept from the ground before the ring was pitched and hot bricks were brought from a neighboring farmhouse and placed in the ring to warm the fighters' feet. Such was the display of science, ring tactics and skill shown by these two heavyweights, together with the overwhelming championship form shown by Hyer, that this battle at once took rank as a battle for the American heavyweight championship.

Sullivan stood 5 feet 10½ inches and weighed 165 pounds. Hyer stood 6 feet 1½ inches and weighed twenty-five pounds more. At the end of sixteen rounds, Sullivan's limbs were seized with nervous tremors from the heavy falls and hard blows he had received, and Hyer was declared the winner.

After this victory Hyer's pathway was strewn with roses. The public on every hand hailed him with acclamations as the champion. The fancy of New York dubbed him with the endearing title of "The Chief," a title which ever after clung to him.

Hyer never again fought in the ring. Although in 1851 he issued a challenge to fight the Tipton Slasher of England, for $10,000 a side, it was but part of the boasting of his day. Hyer named the "no-man's" land of Newfoundland as an intermediate fighting ground and the challenge resulted in nothing.

At the breaking out of the Civil War, Hyer followed one of the northern armies as a sutler. He died in 1864, at the age of 45, in New York City, of cardiac dropsy.

A beautiful monument marks his grave in Greenwood Cemetery.

WANT FOOTBALL RETAINED.

State University Boys Do Not Want Freshmen Game With Stanford Called Off.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Feb. 12.—California students and athletic officials do not look with favor upon the recommendation of the Stanford faculty that the annual intercollegiate football game between the freshman classes of the two institutions be abolished. None of the faculty members here who have any great knowledge of things athletic, have made any statements of their views, but it is generally understood that the majority of them side with the students.

The Stanford professors base their recommendations on the fact that the "scholarship" of the aspirants for the freshman team is affected by their endeavors, and, in the same breath, these same upholders of high scholarship say that freshmen would be better trained for possible 'varsity positions did not their class team work interfere.

Whatever the case may be at Stanford, California records show that the number of freshmen who play football and "flunk out" at the end of their first term in college is exceedingly small, and in some years the entire team escapes the ax of the Scholarship Committee. Of the men who do flunk, the primary cause is not football.

The coaches at California apparently find no trouble in preparing first-year men for the 'varsity contest, as well as for the freshman game. This last season the best freshmen were played with the 'varsity right through the season, and only trained with their classmates for less than a fortnight before the freshman game, with no apparent disadvantage to the team play.

The California representatives of the Intercollegiate Agreement Committee are in favor of the freshman game, and insisted that the clause in the new agreement governing these contests remain as in the old document.

AEROPLANE TIRES.

Western Rubber and Supply Company Has Agency and Bert Wilson Tells About Plans.

One of the first sets of tires ever manufactured for the runners of an aëroplane were turned out by the G. & J. tire factory. Glenn H. Curtiss placed the order for his "June Bug," and the tires were built for the wheels of the machine by special request.

These rubber tires proved satisfactory. The company at once decided to turn out the tires in numbers. The Western Rubber and Supply Company, of which Bert West is the manager, has the agency for the G. & J. tire in Los Angeles, and is to bring a stock of aëroplane tires here.

In speaking of the new G. & J. aëro tire, Manager West said: "The aëronaut has wanted a tire that combines strength, resiliency and lightness. We have what we consider the highest development of all these qualities. We secure strength first by our method of construction, and by using a specially woven fabric. We make the diameter of the tire small and the air-cushion large.

The same firm has been turning out automobile tires for a number of years, and has made a great success. When bicycles were in vogue, the G. & J. was also well known.

Freight Reduced on Ford Cars

WE HAVE just completed arrangements with the Ford factory to ship us cars in such quantities that we will only charge $100 freight per car, instead of $125 as now charged. (Most dealers now ask $150.) In addition to the regular equipment of top, glass front, five lamps, generator and speedometer, we will furnish free of charge jack, oil gauge, extra inner tube and the tanks filled with gasoline and oil—ready for the road.

PALMER-SINGER MAN RETURNS.

WERNER TO BRING FINE LINE OF CARS TO CITY.

Finds Eastern Manufacturers Particularly Busy With Nineteen-Ten Product and Every Large Firm Working Men Night and Day—Has Simplex Agency.

O. Werner, agent for the Palmer-Singer, is back from the East with a bunch of new Palmer-Singer cars cornered for Los Angeles. He has succeeded in having shipped at once a carload of "Little Sixes" which should be ready sellers in this city.

While in the East, Werner visited a number of the larger factories and spent a week with the Palmer-Singer people where he went over the entire plant. A new Palmer-Singer factory has been built at Long Island City and the plant has a capacity of 600 cars a year.

Some of the best designers known to the motor car industry have been secured by the Palmer-Singer people who are to increase their output because of the special demand for the cars which are proving popular in Los Angeles, where they have been represented for less than a year.

Since entering the automobile field Werner has figured in important race meets, and though his luck has been poor, he has always shown he is not afraid of his car. The Palmer-Singer has been called on to perform Herculean tasks and has made good. Werner returns with a desire to enter the Phoenix race this year.

The Palmer-Singer factory, according to Werner, is preparing to turn out the following models: A little four-cylinder with a wheel base of 115 inches, which will seat five passengers and will sell for $2500. Also a little six-cylinder with a wheel base of 125 inches which will sell for $3300. This car has an engine with cylinders 4x4¾ inches.

In the seven-passenger models the big four-cylinder will have a wheelbase of 128 inches and the six-cylinder with the same wheel base will seat seven passengers and will sell for $3600.

The big six-cylinder Palmer-Singer will have a wheel base of 138 inches and will sell for $4200. The cylinders will be 4⅞x5½ and it is claimed the engine has developed seventy-five horse-power.

With this interesting line Werner will enter the industry this year with a strong bid for popularity. The Palmer-Singer is well known in the East. It has a powerful engine and is stylish in appearance.

While in the East Werner took careful note of what is doing in the automobile world. He found all of the factories working overtime and unable to keep abreast of the demand for cars.

"Great things are to be accomplished this year," said Werner, "if you can judge by what is doing at the factories. I found all of the big concerns working night and day to keep up with the demand.

"More cars than ever are being made, but the demand is far greater than it ever was before. It hardly seems possible that this country can use up the many machines being turned out. There is not a large concern in the East that is making reputable cars that is not rushed with orders.

"Of course I was most interested in the Palmer-Singer and was particularly pleased when I learned of the plans for this year. I cannot get cars here for the show, but I will exhibit my engines and will make an interesting display."

In addition to the Palmer-Singer, Werner also has the Simplex agency. He expects his first car by March 1. George Robertson is to come here also with a Simplex which he will enter in races at the motordrome.

DORY RACES TODAY.

Little Mischief and Merrily Contest This Afternoon in What May Be Final Events.

Two dories will race for championship honors in San Pedro Bay this afternoon, in what may prove to be the last of the one-design class series of the South Coast Yacht Club. Walter Folsom's Little Mischief II and Warren Wood's Merrily are left practically alone in the run for first honors as the series nears the close.

Of the ten races of the series the Little Mischief has already won four, and the Merrily two. Only four races remain to be sailed, and two of these will be run off today. If both go to the Little Mischief, Wood will be shut out; the Merrily must win three out of four to break even with the Folsom boat, and four straight to win. The other entries for the series, since there is practically no possibility of the several times defeated dories pulling through with the necessary four straight wins against the leaders, have dropped out to leave the water clear for the Mischief and Merrily.

The first race will be started as soon after 1 o'clock as possible, and the second immediately upon its conclusion. Only the worst of bad weather will prevent the dories from starting.

ANOTHER WALKER HERE.

Man Who Holds World's Record from Oklahoma City to Los Angeles Is With Us.

Another "world's champion" pedestrian is passing through Los Angeles. This time it is George Palmer of Oklahoma City, holder of the world's walking record from Oklahoma to Los Angeles, who is on his way from Oklahoma City to San Francisco, thence to New York and back to Oklahoma City.

Palmer is anxious to try conclusions with walkers now on the Pacific Coast, and issues an open challenge for a contest to Santa Barbara. He is particularly anxious to stack up against William Stanley, the Marathon runner, who is also a long-distance walker.

Palmer claims to have been the trainer of the University of Kansas athletic teams, and subsequently of the Kansas City Athletic Club.

Trade That Pays.

Young men to learn to operate the linotype machine; a good trade that pays above the average. The Merganthaler Linotype Company is installing over one hundred linotype machines per month. That means just as many positions to be filled at good wages.

The Los Angeles Times has installed a large auxiliary plant and has placed in charge an expert machinist and operator, making it possible for students who so desire to learn either trade (linotype machinist or operator,) in shortest possible time; a six-weeks' course, eight hours per day or night, $50. GREAT ROLLERS.

HIGH PLUNGERS IN DAYS AGONE.

English Lords Bet Fortunes on Horse Races.

Marquis of Hastings Nerviest Gambler of All.

Duke of Hamilton Bets Big Sum, Then Renigs.

In these days when you hear of a man making a bet of $20,000 on a horse race you are apt to throw up your hands in surprise; but there were times, especially in connection with the English turf, when such a wager would be considered mere child's play and unworthy of notice. The '60s, and perhaps a generation earlier, might be characterized as the golden age of the plungers, for a string of bets is on record for that period which completely dwarfs anything since or before.

These were the days of the Marquis of Hastings and the Duke of Hamilton, while somewhat earlier were the Earl of Glasgow, the Marquis of Exeter, Leviathan Davies, Lord George Bentinck and several others. Of this brigade of reckless plungers undoubtedly the most remarkable character was the Marquis of Hastings, whose short life was one continuous romance of the maddest plunging. It could be said of him that he was a born plunger, for he let no event of note pass without wagering on it.

When he was about 25 years of age and at the heyday of his career, he owned a crack two-year-old filly named Lady Elizabeth and she held a nomination for all the big three-year-old classics. For the first few times she carried silk the filly was fairly successful and the Marquis thought he saw in her a chance to retrieve his waning fortune. The climax of her two-year-old season came in the Middle Park plate. Then, as now, the race was considered the two-year-old derby. Lady Elizabeth was a splendid animal to the eye, and for the test her trainer had her in the best possible fettle, and at the same time he informed the owner that she was a sure winner, and, acting on the advice, he backed her for $250,000.

CAREFUL OBSERVER.

As the horses went to the post the owner of Lady Elizabeth was sitting with Maria, Marchioness, of Ailesbury, in her carriage, and he watched every move of the horses through a field glass. The horses were a long way off, but very early in the fray the keen eye of the Marquis saw that Lady Elizabeth had not the ghost of a chance, but, being one of the best losers, he never quailed. Only as the horses flashed past the post he was a trifle pale, but his mouth was set and his eyes glared.

In her 3-year-old year Lady Elizabeth gave every promise that she would land the Derby, for in the early spring races she showed some classic form. Her most dangerous opponent was Hermit, who belonged to a wealthy man named Chaplin, who was at the time engaged to marry the Marchioness of Ailesbury. This state of affairs involved a romance—the Marchioness was madly in love with the Marquis of Hastings, and it was an open secret that he had the highest regard for her. However, the Derby came around, and some enormous betting was recorded. The Marquis took one last chance and he backed Lady Elizabeth to the amount of $555,000, but he was doomed once more to disappointment, for Hermit won the much-coveted race and his owner gathered in the handsome sum of $700,000, which is probably the biggest amount ever won by one man over the race. The Marchioness never became the wife of Chaplin, for she eloped with the Marquis and married him and shared some of the misfortune which befell him later on.

NERVY WAGER.

Over this same race of Hermit's there was a still more tragic episode, William, the third Duke of Hamilton, being the chief actor. People went mad over the chances of Hermit, and especially when it was reported that he had burst a blood vessel. All sorts of bets were laid against him and the wildest sort of plunging was done over what he might do in the race. His trainer was the famous Capt. Machell, the very keenest judge of horses, and of course he knew whether the bursting of the blood vessel affected the horse's chances. One night, about a couple of weeks before the race, Machell walked into Long's Hotel, where there was some brisk betting going on. No matter what size bet a man wanted to make he could always find a taker at Long's, for it was a plungers' resort.

On this occasion they were laying 30 to 1 against Hermit, and before he was long in the house Machell had covered bets which would bring him $225,000. He put up his money so freely that a few of the wiser division began to think the trainer had a good thing, knowing, of course, what Hermit could do, so naturally, after a little while, there came a lull in the anxiety to lay odds against Hermit. Then it was Machell's turn to create a surprise, and he did it when, in a loud voice, he announced that he stood ready to take $100,000 against $5000 about the horse, and in a very short time the money was covered. Just at that moment in walked the Duke of Hamilton, and he was immediately told about the betting and he was aflame in a minute for a plunge, but when a few of his retainers who were there wanted to give him the exact figures he waved them aside, saying that the sums were not worth talking about.

GREATEST OF ALL.

At the same instant he walked over to where Capt. Machell was standing, and, drawing himself up to his fullest height, said he would lay $150,000 to $5000 against Hermit—that he would do so once, twice, three times, four times, five times and six times. It was as if a thunderbolt had fallen, and then every one present looked toward Machell, and after a few moments' pause he quietly but firmly informed the Duke that he would take the full amount—that is, $90,000 to $30,000. The end of this wager was rather tame, for later in the evening the Duke offered a nice sum to have the bet canceled, but Machell refused. Next day, however, he took a different view of the situation, for he declared the bet off altogether.

A generation earlier George, fourth Earl of Glasgow, flourished, and though he was a notorious plunger he was the worst kind of a loser and a testy sort of a sportsman at the best. He did some heavy betting over the St. Leger in 1824, and after he balanced up his accounts he found that he was a winner to the amount of $85,000, but he lost $135,000 over the Derby in 1827, when he laid long odds against the winner, Mameluke. There is a story told of Lord Glasgow having jumped upon the table at the Star Hotel, Doncaster, the night before the St. Leger of 1823 and offering 25 to 1 against Brutandorf in thousands, John Gully getting a big slice of the odds on the spot.

Some years later Lord Glasgow and Lord George Bentinck were constant opponents in the plunging line. Whenever the least opportunity arose they wagered against each other. Lord Bentinck had a horse named Gaper in the Derby of 1843, and the night before the race he strolled into Crockford's to make a few wagers. Crockford's was in St. James street and in those days was the great haunt of the plungers. Lord Glasgow, who happened to be there, said he was willing to lay £90,000—something like $450,000—at odds of 3 to 1 against Gaper. The size of the best staggered Lord Bentinck and for once in his life he had to take water by admitting that the sum was a little larger than he expected.

The second Marquis of Exeter was another of the big turfmen who liked to do some plunging occasionally, and he did it in the most offhand manner. One day at Newmarket he walked up to the betting ring and asked for Mr. Davies. He meant Leviathan Davies, a bookmaker, who at the time handled the biggest bets on the turf and was well known to all the noblemen. On Davies making his appearance Exeter asked him how much he would lay against his horse who happened to be running in one of the races. Davies told His Lordship $50,000 to $15,000, and, the figures being satisfactory, the bookmaker was told to jot them down, after which Exeter strolled away to the paddock.

GLENDALE IN FRONT.

Basketball Team Wins Honors in the County League by Defeating Beach Club.

Glendale High School took the championship honors in the Los Angeles County Suburban Basketball League yesterday afternoon, winning from the fast Huntington Beach five at Orange, 33 to 27. This victory puts Glendale in the Southern California finals for the championship of this part of the State, which will be played against the winner of the Citrus Belt League on the Harvard School court next Saturday.

The game was marked by star forward work, one man on each side doing spectacular throwing under the baskets. For the winners Emery shot ten field goals, caging the ball from all parts of the court. Worthy of the Huntington Beach team did equally spectacular work, scoring six goals from the field and seven out of thirteen free throws. Worthy proved a particularly difficult man to block, on account of a left-handed throw which he has developed almost to perfection. His brilliant one-handed shots made while guarded have already won him a good deal of prominence in basketball circles. Both Emery and Worthy "have the makings" of sensational basketball men.

The Huntington Beach boys put up a showy game, and played fast ball from start to finish, but were not quite the equal of their heavier opponents. Although failing to get in the scoring, Stone and Bourne, the Glendale guards, did good work in following their men and getting the ball back into their opponents' territory. On the Huntington Beach team three of the five players were the Livernash brothers, all with the same initial.

Summary:

Referee, Torrey; umpire, Lee. Goals from field—Emery, 10; Worthy, 6; Taylor, 3; Sprinkle, 3; Lock Livernash, 2; Lee Livernash, 1; Pryor, 1. Goals from fouls—Worthy, 7; Emery, 1. Fouls, on Glendale, 13; on Huntington Beach, 7.

MERCER ON DISPLAY.

New Cars Arrive and Will Be Attractively Shown at Fiesta Park Exhibit.

F. W. Froce is to make an interesting display of his Mercer line at the Licensed Show. The handsome new Mercer, finished in Spanish leather upholstering, is one of the showiest cars in the $2000 class. The car has the appearance of one of the higher-priced machines but has been brought down to normal by the manufacturers.

One of the features of the Mercer is the engine, which appears to have an abundance of power. The car has been given a particularly severe test and has made good. The torque rod is a feature of the underbody construction as is the spring suspension which makes the car easy riding. The Mercer will bear careful inspection.

C. H. Bigelow, is to be on hand in the Mercer booth to introduce the car, which is being shown here for the first time. Bigelow knows a car thoroughly and has chosen the Mercer because he believes the car has a great future.

The Mercer people will show two and possibly three models. The cars have arrived from the factory and will be displayed in the toy-tonneau and the roadster types.

The Goodyear detachable oversize tires have made a creditable showing at the Auto Show during the last week.

Freshman Clears Bar at Six Feet and Over.

Ken Lee Runs Fine Race in Three-quarter-Mile.

Bellah Vaults Near Twelve Feet Over Bar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] G. S. Horine, a freshman unknown, cleared 6 ft. ½ in. in the high jump in the first track and field try-out today. Horine's performance was a great surprise. With Argabrite of Ventura making 6 ft. 1 in., the Cardinal will be unusually strong in the high event.

Sam Bellah cleared 11 ft. 7¼ in. in the pole vault and almost succeeded in a trial at 12 ft.

Separate trials for freshmen and experienced men were held. Four regular events were admitted and the distance runs were shortened. Tom Coleman of Los Angeles was beaten at the tape by Smitherum in the 100-yard race, but Coleman is capable of beating 10⅗s., which was Smitherum's time. Kenyon Lee easily finished first in the three-quarter-mile run, the time being 3m. 29 2-5s. Eugene Kern of Pasadena won the low hurdle event for freshmen in 27⅗s.

R. B. Andrews of San Diego won both of the novice sprints. The time in neither event was fast but Andrews promises to develop into a valuable man.

The ease with which Gaylord Snyder of Los Angeles placed in the quarter-mile event indicated that he will develop into a point winner.

Horton, Wyman, Scott and other 'varsity men did not compete.

The results of the trials were satisfactory to Trainer Moulton.

Summary:

The 100-yard dash, novices, first group—Lambert won, Wilcox second, Brown third; time 11s.

Second group—Bauman won, Bayley second; time 10 4-5s.

'Varsity—Smitherum won, Coleman second, Carter third; time 10⅗s.

The 880-yard run, novices: Leaman won; Ferguson, second; Whitaker, third; time 2m. 10s.

'Varsity: Johnson won, Hertel second, Cramer third; time 2m. 9 2-5s.

The 220-yard dash, novices: Andrews first, Lambert and Thoburn tied for second; time 24s.

'Varsity: Smitherum first, Carter second; time 23 1-5s.

The 440-yard dash, novices: Lewis first, Turbin second, Snyder third; time 57s.

'Varsity: Perry first, Taylor second, King third; time 54s.

Three-quarter mile run, novices: Price first, Pratt second, Sanford third; time 3m. 39 3-5s. 'Varsity: Lee first, Levy second, Scholefield third, time 3m. 29 2-5s.

Mile and quarter run: Newman first, Templeton second, Hewett third; time 6m. 15 2-5s.

The 220-yard low hurdels, novices: Kern first, Ruddick second, Bangle third; time 27-3-5s. 'Varsity: Beckley first, Whitaker second, Taylor third; time 27 1-5s.

Pole vault: Bellah, 11ft. 7 1-4in., first; Waring and Ruddick, 10ft. 5in., tied for second.

High jump: Horine, 6ft. ½in., first; Argabrite and Poor, 5ft. 7½in., tied for second.

Shot put: Dole, 37ft. 8 1-4in., first; Woolley, 37ft. 7½in., second; Clark, 35ft. 3½in., third.

Results at Tampa.

TAMPA (Fla.) Feb. 12.—Racing results:

Three furlongs: Magic Miss won, Ella Bryson second, Louise B. third; time 0:34 4-5.

Five and one-half furlongs: Elizabethean won, Carondolet second, Morpeth third; time 1:10 4-5.

Five furlongs: Sallie Savage won, Filli Ford second, The Ram third; time 1:04.

Five and one-half furlongs: Bobby Cook won, Punky second, Cloisteress third; time 1:10 1-5.

Six furlongs: Hoyle won, Sir Walter Rollins second, Bonebrake third; time 1:17 2-5.

Nine furlongs: Vanen won, Bannock Bob second, Great Jubilee third; time 2:00 3-5.

STANFORD MEN DO GOOD WORK IN BALL PRACTICE.

Cardinals Have Been Beaten by Catholic College Experts—Coach Presley Forcing His Candidates to Train Steadily—Stan Mitchell Sure of Catcher's Job.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 11.—The Cardinal baseball squad is rapidly rounding into shape, and with the prospects of clear weather prevailing during the remainder of this month, the students believe the nine will be playing winning ball. The strong teams of the Catholic colleges have been outplaying the Cardinals, but Coach Presley is requiring the men to work steadily, instead of strenuously. He wants to develop the team at a steady pace, so that it will be at its strongest when the intercollegiate season opens.

Mow Mitchell and Gilfillian of Los Angeles have been doing the mound work against St. Mary's and Santa Clara, and have been performing satisfactorily. It is generally believed that Mitchell will be chosen as the regular 'varsity twirler. His long experience at the game gives him an advantage over Gilfillian, who is a sophomore. Mitchell has a world of speed, but is rather short on curves.

Stan Mitchell seems to have the berth in back of the bat cinched. He measures up well with any of the 'varsity men, and before the end of the season undoubtedly will be one of the most valuable players on the nine. He has been on the bench several days with an injured hand, but he will resume his position next week. Cochran of San Bernardino has been catching this week. He has had considerable high school experience, but is not as strong as Mitchell. Canterbury, 'varsity catcher last year, probably will be used at third base if Stan Mitchell is kept behind the plate. Canterbury is an all-round player. Mow Mitchell, who played third base last year, occupied that position in the last game with St. Mary's Thursday.

McFadden of Santa Ana has not been replaced at shortstop, and he undoubtedly has the place. Bert Ball of Los Angeles has been used in several positions, and may make a regular place. He is an excellent first baseman, but Ganong, a veteran, seems to have that position.

Knight Jordan, son of the president, is being used regularly in the outer garden, and it is believed that he will make the 'varsity this year. Obear also seems to be permanently stationed in the outfield. Tallant of Santa Barbara is showing up well at second base, and from present indications is sure of the berth.

The team has not been batting hard, and the men will have to practice a great deal in this department of the game in order to strike a winning gait. The 'varsity captain is to be elected before the end of the month. Several players are candidates for the honor.

GIANTS START SOUTH.

BEGIN WITH STEAMER TRIP.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—If an early start counts for anything, the New York National League club will have an advantage over all rivals this year. Leaving New York today, the advance guard of the Giants will reach its training quarters at Marlin Springs, Tex., well before any other big league teams begin a similar move.

The advance guard sailing on the Southern Pacific steamship Proteus for New Orleans, includes first baseman Fred Merkle, coach Arlie Latham, pitchers Dailey, Kleber and Scott; outfielders Zacher and Lush, and others.

Manager McGraw, with Pitcher Christy Mathewson and a bunch of recruits will follow southward as soon as next week's National League meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria is ended.

Marlin Springs is a town of about 2000 inhabitants in Central Texas.

STIRRING THINGS.

BERKELEY BALL PLAYERS BUSY.

SEVENTY-FIVE MEN ARE TRYING FOR POSITIONS.

Coach Smith Is to Slash Out Twenty-five Candidates from Training Squad—Chances for Good Team Are Becoming Brighter—Hopes for Honors Depend on Freshies.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Feb. 12.—The first cut in the baseball squad will be made on Monday when Coach Smith will dispense with the services of some twenty-five men, retaining a squad of fifty for a fortnight or so longer, when he will make his final cut for the season. At present, California baseball stock is looking up. The freshman class is developing some first-class material and chances appear brighter than they did a month ago.

Greenlaw, who played in the second 'varsity game of last spring, is holding down first in fair shape. His fielding is good but he is decidedly weak with the stick. At second, the fight is between "Bill" O'Kelly, a former Redlands High School man, and Coane, a freshman. O'Kelly is the better fielder of the two, but Coane is stronger with the bat.

Captain Lewis is back at shortstop, the position he filled two years ago while at third Freshman Gay of Alameda seems to have the best chance.

The outfield is at present being played by White, who was substitute pitcher last year; Brush and Jack Salisbury of Los Angeles. Several other men are making a good fight for the outgardens, but the above trio seems to be the present pick. One of these men will probably have to give way later in the season to Allen, who filled left field last year. He is not yet out, Trainer Christie ordering a rest from athletics until he fully recovers from the effects of a strenuous football season. There is also a possibility of Allen being used at second instead of in the field if the present aspirants for the middle bag do not round into 'varsity form.

"Midget" Jordan, the giant from the 'varsity football team, is also looked upon as a possible outfielder. He will not be able to begin practice until some time in March but he is a good man with the stick and a fast one on the bases. His speed and great size combined, make him a dangerous base-runner and the steadiest infielder is very apt to side-step when the big man slides.

Freshman material will be what the coach will pin his hopes on in the pitching department. Smith, a southpaw from Clovis, has been showing very good form as has Parker, from Alameda. These two men have apparently outdistanced the other candidates, although the coach is giving all his material a good trial. Moulton of Riverside and Stoner of Bakersfield, the catchers of last year, are the men who will fill the backstop position. Both are working hard and the final choice will be hard to make.

GRAHAM'S NEW TEAM.

SENATORS LINE UP STRONG.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 13.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Manager Charlie Graham has announced the personnel of the Senators for this season, as follows:

Pitchers—Hunt, Whalen, Brown, Fitzgerald, Heister, possibly Baum, and a pitcher promised from Boston.

Catchers—Mickey La Longe, Fournier of Portland Northwest Club.

First basemen—"Babe" Danzig of the Lowell club, New England League; Fred Raymer, second, possibly; Darringer, Shinn and Boardman, third and shortstop.

Outfielders—Zamlock, Briggs, Bauer and Kelley.

There is a very serious doubt if the Sacramento club will have the services of "Spider" Baum this season, as the Montreal club has purchased him from the Altoona Club. Taylor of Boston has promised Graham a pitcher as soon as he begins weeding out the staff he is to take on the spring training trip.

RAYMER MAY QUIT.

WILL NOT PLAY EAST.

Fred Raymer is disgusted with the powers-that-be in baseball. Satisfied that he was a free lance to play on this Coast if he wished, he now discovers that the Lancaster Club of the Tri-State League lays claim to his services by virtue of a deal made several years ago.

But Raymer has made up his mind to play in California or not at all, and as he finds that baseball is not a necessary recreation, he means it when he says he will retire if he is forced to return to the East. The Sacramento promoters, however, are confident of adjusting the matter so Raymer can wear a Sacramento uniform this year. He is too good a ball player to lose.

The Lancaster Club secured a claim to Raymer by purchase three years ago. Raymer was playing with the Johnstown Club in the same league at the time, and Lancaster paid Johnstown $750 for him. Raymer did not like the arrangements, so talked business with Managers Curtin and Graham of the Sacramento team, and landed here with a two-years' contract. The contract expired with last season. Lancaster waived claim to him at the Memphis meeting, but now wants some return for the $750 paid out.

FOR FIGHTING FIRES.

GIANT AUTO TRUCK FOR USE IN SOUTHERN BORDER CITIES.

SEAGRAVES fire trucks are being sold in numbers to cities in Southern California by Eddie Helm, manager of the Gorham Rubber Company, who recently secured the agency. The high-powered firefighters have made good wherever they have been installed and as a result are wanted in cities where the motor car is well known.

Now that the motor car has become practical for commercial use the fire truck is occupying an important field and the Seagraves people have entered the market with a line of vehicles second to nothing that has been turned out this year. Eddie Helm has the exclusive agency for Southern California.

Built with a long wheel base and with a rangy hood, under which a powerful four-cylinder engine has been placed, the Seagraves seems to be ideal for quick work. It is easily operated, can be handled on a crowded street, and is fast.

The Seagraves carries a full complement of men and a complete equipment of fire-fighting apparatus including ladders, pikes, axes, buckets and other paraphernalia. It is handsome in appearance and is finished in bright red with appropriate trimmings.

On a speed trial the big truck made thirty-five miles an hour and finished the run on an up-grade. Eddie Helm claims the truck will make forty miles an hour on the road. This is at least twenty miles an hour faster than a horse-drawn vehicle can be taken to any fire.

"The superiority of the auto fire truck over any other vehicle has been proven, certainly for the smaller towns," said Helm yesterday. "We are selling as many trucks as we can get and already have had inquiries from all over the country concerning our line.

"It is my intention to install the trucks in the small cities wherever practical. There is no reason why every town should not have one or more of the fire-fighting vehicles.

"We have the machines down to such a fine point that troubles have been eliminated. There is no such thing as a failure to answer promptly to an alarm. We will guarantee to beat the best horse-drawn vehicle to any fire at any distance.

"This may sound like boasting but the Seagraves has always made good and is one of the finest trucks of the kind now on the market. It has entered the commercial vehicle class at a time when the motor car is claiming much attention."

TENNIS.

finished strokes and a steady service. By defeating Mrs. Bruce and Florence Sutton and giving May the match of her career the San Francisco player is the heroine of the courts and is looked upon as the ultimate American conqueror of May Sutton.

GRITTY STRUGGLE.

McLoughlin and Bundy played out the challenge match last year and have played each other in several other tournaments, Maurice almost invariably winning. In the match today Bundy gave the champion a severe struggle, losing the match only after a game and gritty uphill fight through four sets.

Bundy deserves credit for playing the aggressive game throughout the first three sets. McLoughlin did some of the best driving and passing that has ever been seen on these courts, but was still way off his game, many drives going outside. As long as Bundy's strength lasted he outplayed McLoughlin, but after winning the third set, 6-3, lost the deciding set by a love score, 6-0.

In the first set each player won his service until the fifteenth game when Bundy broke through McLoughlin's American twist. Taking a love game, Maurice rallied and ran out three successive games and set, 10-8. The second set was a killer for Bundy, many games going to deuce. With Bundy on the sunny side of the court, Maurice pulled out four straight, Bundy got two, then McLoughlin won two and the set, 6-2.

McLoughlin made the fatal mistake of loafing in the third set, and prolonged his victory by dropping the set, 6-3, to Bundy. The closing set was easy for McLoughlin, who seemed to find his drives and passed Bundy repeatedly to the net, making a love score. Bundy was played out and could make but a weak stand.

There was never a prettier men's double match played here than the one between McLoughlin and Hardy against Bundy and Duncan, the Northerners winning over a four set route, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0. All four contestants were playing near the top of their game.

Bundy cut off the net balls in his usual cat-like manner, while Duncan's strong strokes killed everything within reach of his racket, except those bugaboos, overhead balls. McLoughlin made almost impossible returns from the back court using his lead well back and saved many a needed point for his side. Maurice's ferocious drive, though, at last got a weak return from the other side, which gave Hardy a chance to put over an ace.

In the doubles match between May Sutton and Mrs. Bruce, against Hazel Hotchkiss and Golda Myer, the Northerners showed up better to the tune of one game in the two sets played, darkness intervening with the score 6-3, 2-6. Hazel and Golda played a fine team game and put up a wall of strength at the net. They resorted mostly to the lobbing game which proved very effective against the Sutton pair, who seemed weak on overhead balls.

Hazel was tired, but fortunately three-quarters of the balls were placed in Golda's court, and the fair Franciscan was there with the returning stroke almost every time.

The tournaments just completed have been productive of unusually fine tennis for an early-season session. The work of the northern representatives was especially gratifying to the enthusiasts, inasmuch as May Sutton is still champion.

The exhibitions of Miss Hotchkiss and Miss Myer were deserving of much praise. Both of these players will undoubtedly climb still higher up the ladder of fame. Miss Myer has shown remarkable improvement. Surely California may well boast a corner on the best women players in the country.

Results:

Men's singles, challenge round—Maurice McLoughlin beat Tom Bundy 10-8, 6-2, 3-6, 6-0.

Ladies' singles, challenge round—May Sutton beat Hazel Hotchkiss 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

Men's doubles, finals—McLoughlin and Hardy beat Bundy and Duncan 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 6-0.

Ladies' doubles, finals—May Sutton and Mrs. Bruce beat Hazel Hotchkiss and Golda Myer 6-3, 2-6. Will play tie off at Long Beach.

ADDITION TO AUTO ROW.

Bekins Motor Car Company Takes Quarters Formerly Occupied by Coney Slaughter.

Another agency has been added to automobile row. The Bekins Motor Car Company has taken possession of the handsome quarters formerly occupied by the C. C. Slaughter Motor Car Company, at No. 1026 South Olive street. American Simplex and Atlas cars are to be handled there.

These cars are of the valveless type, and follow the two-cycle principle in engine construction. They have created considerable interest in the East, where they are better known than here. W. O. Williams is the manager of the new firm, which formerly was in business at Pico and Flower streets.

During the past months Williams has hustled these two makes into prominence, and the cars are much better known here as a result of his strenuous campaign. He has also secured an exclusive agency for a new line of trucks, which will not arrive until after the Licensed Show.

The Bekins company will show a full line of Atlas cars at the show, and have space enough to make an interesting exhibit. The American-Simplex will not be shown because it is unlicensed.

ORIGINAL MERKLE BACK.

GILL SIGNS WITH WHITE SOX.

The signing of Warren Gill with the Chicago Americans marks the return to fast company of the "original Merkle." Gill was one of Pittsburgh's first basemen two years ago and was with Minneapolis last season. He failed to touch second in a game between Pittsburgh and Chicago in 1908, when one of the Pirates made a hit that sent a runner scurrying home with the winning tally, and Chicago protested the game. The umpire did not see the play and the protest was disallowed. Right after this the late Harry Pulliam made his ruling on a play of this kind.

Unfortunately the next time it came up Merkle was the victim and the umpires, who were watching for it, sent in their reports that the Toledo boy had failed to press his foot against the middle sack. What should have been a New York victory over Chicago was declared a tie, and Merkle's blunder cost the Giants the pennant.

EASY FOR COMPTON.

HARVARD SNOWED UNDER.

The Compton High School baseball team won a 20 to 3 victory from the Harvard School nine on the latter's grounds yesterday afternoon. The game throughout was easy for the Compton players.

Four three-base hits made by the Compton players were the features of the game. Of these Gorton knocked out one, and Haskin three. Warner, the Harvard twirler, pitched a steady game in spite of the imposing score, but received poor support.

Batteries, Compton—Priddy and Hirsnate; Harvard School—Warner and Hill. Umpires—Stockwell and Storey.

More Contracts In.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—Three more signed contracts were received at the Chicago National League club headquarters yesterday. Those who sent in their papers were catcher Pat Moran and pitcher Cole, who were with the Cubs last season, and pitcher Andrew J. Carson, drafted from the Portland, Or., club of the Pacific Coast League.

In incipal public enclosure the for men is $2.25 and for women $1.25. There are elevators to carry the crowds to the top of the stand. There are 150 uniformed messengers in attendance for the purpose of placing wagers in the mutuels. There is no noise, no confusion; everything is like a garden party.

In the pari-mutuels the amount handled on the big days is $350,000, of which 10 per cent., or $35,000, is retained by the management. The race course is one mile and three-quarters in circumference. There is a straight six furlongs course. The horses race on dirt, but there is some talk of laying down turf.

The method of starting is the walk-up, and Mr. Hailey says it is nearly perfect. After every race the horses are taken into a corner of the paddock and have a hose turned on them. They seem to like it. After this they are well rubbed down. In the training gallops no saddles are used.

Englander, a North American jockey, with no particular reputation in the United States or Canada, is now the best rider at Buenos Aires. He was remarkably successful in making roguish, cunning animals do their best in races. He is now under contract to Mr. Unzue, one of Buenos Aires's chief racing men, who owns the most extensive breeding farm in Argentina.

It is known as San Jacinto, and covers an area of ground twenty-one miles long by eighteen miles wide. Mr. Unzue has five other "camps," at one of which there are 50,000 ostriches. These are let to dealers at the rate of $1.50 a bird per annum for the feathers.

Many of the "paddocks" of the stud farm are three miles long, and it sometimes takes half a day to find a particular mare and foal. All the stud grooms are either English or Irish. They receive 2 per cent. commission on the yearlings sold annually.

ELIGIBILITY WRANGLE.

No Apparent Chance for Agreement on Rule Between Stanford and California.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Feb. 12.—The deadlock is still on between the Stanford and California representatives on the Intercollegiate Agreement Committee in regard to the time limit in the eligibility rule. The California delegation, which comprises Judge Everett J. Brown of the Superior Court of Alameda county; Graduate Manager R. P. Merritt and Stuart O'Melveny of Los Angeles, is firm in its determination to hold out for a more definite rule and shorter time of competition than that which Stanford desires.

The Blue and Gold men desire an athlete to be barred from competition in intercollegiate 'varsity meets, five years after he first matriculates in the university, whether he has been "in residence" all that time or not, and that of these five years, he shall only be eligible to compete during four collegiate years. Stanford desires that the rule read six years, after matriculation, owing to her probation rule and certain five-year technical courses.

California answers this demand by showing that more five-year courses are offered at Berkeley than at Palo Alto, and that in the majority of cases where a man is probationed at Stanford, he would be "flunked" out here. Moreover the Stanford probation rule is purely a faculty regulation, changeable at any time by a faculty vote, and it is contended that the intercollegiate agreement, which cannot be so amended, should not be based on anything in which a change might vitally affect the agreement.

Should the Agreement Committee fail to reach any conclusion previous to the date of the spring athletic contests, the old rule in regard to eligibility would hold.

HUDSON PLANS LARGE.

Auto City Where Nobby Little Car Is to Be Built in Ever Increasing Numbers.

The Hudson Motor Car Company of Detroit plans by the middle of next summer to be manufacturing automobiles in a new factory which it proposes to erect at a cost of $400,000 in the district known as old Fairview. This announcement was made Thursday by President Roy D. Chapin.

The move, it is pointed out, will make of the adjacent territory an auto city, as factories to manufacture auto parts are expected to follow the erection of any one large plant. The Michigan Central Railroad has promised to build a freight and passenger station in the vicinity.

The plans to build the factory were completed following the purchase of sixty-eight acres of the D. J. Campau farm between Jefferson and Kercheval avenues by the controlling interests of the Hudson company, and members of the firm of Chalmers-Detroit Motor Company, who also own interests in the Hudson firm. The Campau farm fronts on Jefferson avenue, on the north side of the street, directly east of the Chalmers company's plant. The deal also involved eighteen acres from the Hendrie farm, and this added to adjacent property already owned by the purchasers make the site of the new factory 106 acres. The price paid is said to be $140,000.

"It is the purpose of the Hudson Motor Company to erect on the Jefferson-avenue frontage one of the finest automobile plants in the country," said Chapin. "The factory will be of the most modern reinforced concrete construction, and will enable the Hudson company to turn out this coming season cars in sufficient quantity to more nearly satisfy our dealers than in the past.

"Our growing business has necessitated considerable enlargement in the scope of the company. Among the automobile trade, this was naturally expected, when the announcement was made last month of the control of this company passing into the hands of H. E. Coffin and F. O. Bezner and myself. We have been prominently identified with the automobile industry for eight or ten years."

KLINE CARS HERE.

Glenn Edmonds Is the Agent and the First Two Types Have Bearings of Foreign Cars.

Glenn D. Edmonds has received his first shipment of Kline cars which includes a toy-tonneau touring car and a roadster. The latter is finished in pearl gray and is a particularly handsome machine. Edmonds has the agency and will handle the high-powered cars under the firm name of the Edmonds Motor Car Company.

The Kline cars are to be sold at No. 1215-17 South Flower street. They are to be received in numbers after the first of March. They are finished with a six-cylinder motor in block form but with the cylinders cast separately.

The Kline people believe absolutely in the six-cylinder type. The toy-tonneau model, which reached here yesterday, is finished with a comfortable five-passenger body and seems big enough for an ordinary family touring car. While the car is suggestive of some of the late French types it has many points of originality.

The concern builds a two-passenger speed car which should be popular here as a gentleman's runabout. This car is to be shipped here to the local agent this year, but Edmonds will not be able to bring one here in time for the show.

Any One Could Write an vertisement Like This--No One Else Could Show This Car

It is easy to make claims for cars. Any car can be the best car made, and most cars are—in advertisements.

All the advertising in the world won't make a car a good car. It has to be a good car, if it is good, because of its design, its materials and its construction. Advertising cannot take the place of those things.

We spend a good many thousands of dollars a year advertising our cars, but that is not a reason why you should buy a Chalmers car. The reason lies in the car itself.

Why a $10,000 Exhibit

We have an educational show exhibit that cost us $10,000. We did not put this exhibit in Madison Square Garden, simply for the purpose of advertising, or even for the purpose primarily of making immediate sales.

We put in this educational exhibit because we wanted to give every one interested the fairest possible opportunity to see everything there is to see about the struction and operation, the workmanship and finish, of Chalmers cars.

We are so sure of our car that we cut the chassis open from end to end for inspection at the shows. We are glad to show it all, for we are proud of it all.

We are sending this exhibit to Los Angeles for the Licensed show.

We Favor Shows

We are in favor of automobile shows, just as you are. You are are in favor of them because they enable you to make careful comparisons and make them quickly.

A show enables you to put competing cars side by side and go over them point by point.

We invite comparison point by point. We have often wished in selling our cars we could put them side by side with other cars that are being considered. It is the only way to arrive at a right conclusion.

It is not our purpose in advertising, or in having an expensive exhibit for the shows, to try and rush people into buying cars. We are trying to help you go into the motor car question as thoroughly as you want to go into it.

We are trying constantly to teach every one to make careful comparisons. All we ask is that you examine our car in comparison with all the other cars, point by point; test it out as well as you can; take the past records into consideration; then if you buy some other car we have nothing to say.

Consider Point By Point

More than a million dollars will be spent this year on automobile advertisements. But you are not fair with yourself if you buy solely by an advertisement.

Perhaps some one can write a better advertisement than we can write. Yet we are honestly convinced that no one can offer you so good a value in a car as we can offer. Hence, if you did not take the car, rather than the advertisement, into consideration, you would not be treating yourself fairly.

Consider the Chalmers car point by point. It pleases first through the sense of sight. We believe that there is no car which is more satisfying to the eye than the Chalmers. The lines are beautiful. The finish is the best. There is nothing skimpy about the Chalmers car. Nothing cheap.

Every Chalmers car has that tailor-made, well-groomed, carefully finished appearance that is always a source of delight and pride to the owner. Yet our prices are low.

Little Things Mean Perfection

So many "little things" have been carefully looked after on the Chalmers car which have been left undone on other cars. Go over this car from radiator to rear axle. Put any other car alongside of it while you are doing so.

The radiator looks good and it is good. Note even the cap on the radiator and the monogram—very small things of themselves, but showing thoughtful attention to details. Note the fenders; they are heavy and strong, securely fastened. Nothing tin-panny about them.

Note the care that has been taken to protect the mechanism and the passengers from dust; examine the running boards, the door latches, the wiring and dash assembly.

See if the driver could be in a more comfortable position in any car.

Note the woodwork on the car. Compare the wood, and the finish of it, with any other car selling near our price.

Note the upholstering. Note the care with which the painting and striping has been done.

Note the big steering wheel and the steering post and even the wood of the steering wheel. Note the big handsome doors. Note the tastefully designed gear and brake levers. Note the large wheels and how the rear wheels are bolted to the brake drums.

A cheap tie will spoil the effect of a sixty dollar suit. Hence the "little things," the little matters of taste and style that mean perfection, have been taken care of in the medium-priced Chalmers cars. Good taste has a commercial value and we realize it.

You Must Feel Safe

Be careful to examine cars for the "Elements of Safety." There are four main elements of safety: A strong frame; strong steering connections; strong wheels, well fastened to the axles; and big, strong, quick-acting brakes.

Have these points in mind when you examine cars. We have confidence that the Chalmers cars will come out of any comparison on these points with flying colors.

WHAT SORT OF MAN IS PHIL. A. STANTON?

Study of Candidate for Governor. His Rise from Poverty—The Coup in the Last Legislature That Gave Him a National Fame.

BY HARRY C. CARR.

TO VERY few men has come the honor of tearing away black clouds that threaten the flag.

Just a year ago, almost to a day, a real estate man of this city, named Philip A. Stanton, was suddenly thrust into this dramatic position.

On one side stood the press of Japan, growling like bulldogs, while the army of defeated Russia waited quietly in barracks; on the other side, stood a wild-eyed California Legislature, evidently determined to offer the Japanese nation the deadliest insult it could think of.

In this crisis, the Speaker of the State Assembly stepped to the bat. Theretofore known as a successful business man, playing politics for fun, as men play tennis or collect fancy pipes, Stanton became, overnight, a world figure.

He suddenly developed unthought-of power and ability. While two nations waited anxiously, he went down into the bear pit, and choked and coaxed and bullied the Jap baiters into submission.

No one knows just how serious the crisis was; but a grateful telegram from the President of the United States gave a pretty strong hint.

As a logical sequence, Stanton has now been put forward as a candidate for Governor.

Politicians generally concede him a fair chance of success. Of all the candidates thus far in the field, perhaps, he has the greatest natural ability. Stanton has, as prize fighters say, a punch in each hand, and a quick, decisive mind. As a man of large business affairs, he has already been assured of the support of business men of many parties and many faiths, who realize that, during the next four years of immense commercial undertakings, California should have an executive of business training. An informal organization of business men already has undertaken the financing and direction of his campaign.

Stanton is also expected to benefit by the feeling that the next Governor should come from Southern California.

His personality will help him in the fight. Perhaps there has never been a State campaign wherein personality played so important a role as in this one, which follows the adoption of the direct primary law.

AN ATTRACTIVE MAN.

Added to the prestige of his fine record as Speaker of the Assembly during a session which included such strenuosities as the anti-race rack law, the banking law, the fight against the professional lobby and the job grabber, Stanton is an attractive man.

As inheritance from a long line of early American pioneers, he has Americanism written all over him. He would be recognized anywhere as the pure American type. His cigar pokes out of the corner of his mouth at an angle that requires three centuries of American life to learn. He has the easy, careless friendliness of the old stock; the strong nose, the fighting chin and the truly American habit of spreading, even over his fights, a veneer of quaint humor.

His struggle against ill health and poverty to final wealth and power is a typical American story.

The Stantons lived in Cleveland, O., where Phil's father was a struggling lawyer. The boy was so delicate that he was unable to go to school but a few years. Not having anything to do, he rustled around, on his own responsibility, and secured an appointment as page to the State Legislature.

It is a curious fact that no page ever ran errands in a Legislature without being bitten with the ambition to be a politician—and most of them do become politicians.

When he was 19, and had saved about $100 from his pay, he became seriously sick again. The family doctor told him that California was his only chance. Four days thereafter, the boy was on the train, bound for Los Angeles. He landed here in 1886 with half his money spent for railroad fare—seeking his fortune on $50 capital.

He found work, collecting names for a city directory, and managed to save another $100. George Shatto, who at one time owned Catalina Island, advised him to buy a lot out Second street, and in thirty days he doubled his money.

He invested the $200 with another $50 he had saved, and more than doubled it on another lot—for these were the wildest days of the first boom.

The boy then had $500 or $600, and was somewhat surprised to know there was that much real money in the world. Within a few weeks, he quit his job on the city directory and opened the first real estate office on Broadway.

Innocent and inexperienced in business, the boy had an idea this was going to last forever. In a few months he had piled up a small fortune, and in a few more months he was ruined. The boom had busted, leaving him with a lot of property on his hands that he couldn't finish paying for.

HARD SLEDDING.

Stanton says he had hard sledding for the next few years. He put all the money he could dig up into an option on some land near Anaheim. The option was for thirty days. For those thirty days it rained dismally and almost without let-up. He couldn't have taken any customers to see his land without a sea-going ark. He managed to get the time extended, and after a desperate struggle, managed to swing the land. In the end it made him a large fortune.

Meanwhile, the Ohio page boy had begun to smell around politics.

His father had come here to live, and had a desire to be police justice. It was pie for the legislative-trained page. A month after he became 21 he was a delegate to the convention that nominated his father.

Stanton finally became the dominant figure of politics in the old Third Ward. Like most political manipulators, he went into it merely for the fun of the game. He did not become a candidate himself until 1902.

It is said that he entered the Legis-

DON'T HAVE TO SEE IT.

Special Favor Granted Intending Settlers in Yuma District by Head of General Land Office.

As a special favor to intending settlers in the Yuma district that is to be opened March 1, the local register and receiver of the local land office have secured an order from Washington allowing entry without the applicants first seeing the land. The rule will not apply in other cases, and will not be considered a precedent. It is the general law that in making application for government land, the person must swear he has seen the land in question.

The letter from the commissioner states that entries for the 173 farms in the Yuma district may be made directly by selection from the plats on file in the Los Angeles office, without previous personal examination of the land.

As the agent of the Chamber of Commerce building in which the land office is located, refuses to allow prospective entrymen to remain in the building overnight, the line will form in front of the building on the night of the 28inst. Those in front will be admitted to the building at an early hour. The farms will be allotted in rotation until the supply is exhausted. It is expected that there will be several hundred applications for the land.

GUESS AGAIN!

POLICE CHIEF IS YET IN DOUBT.

MAYOR SAYS DR. CHAMBERS WILL NOT BE APPOINTED.

Statement Alarms Friends of the Candidate, Who Seemed to Have Assurances of Success Friday—Conference, of Yesterday Fail to Bring About a Result.

Exit Dr. W. J. Chambers as probable Chief of Police!

He that stood mighty among the aspirants Friday was in official oblivion Saturday.

"Dr. Chambers will not be appointed Chief of Police" is the statement made by the Mayor yesterday. That and no more.

It had been understood by Dr. Chambers's friends that the Mayor and Commissioners Topham and Johnson were prepared to vote for him at the session of the Police Commission tomorrow night. When they learned the Mayor's announcement yesterday they expressed astonishment. Several of them said they had it from the Mayor's own lips that he was ready to vote for Chambers, but they admitted that this was several days ago, and that it was not an unqualified statement.

The elimination of Dr. Chambers does not mean that a Chief has been found. Far from it, if friends of all the aspirants may be trusted. They gather the impression that the appointment is "up in the air" and that no action is likely tomorrow night, now that Chambers seems to be out of it.

Efforts were made yesterday, it is understood, by the Mayor, members of his commission, and other prominent Goo-Goo partisans to find a way out, but little progress was made. What was done no party to the conferences would say, but unofficial statements indicated that a majority of the commission cannot agree on any one man.

The names mentioned as under consideration are Alexander Galloway, who was strong with the commission two weeks ago; S. L. Browne, chief of the District Attorney's secret service; as she smilingly leaned forward in an automobile yesterday while a T photographer snapped this picture.

ONE OF THE RICHEST WOMEN SEES A JOK

Mrs. Russell Sage,

A HANDSOME old lady alighted from a belated overland train at the Arcade Station yesterday morning. Passing the throng of persons one always finds at the Southern Pacific when an eastern train arrives, she made her way to a waiting automobile and was whirled away to her hotel. The lady was Mrs. Russell Sage, one of the world's richest women and noted for her philanthropy.

A photographer for The Times sighted the little group and shouldered his way through the crowd. "Say, is that Mrs. Sage?" he inquired of one of the attendants. She nodded her head.

The picture man was eager that Mrs. Sage should pose for him. She smiled, hesitated, and but for her nephew, who was with her, would probably have complied. As it was, an automobile darted up in front of the station, and Mrs. Sage was gently assisted to a seat in the tonneau.

"Get back from here, please," said Maj. Slocum, U.S.A., the nephew of Mrs. Sage, as the photographer pressed forward. "If you don't keep away, I will call a policeman."

The officer was plainly irritated, and explained that all the members of the party were tired and not in a humor for interviews or pictures.

As the motor car started the photographer, nothing daunted, snapped his shutter and got his picture. Mrs. Sage appeared much amused at the little by-play, and obligingly leaned forward when she saw the camera leveled at her. She seemed to view the affair as a good joke on her companions.

Mrs. Sage, Maj. Slocum and Mrs. Slocum left New York, the 3rd inst. for an extended trip of this coast. Several brief stops were made on the way. Mrs. Sage made contributions to the Salvation Army in New Orleans, San Antonio, Tex., and possibly at one or two other places. Maj. Slocum characterized the press accounts of Mrs. Sage's munificent donations as fabrications.

ROBERT J. BURDETTE'S COMMENT

LII.

"Full Steam Ahead!"

HONOLULU, January.

The other day the advance guard—if fleets have such things—of the Pacific squadron came into this port of Honolulu, and one of the first things the bluejackets did when they came ashore after a ride of about 3000 miles, was to hire something to ride on—trolleys, automobiles, bicycles, and by preference, horses. A sailor is notoriously a bad rider, but just as notably he loves to be in the saddle, what time he isn't falling out of it. It is told of a bluejacket that once he came ashore and hied him to a livery stable to engage a good saddle horse. He carefully looked over the stock—nearly a hundred horses, but found nothing to suit him. The "hoss man" was perplexed and amazed. "Man alive," he said, "what kind of a horse do you want?" "Oh," said Jackie, "I want one with a thunderin' long back. There's five of us."

Well, one of the sailors of our own fleet found a horse that suited him. And once on the bridge, he proceeded to ride. It may be the pride and joy of being in supreme command that moves the sailorman to play cavalryman whenever he can. At any rate, the bluejacket rode the horse until the animal fell from exhaustion. And then the stable was notified, the veterinary came, and the horse was shot. And the local papers charitably excused the sailorman from the charge of cruelty, but reprimanded him for ignorance. And they were probably correct.

A cavalryman considers himself servant of his horse. BY HARRY C. CARR.

HE wildest week in the brief but eventful career of Mr. Bunch Dorgan!

e afternoon, the Boss came home a long face and a yellow tele- n which, he said, called him out he city on important business.

f course you remember that we a box at the Kirmess, tonight," his wife with cutting emphasis.

ertainly; certainly," said the Boss lly. He mumbled something about ctors' meetings; but his wife only sarcastically, "Well, I hope you y the fight," and marched out of room.

e Boss followed miserably after "Why can't you go to the Kir- s, anyhow?" he entreated.

Vho with?" queried the icicle lady, ng her eye brows, "Bunch Dorgan, chauffeur?"

ure! That's it. Bunch Dorgan. very one," shouted the Boss de- tedly.

s wife suddenly laughed. "All t; I'll do it," she said with danc- eyes.

unch received the news with con- nation.

e Boss put it on personal grounds Bunch weakened a little. "Well," said with a fearful sigh.

hat's a good fellow; here are the ets. You will have a good box."

A what!" screamed Bunch, indig- tly, "A box! Me in one of them us cages! Nothing doing. I'll y water fer the elephant, but I 't be one of the animals. Here. e your tickets. You can scratch and claim the entrance money. I 't know what the josh is; but I t any picture show. I'd like to do the favor; but I ain't making s for any spotlights."

Nix," said Bunch obstinately, when employer persuaded. "Why, the thing you know I'd have my feet the rail and when little Eva died whistle sure. When I heard the upstairs say 'Hats off, gentlemen, ase,' I'd be sure to grab fer my lid disgrace the family."

Bunch," said a silvery voice be- d them, "You aren't refusing to me to the theater, are you?"

No, mum," muttered Bunch meekly. he's got a number hung on me— e as you," he grumbled, when she t away.

unch broke out in open and no- ous rebellion again, however, when found that he had to wear the s' evening clothes.

Back up wit' the moonlights," he wled. "When you ast me to go to blow-out, I was willing to take a nce. You asked me to sit in the e with ribbons braided in my mane I said I'd do that for you. The t thing you know, you'll get dis- lified fer crowding. Anyhow, I 't going to wear the moonlights."

lis objections were beaten down one one, however, and he tried on the t. His disgust was huge.

Why don't you go back and buy front end of this suit?" he asked.

That's my open-face suit," said the rather tamely. Bunch. "There ain't anything to it but a rim."

"Now," said the Boss, admiring Bunch, who was standing with his arms spraddled out like a wet chicken, "Now you look as though you had been tackling a society function."

"I look as though I had been in a clinch with a house-moving gang and they had pulled off the front porch," said Bunch sourly.

Bunch glared down at his shining shirt front. "Ain't there any drop curtain goes with this snow scene?" he asked belligerently. "I got enough shirt front here to make a circus tent. Do you know what I look like? I look like a moving picture curtain. All I need is a sign asking ladies to please remove their hats."

Bunch was really a handsome figure with his superb shoulders and erect carriage; and acquitted himself with eclat. He even inspired admiring curiosity. Most of the time he sat in dead silence.

"What do you think of it, Bunch?" asked his employer's wife.

"Classy dames," said Bunch laconically, looking at the society dancers, as the scene shifted from dance to dance like the little figures in a kaleidoscope.

Presently she asked, "What are you smiling at?"

"I was just thinking," said Bunch, "that if you told them they acted like actresses, they would get sore; and if you told them they didn't act like actresses, they would get sore."

A few days after that, the Boss's little niece arrived on a visit. She was a shy, timid little thing, with a haunting appeal in her eyes. She had lived a singularly lonely life with her invalid father out on the edge of the desert. They had asked her to come in for the big Mardi Gras ball.

"We will give her such a good time," said the Boss, "that it will last her for the rest of her life."

The Boss's wife had helped her to plan a dainty fancy-dress costume and the girl was living in one of those intoxicated transports of joy that only comes once—when one is 18 and waiting for one's first ball.

In the height of their preparations came a telegram from the Boss announcing that he could not possibly return in time for the Mardi Gras. The Boss' wife went to her room and cried, but she didn't tell Mary—the girl's name was Mary.

Finally, an idea struck her. She flew out to the garage where Bunch was tinkering with one of the motor cars.

"Bunch," she said, "I want you to take me to the Mardi Gras."

"Excuse me," said Bunch dryly, "but Ive got a telegram calling me out of town on important business.

"You wouldn't refuse me, Bunch?"

"Well," temporized Bunch, "do you have to wear moonlights?"

"It's a very swell affair," said the lady regretfully.

"Then I pass," said Bunch firmly.

"Now listen to me, Bunch, said the lady quickly. She told him of the girl's unhappy, lonely life; how they had planned to give her one big time and how she was in the house singing over her little fancy dress; and now it would break her heart.

"Why—don't you get some of them rah-rah boys to take her?" said Bunch helplessly.

"Well," said the lady, frankly, "they wouldn't do it. You see Mary is a dear. 'She don't belong," said Bunch sympathetically.

"'That's it," said the lady eagerly. "I want you to take her and give her the best time she ever had in her whole life; see that she gets her dance programme filled and all that."

"I'd queer the whole outfit," objected Bunch.

"You will be all in fancy dress and maybe masked, the lady argued. "No one will know."

"All right, then, I'm on," said Bunch holding out his hand to cinch the bargain.

Bunch, to his intense disgust, went dressed as a French clown in polka dotted flowing pantaloons and a chalk-whitened face. Mary was a flower girl and the Boss' wife was a nun.

"Isn't it—isn't it just divine?" breathed the girl on Mr. Dorgan's arm as they walked the grand march.

"It looks like the walk-around in a circus," said Bunch without enthusiasm.

Bunch scribbled his name pretty liberally over Mary's programme. Then he didn't know what to do. Her programme was still an aching void. He went out into the dressing-room and tried to get into conversation with some of the supercilious young men who were smoking there; but was coolly snubbed.

"This is what a rank outsider gets when he tries to butt into the game," he muttered bitterly. At the end of the second dance, feeling lonely and out of it, he slipped out onto the porch. He heard a woman cryin, which was a sound Bunch couldn't stand.

"Excuse me, lady," he said sympathetically, "but if there is anything I kin do for you, please deal me a hand."

The lady turned and to his surprise it was the Boss' wife.

"Bunch,' she sobbed, "it's just breaking my heart. That poor child hasn't a single name on her programme except yours. She is sitting there in the corner, looking so wistful and mortified and unhappy, I couldn't bear to stay."

"What's the batter with the rah-rah boys?" asked Bunch.

"They wouldn't dance with her—horrid little beasts," cried the lady. "I asked several young fellows I know. They all pretended they had their programmes full. One of them took her programme and pretended to write on it, but didn't take a dance. The poor child looked as though some one had struck her. Oh, Bunch, Bunch, how can people be so cruel!"

"Where is he now?" asked Bunch, his jaw setting in the hard, brutal line that the sporting reporters used to call "Dorgan's fighting face."

"He's in the dressing-room," sobbed the Boss's wife.

Bunch tured on his heel and went back into the dressing-room, flinging aside the curtain with a very different manner than that of his crestfallen exit.

"I would like to have you dance with a friend of mine," he said, walking straight up to a languid youth who was smoking a monogramed cigarette.

"Who is she?" the youth asked coolly.

"I'll give you a introduction," said Bunch.

The young man had half risen, but suddenly sat down again. "Nothing doing," he said. "I have been up against that once. She dances like a crow. I saw her waltzing with you. Much obliged, but nothing doing."

"Oh, yes, there's something doing," said Bunch, stepping up close to the rah-rah youth who rose in visible alarm.

"I—I can't," protested the boy. "I went up and pretended to take a dance with her once and then ducked. I couldn't go back now."

"You are going back now and you are going to apologize like a whipped dog and take two dances," said Bunch, who loomed up over the lad like a giant.

The boy with the manicured cigarette went away whimpering toward Mary's corner.

Bunch turned on the other young man who was decorated with diamond frat pins.

"I want to introduce you to a friend of mine," he said shortly.

"I don't care to meet your friends," and started to leave the dressing-room.

Any one who had happened to peek in at the door might have seen a French clown with superb shoulders overtake a languid young man with one stride. Flinging him back into the dressing-room, Bunch stood guard at the door.

"I agreed to show a young friend of mine all the sights here tonight and I've got as far down as the dogs," he growled. "So you're next."

"If you don't let me out of here, I am going to call for help," said the sophomore.

Bunch was upon him with one stride. Grabbing one of his hands, he gave the forearm a sudden twist that brought the boy moaning to his knees, in an agony of pain.

"Don't, don't," he begged. "For the love of God let me go."

"How do you like it?" taunted Bunch. "That's jiu-jitsu. I'm pretty sure a little more of that would make you feel like dancing."

"I haven't any dances left," moaned the boy.

Bunch snatched up his programme and scratched the names from several dances. "Now you've got three dances left," he said grimly.

The sophomore picked himself up with a choking sob from the floor.

Bunch led him over and introduced him to Mary. "I'm going to stand over here and wait," he said. "You come back here and show me your programme when you've asked her."

After the next dance, Bunch walked into the dressing-room. As he entered, a sudden hush fell upon the half dozen young men there assembled. Their faces showed suppressed excitement. Every one turned to look at him.

How Nervous Men Get Most Out of Life.

(From "Successful Men.")

Every normal minded man wishes to get all he can out of life—but many a man knows that he is falling far short.

The successful man works, eats and plays with the keenest enjoyment, because his nerves are keenly sensitive. He tastes, hears, sees and feels all with the highest emotions of vigorous, healthy nerves. As a consequence he has stamina, endurance and personal magnetism, which makes those near and dear to him worship his manliness, chivalry and strenuousness.

Without keen, sensitive, well nourished nerves, such a man would be an object of pity, and not the brilliant success he is. All men should have well-nourished nerves, but if the blood and vital organs do not supply the chemical or substance known as nerve fluid, then the waste of the nerves if not renewed daily and hourly as it should be the nerves become exhausted, giving rise to such symptoms as trembling hands and limbs, cold feet and hands, melancholia, hysteria, timidity, nervousness, sleeplessness, dizziness, heart palpitation, pains in the back, headache, languor and weariness at all times. A most valuable nerve treatment, restorative in every sense, is to be found in the following prescription, emanating, it is said, from a brilliant and successful specialist on nervous ailments.

The treatment can be prepared in the privacy of home and thus causes no one any embarrassment. First get three ounces of syrup of sarsaparilla compound in a six-ounce bottle. To this add one ounce of compound fluid of balmwort, shake well and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce of tincture cadomene compound (not cardamon) and one ounce of compound essence cardiol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring.

It is astonishing to feel the new nerve force, the steadied nerves, and the control of every muscle in the body after using this. Over worked office men, and the many victims of society's late hours and dissipation will surely find in this the restorative, rejuvenating force they are sorely in need of. The ingredients are used in various prescriptions and any good druggist can supply them.

time, she came to the conclusion that the specialist was wrong and went back to her old dentist. On the morning fixed upon for the operation, she telephone Dr. Deichmiller that she had "lost her nerve" and would not visit him.

The doctor sent a bill for the work, because he declared that he had set apart half a day, when he might have done work for other persons. She refused to pay and he brought suit.

"Even though she thought he had guessed wrong does not save her from liability," the magistrate declared. "Professional work is all guesswork to a certain extent. The doctor looks at your tongue, feels your pulse and guesses that your spleen is out of order. The lawyer takes the temperature of the case you present to him and guesses that you have a cause of action.

"The justice of the peace is a guesser. I am guessing that Mrs. Lindsay is liable in this case. I have guessed wrong in seven cases tried before me—at least the Supreme Court said so. Of course, my guess is that they guessed wrong.

"But, anyway, if the specialist did guess wrong about the operation being necessary, Mrs. Lindsay had no right to waste his time. She should have notified him three or four days before that she was not going to keep the appointment, so that he could have made arrangements with some one else.

"That little fib she told about losing her nerve because she was too modest to tell him the real reason she was not going to submit to the operation has nothing to do with the case."

Judgment for $15 and costs was given the doctor.

RICH SISTER IS COMING IN, TOO.

EAST HOLLYWOOD WISHES TO JOIN LOS ANGELES.

Election Next Friday—Fifth Proposition Within Seven Months and Probably the Last for Some Time. This Neighborhood Valued at Millions and Has no Debts.

With 3000 inhabitants, $2,000,000 to its credit in taxable values and not a penny of debt, East Hollywood will ask to be admitted to Los Angeles next Friday. It will be the fifth annexation election in seven months and may be the last Los Angeles will hold for many months to come.

First came San Pedro and Wilmington, then the Colegrove-Arlington area on the west side, and, last month, Hollywood. Seeing that its big sister was ready to join the greater city the unincorporated portion between the new city limits and Griffith Park made ready.

Hollywood being a city was able to "consolidate" with Los Angeles. But East Hollywood, being merely a fine neighborhood, must be "annexed" to share municipal administration. Being unincorporated, East Hollywood had no government except that shared in the county administration and could create no debt. But that is not why it has no debt, for it would not have issued bonds if it had had the power. Its citizenship has just been waiting until it could pledge its wealth for water and harbor improvements.

The election next Friday will give it this opportunity, for there seems to be an overwhelming sentiment in favor of the union. Nevertheless the friends of the annexation, both in the city and in East Hollywood, are working for a large vote on the theory that too large a majority won't hurt.

One of the really great reasons why Los Angeles needs East Hollywood is the strategic position it gives the city in the control of the bed of the Los Angeles River at points vital to the control of the aqueduct. It is because of this feature that William Mulholland, chief engineer of the Los Angeles Aqueduct, is urging the annexation.

All city officers of Los Angeles are urging annexation because East Hollywood is looked upon as the only logical solution to the annexation problem at present. It is bounded on the east by Hoover street and Sunset boulevard, on the west by Center street and Normandie avenue, on the north by Griffith Park and on the south by Hollywood, or Prospect boulevard.

On all sides of East Hollywood there is the city. In fact, it is impossible to leave East Hollywood without walking into Los Angeles, since Hollywood became a part of the city. Just beyond Griffith Park there are 1200 acres of land which the city expects to use as a municipal farm. Unless the park and the land are made contiguous to the city, police control of it will be impossible.

The Annexation Committee for East Hollywood is composed of L. A. Newman, chairman; E. H. Eskew, secretary; R. B. Bowles, treasurer; Hugh Wooten, W. E. Bowles, C. H. Reinhardt, W. A. Colwell and Harry Bentham. Each is a property holder in Los Angeles as well as in East Hollywood.

GETTING AT THE WORK.

Highway Commission in Earnest for Good Roads—Bids for Lot of Oil to Be Asked.

That the Highway Commission is in earnest in its promise to give the citizens good roads and lots of them during the coming year is evidenced by the fact that the Board of Supervisors will be asked tomorrow to advertise for bids on 60,000 barrels of prepared road oil.

This will be one of the most important contracts which will be let in many months in connection with the project. The cost will probably be in the neighborhood of $60,000.

The specifications will require that the oil shall be delivered within a year. This means that the commissioners intend to build 100 miles of roads before 1911, as this quantity of oil will spread over that much of the thoroughfares.

Before the end of the week the county will begin construction of the Los Feliz road, between Hollywood and Tropico, two and one-half miles in length. As the bids on this section were not satisfactory, it will be constructed by labor directly employed.

Seventy-five men are at work and nearly a hundred animals are being used on the Newhall tunnel division, which is one of the toughest propositions in the whole system. Cuts ranging from sixty to seventy feet have been made on the approaches and the men are just getting into the bore.

CITIZENS WANT FLAGMAN AT MANCHESTER AVENUE.

Supervisors Will Be Asked to Take Matter Up With Pacific Electric Company—Coroner's Books Show Ten Persons Killed on Tracks There in Little Over a Year.

Persons residing in the vicinity of Manchester avenue are preparing to present a petition to the Board of Supervisors asking that steps be taken to compel the Pacific Electric to station gatemen or flagmen at the crossings in that neighborhood.

They base their request on the fact that the records in the Coroner's office show that ten persons have been killed by the railway in this district in a little more than a year. They declare that it is necessary for their children to cross the tracks daily in going to school and that parents are in constant fear that their little ones will be run down.

The petition will be circulated for signers tomorrow and it is expected that nearly three hundred signatures will be procured within less than a week, as that number of property owners save already declared they are in favor of such action.

Attorney Fred L. Hunt has been retained to represent the citizens in the matter and will be their official spo... man before the Supervisors.

NO MISFIT TOGA FOR US.

A year hence the State Legislature will be in session and a United States Senator is to be elected to succeed Hon. Frank P. Flint. This fact quite justifies the headline above. The toga which Mr. Flint will drop is full man's-size. It will take a man of first-class ability to fill the garment.

When the junior California Senator goes out of office he will leave a remarkable record. Mr. Flint has surprised alike friends and enemies here in his home State and home town. His life had not been long enough (Frank P. Flint is a young man) nor had he had full opportunity until he entered the Senate to show just what he was. His short career in Washington has surprised not only Californians who knew him, but also the ripest statesmen at the national capital. When the tariff act which now governs the fiscal policy of the country was under debate at Washington the California Senator was one of the leaders in the debates. Indeed, when the Senate Republican leader, Mr. Aldrich of Rhode Island, necessarily absented himself from the Senate for a few days, he left the pending bill in charge of Senator Flint. For a young man in his first term in that body to reach a place of so great distinction is almost unique in its history.

But it is here at home that we know the full measure of Senator Flint's capacity. No other measure came before the legislative branch of the government during the time that the Senator has been in office so important to the State of California as the tariff bill. We saw, when this question first became actively interesting, the absolute necessity of the California delegation all getting into the attitude of the stand-patter. In the Dingley tariff act, under which our fiscal affairs were managed, California had been faring wonderfully well for a period of about ten years. About every important industry of the State was thoroughly protected. We wanted to lose none of these advantages, and to gain others if possible. It was obvious that every other State would be in the same position. The Senator or Congressman from any State who became too rabid in his tariff reform campaign was sure to lose something for his people. No man at the national capital grasped this idea more firmly or saw the facts more clearly than Mr. Flint. To the California delegation generally, and to Mr. Flint particularly, California owes it that her interests are as well protected under the Payne-Aldrich tariff act as under the one it superseded. We not only retained all our protective advantages, but we added to them, and the addition is all due, primarily if not entirely, to the diplomatic and forceful efforts of Senator Flint.

This is not the only great achievement of the junior Senator by which the State of California gains much, and the southern part of the State gains most. Our junior Senator has succeeded in getting liberal appropriations for every proper improvement and development in the State of California, and he has been particularly earnest and entirely successful in obtaining this liberal treatment for many purposes in Southern California. The Federal building, the harbors at San Pedro and Wilmington, also San Diego harbor, are to receive generous aid from the government, and Mr. Flint has obtained it. He is now securing an assay office and subtreasury for Los Angeles.

The next six years will be fraught with immense interests to the State of California, and most so to the southern half of the commonwealth. The Panama Canal will be completed and there will be a celebration of that great event at some city on the Coast, probably in California. This is only the smallest of all the important matters which will arise in connection with the opening of the canal. It will mark the beginning of a new world-epoch in commerce for all the nations. It will be at its inception the greatest event in the history of the west coast of America. There will be all sorts of measures to formulate, to discuss and to put into action. It is as sure as anything except "death and taxes" that during the term of the next Senator from California a new tariff bill will have to be made. The free-trade Democratic party and its close and pestiferous allies, the emasculated Republican "insurgents," will make that necessary. If we send any undersized citizen with the Senatorial toga trailing the dust around the feet that support his diminutive form, and hanging in wrinkles all around his little personality, we shall have reason to regret the absence of Senator Flint from the floor of the Senate.

This is the question of the hour. One-half of the Senators that compose the upper house of the State Legislature and all the Assembly will be chosen next November. Upon the selection of these State legislators will depend the caliber and character of the man who is to succeed Hon. Frank P. Flint. Petitions are in circulation now by many of those who seek to go to Sacramento next January. The Republican people of the State are lining up in different ways around men whose names are in public prints as aspirants for the Senatorial toga. The two important matters for us here in Southern California are, first to secure a full-sized man for the place. The next is to find him in Southern California. The northern portion of the State has the veteran Senator George C. Perkins already in the Senate as the senior Senator from California. In every way we are entitled to the junior Senator. We have so many interests in Southern California different from those of the northern portion of the State that it is only just as well as important to divide this honor between the two sections. Then every interest will have its advocate on the floor of the Senate. We are very earnest, and we are sure we are right, in putting the caliber of the man before his geographical habitat. It would be vastly better to have a northern man of the right size in the Senate than a southern man of a boy's size. But we are not confronted with any such dilemma. We have men in Southern California that measure fully up to the stature of a man in every respect on whose shoulders the Senatorial toga may be hung gracefully and becomingly. Perhaps no body of our people have more at stake in this than the fruit growers, and The Times appeals to them with all earnestness to take prompt action. Let this numerous, wealthy and in every way influential body of our citizenship get together and take action which will result in a campaign promising the selection of the right person to be sent to Washington when Mr. Flint returns here to his old home to stay.

The task that will confront the new junior Senator from California will be gigantic, and it will take a man of the right bone and sinew, of the right nerve and brain, to do it. We want a diplomatic—an adroit man, if you please—but we want a man who stands square on his two feet, bolt upright with his head in the air, no leaning to the right side nor to the left; a man who knows when he is straight and will lean no more backward than forward; a man who knows what Republican principles are, and, knowing, dares to stand for them. We want no little wisp of straw of a man in the Senatorial toga, to be blown hither and thither by every little wind of agitation and new-fangled doctrine that may be sprung upon the country by some semi-populized, falsely-called Republican. We want a stalwart, we want a stand-patter, we want an old-fashioned Republican Senator with good horse sense, with clear vision and no dreams under his hat.

Will the Republicans of Southern California, urban and rural, unite, get together and pick out the right man? It is vitally important, the most so of any question confronting us at this time, or likely to arise between now and the selection of the new Senator.

THE VALENTINE.

"Tomorrow is St. Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime!
And I a maid at your window,
To be your valentine."

Which the same would not be regarded as good poetry, although it was the immortal Shakespeare himself who wrote it. But, no matter; the heart throb is there, and heart throbs are all that are worth while in this world, now or ever, commerce and trade and the jingle of iron dollars to the contrary notwithstanding.

"The sending of valentines is a harmless folly which is dying out," says a high authority. Well, 'tis more the pity. There are a lot of other follies and things that are not follies that were better dead than the sending of valentines. God be with the times and the people who reveled in the folly of it.

Maybe you will remember those times, yourself, old gray head by the window, when you will see the postman coming down the street on the morrow's morn. Maybe you will be able to think back to the day when you sent your first valentine. Heaven grant that the memory of that wonderful hour is not dead in your soul. For if it be not dead you are unfit for strategy and spoils and the better fit to live, and the nearer to heaven and all the sweet-faced, shining angels thereof.

Think back—think away back along the track of the wild years to the day when you sent your first valentine. Don't be afraid, do not fear that some one will discover your thoughts, for that they cannot do. And even if you were to be discovered, what matter? It was the holiest hour of your life—the holiest and the sweetest. No more again can there be such another hour.

The mists of the years—the long and dusty years so filled with struggle and strife and pain and disappointments—will roll back and you shall look again into the eyes of your first sweetheart. You shall feel your cheeks afire and you will behold again the shy, sweet glances that meet your own. The wind shall toss her bonnie curls, brown or black or tawny, whichever they were; again shall creep up to her white brows the deep heavenly blush from her dear and trembling heart.

That she had received the wondrous missive you sent her, all gay with cupids and hearts strung together and roses and daffodils, she did not say because she had not the bravery to make the acknowledgment. But you knew it was snuggled inside her jacket, lying there as the most precious thing in all the world, and she knew that you knew. And maybe, then, the evening shadows were falling and the red glow of the sunset was on the snow, and you walked to the gate with her and touched her hand. Then she ran shyly into the house to dream of you. And you—oh, not since, in all the years have you ever known an hour like that.

"The sending of valentines is a harmless folly which is dying out," says the big book at our elbow. We accept the edict in sorrow. We weep for a world that has lost its charm. We look with supreme commiseration on the boys and girls of today who have let slip from their grasp the most adorable custom ever invented by man.

GREATEST GOOD TO THE GREATEST NUMBER.

It is to be hoped that the California Fruit Growers' Exchange will keep the ball rolling until it gets to Sacramento and a law is passed forbidding the shipment from the State of fruit unfit for human food. As The Times showed on Friday morning in facts gleaned from the representatives of the fruit growers, the demoralization of the orange market for more than two months is directly due to the reprehensible conduct of some of the fruit growers. It was a shortsighted as well as a vicious policy.

According to the facts set forth, the citrus fruit crop of California for the current season would have amounted to about 35,000 carloads had the frost not fallen upon the fruit. Of this, say 30,000 carloads would have been oranges and the rest lemons. The damage amounted to about one-third of the orange crop, or 10,000 carloads. That was a severe loss, but it is made worse by an attempt to market this damaged fruit at the East. The frost injured only the fruit affected; the shipping of it affects the whole crop. If none of this damaged fruit had been sent out of the State the 20,000 carloads of good fruit would have sold at unusually high prices, bringing back into the country during the season probably as much money as the bumper crop of the previous season.

As it is, the total shipments of citrus fruit, oranges and lemons included, amount to something less than 9000 carloads. Nearly 7000 carloads of these have gone from Southern California, and most of these since the first cold weather in December. If one-third of the crop was injured and nearly all the damaged fruit is gone, as the growers assert, most of this fruit shipped out of the State must have been more or less affected by the frost.

To pay for picking, sorting, cleaning, boxing and hauling to the depot a box of oranges, and then paying freight and other expenses at the eastern markets, costs $1.50, without counting anything for the fruit. If a box of fruit is sold at the East for $1.50 it just about pays the expenses, leaving the grower nothing. Every cent below the $1.50 means red ink for the shipper. As car after car was sold down around the dollar mark, and many below it, the gross loss to all the shippers during the last twelve or thirteen weeks runs into enormous sums. This damaged fruit creates a prejudice in the East against every California orange offered for sale. It depreciates the price of every box sent out.

To bring to the grower a fair remuneration, which is generally held here to mean $1 a box on the trees, the fruit in the eastern markets must sell for not less than $2.50. In these twelve or thirteen weeks there have been few carloads that have brought that figure.

There will be no session of the Legislature this year, but a year from now the lawmaking body of the State will be in session. The fruit growers of California of all kinds should get together in a well-considered plan with a properly-drawn bill to go before the Legislature and get a law passed which will stop the shipping of damaged fruit out of the State. It will be a good thing for those whose fruit is bad, for it will save them from their own foolishness resulting in so much red ink in their accounts; and it will be especially beneficial to those who have good fruit which might bring a remunerative price if not affected by the rubbish competing on the markets.

POSSIBILITIES OF SHIPBUILDING.

The annual statement of Lloyd's Register of British shipbuilding for 1909 is out. During the year the shipyards of Great Britain turned out for domestic account 520 vessels to be used in commerce. These were of a gross tonnage of 991,066 tons; there were 465 steamers of 972,799 tons, and 61 sailing ships of 18,267 tons. Of warships there were built 42 vessels, of 126,230 tons displacement. For foreign account the vessels had a tonnage of 241,845 tons, making a grand total of 1,353,141 tons.

This activity is considerably greater than that of 1908, but not up to normal. In fact, it is the smallest output in twelve years with the exception of 1908.

How many persons found employment in this industry in the year? The vessels were almost all built of steel, and nearly all steamers. From the mine to the complete ship with all its equipment this vast tonnage gave employment to a large army.

Our commerce oversea, in and out, is larger than that of Great Britain. We are not forgetful of how much of the carrying trade of the world Great Britain does. But we cannot compete with the British shipyards, as wages in Great Britain are lower and as the steamer lines are subsidized. Until some way is found by which we can compete with this and other rivals we must see what might be a great national industry lie dormant, perhaps go dead.

Fifteen years ago we were told that tin plate could not be made in the United States. Nelson Dingley, Jr., William McKinley and others thought we could do this work at home, give employment to our own people and save money. They were right, and the timid ones wrong. Some day a statesman of the Dingley-McKinley type will arise among us and show us how we may build ships.

Tom Taggart, the Democratic boss of Indiana, was winged by a fellow-hunter while a party were prospecting for birds in the South the other day. This is the first intimation we ever had that Tom Taggart was a wearer of wings. Some of his enemies back in Indiana are willing to swear, however, that the clever Tom has a full-developed set of horns.

It is denied at St. Petersburg that Russia contemplates another war with Japan. No chance there for another "I-regret-to-report" telegram. We have it from an equally responsible source that Spain is not considering the feasibility of mixing things up with the United States.

There was one tion raised enough money to install another.

The association secured better street-car service and more street lights, and had the tin cans and garbage collected. Its present efforts are toward securing sewers, gas, a school and the paving of Western avenue.

The officers are: W. F. Orchard, president; G. Van Steenis, vice-president; G. E. Cota, treasurer; C. Sheldon, secretary; G. H. Cornelson, chief of the fire department. The membership is about fifty. The meetings are held on the first Monday night of each month.

The Cypress Park Improvement Association was organized last October. During that time it has aroused public spirit among the residents of the district, and called the attention of various city departments to matters for the betterment of the community. It is a thriving and enthusiastic association, composed of about sixty members, all of whom are property owners, and who stand solidly together in matters for public improvement.

The association aims to secure electric street lights, police protection, fire protection, gas and electric lights for domestic use. It will endeavor to have Cypress avenue improved to the city limits. This is the leading thoroughfare of the district, and its present condition is the chief concern of the community. The members hope some time to secure a park and a public school building.

FROM THE "KASIDAH."

Sir Richard Burton's poem, just published, bears a striking resemblance to the Rubaiyat, though written before FitzGerald's translation. (A part of the poem.)

"Eat, drink, and sport; the rest of life's not worth a fillip," quoth the King;
Methinks the saying saith too much; the swine would say the selfsame thing!

Two-footed beasts that browse through life, by Death to serve as soil design'd,
Bow prone to Earth wh reof they be, and there the proper pleasures find:

But you of finer, nobler stuff, ye, whom to Higher leads the High,
What binds your hearts in common bond with creatures of the stall and sty?

How Life is dim, unreal, vain, like scenes that round the drunkard reel;
How "Being" meaneth not to be; to see and hear, smell, taste and feel,

A drop in Ocean's boundless tide, unfathom'd waste of agony;
Where millions live their horrid lives by making other millions die.

How with a heart that would through love, to Universal Love aspire, Man woos infernal chance to smite, as Min'arets draw the Thunderfire.

How Earth on Earth builds tow'er and wall, to crumble at a touch of Time;
How Earth on Earth, from Shinarplain the heights of Heaven fain would climb.

How short this Life, how long withal; how false its weal, how true its woes,
This fever-fit with paroxysms to mark its opening and its close.

Ah! gay the day with shine of sun, and bright the breeze, and blithe the throng Met on the River-bank to play, when I was young, when I was young.

Such general joy could never fade; and yet the chilling whisper came
One face had paled, one form had failed; had fled the bank, had swum the stream.

Still revellers danced, and sang, and trod the hither bank of Time's deep tide,
Still one by one they left and fared to the far misty thither side.

And now the last hath slipt away yon drear Death-desert to explore,
And now one Pilgrim worn and lorn still lingers on the lonely shore.

Perchance the law some Giver hath: Let be! let be! what canst thou know?

A myriad races came and went; this Sphinx hath seen them come and go.

Haply the Law that rules the world allows to man the widest range;
And haply Fate's Theist-word, subject to human chance and change.

This "I" may find a future Life, a nobler copy of our own,
Where every riddle shall be ree'd, where every knowledge shall be known.

Where 'twill be man's to see the whole of what on Earth he sees in part;
Where change shall ne'er surcharge the thought; nor hope defer'd shall hurt the heart.

But!—faded flow'er and fallen leaf no more shall deck the parent tree;
And man once dropt by Tree of Life what hope of other life has he?

The shatter'd bowl shall know repair; The riven lute shall sound once more:
But who shall mend the clay of man, the stolen breath to man restore?

The shiver'd clock again shall strike; the broken reed shall pipe again;
But we, we die, and Death is one, the doom of brutes, the doom of men.

"Be ye Good Boys, go seek for Heav'n, come pay the priest that holds the key;"
So spake, and speaks, and aye shall speak the last to enter Heaven,—he.

Are these the words for men to hear? yet such the Church's general tongue,
The horseleech-cry so strong so high her Heav'nword Psalms and Hymns among.

What? Faith a merit and a claim, when with the brain 'tis born and bred?
Go, fool, thy foolish way and dip in holy water buried dead!

See not that something in Mankind that rouses hate or scorn or strife,
Better the worm of Izrail than Death that walks in form of life.

Survey thy kind as One whose wants in the great Human Whole unite;
The Homo rising high from earth to seek the Heav'ens of Life-in-Light.

And Hold Humanity one man, whose universal agony Still strains and strives to gain the goal, where agonies shall cease to be.

New Brown Cotton Plant.

Dr. Arthur King Bennett, American medical missionary to Bassorah, Persian Gulf, has written the following interesting letter to Consul-General G. Bie Ravndal of Bierut:

"On my way from Aleppo to Bagdad I found a new kind of cotton, new to me, at least, and they say, only found at Ana. The cotton grows on a larger stalk and has a larger amount of cotton on each bud than the white. It is a light brown fiber and when made into cloth resembles camel hair in color—

STANTON.

lature in order to administer a spanking to a politician. One of the Assemblymen who had been nominated largely as the result of Stanton's efforts, once in office, became so cocky and inflated there was no approaching him at all. Stanton became a candidate against him just to "show him."

During his first term he had an important place on the Committee on Elections. Reelected two years thereafter, he was advanced to the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee, the most important chairmanship in the Assembly.

In this place, requiring sound business judgment, Stanton was unusually successful. His appropriations bill went through almost without amendment. The year following, the appropriations bill was massacred with more than sixty amendments in the Assembly and about a hundred in the Senate.

Mr. Stanton was not on the Ways and Means Committee that session; Mr. Stanton was, as theater people say, "resting." Mr. Stanton was standing in a corner with the number hung upon him. Mr. Stanton had supported a candidate for Governor not favored by the bunch, and was kept off all the committees.

Realizing him as a force to be reckoned with, however, no opposition was raised when he became a candidate for the Speakership at the last session, in 1909.

AS SPEAKER.

Stanton's career as Speaker was a whirlwind from the start.

From the earliest days of the American rule in California, there have been four thirsty parasites sucking the blood of the State Legislature. The worst was the attaché system. Hundreds of men and women were employed at big salaries and on mythical jobs.

It is said that the man to whom was awarded the job of winding the clocks, used to sublet the contract to another man, who sublet it to a third, and the third made money out of it.

Men drew big pay for jobs of the duties of which they were blissfully ignorant. There were plenty to grab money out of the treasury and nobody to do the work.

The first thing the new Speaker did was to line up all the attachés of the House and hand them a line of good, straight talk. He told them that, thereafter, every man on the pay roll would either proceed to get busy or be fired.

The next thing he did was to commit a horrible outrage upon the old-fashioned junketing committees. It has long been the fashion for the State Legislatures to send committees on tours of "inspection" to look over public institutions in remote parts of the State; it was a very popular form of entertainment, for the State allowed 10 cents a mile each way. Inspecting public institutions was simply pie.

Stanton had the actual expenses of such trips computed, and cut down the allowance to 6 cents a mile; junketing lost its charms.

THREW OUT LOBBYISTS.

He also pried into the vague expenses of the "contingent expense," which was a fat graft, and cut it down to the bare bones.

The most awful yell went up, however, when he threw out the professional lobbyists, body and breeches. The Legislature used to be an old bear pit, with the lobbyists climbing all over the members. By Stanton's order, no one was allowed at the last session to pass the door-keeper without a signed order from the Speaker.

Although no one realized it at the time, these were but the advance trouble clouds preceeding the most stormy session of the history of the State Legislature.

The anti-race track bill, the direct primaries, the consolidation act, and the Japanese bill were a part of the storm. Stanton had the distinction of being called a czar and a wielder of the big stick, along with other terms of endearment.

The "main event," as they say at prize fights, was, of course, the fight to pass a bill to prevent Japanese attending the public schools with white children.

It was introduced, by a crafty subterfuge, by that unspeakable old pest, Grove L. Johnson.

It went through the whole country like an electric shock. As Johnson claimed that the bill had been framed at the request of the San Francisco school board, President Roosevelt sent for the then Mayor Schmitz and the entire school board and read them the riot act in Washington.

PRESIDENT AND GOVERNOR.

He also wired a strong protest to the Governor of the State, urging that the bill be killed. It was supposed that the matter was shelved, but one day, a year ago last week, Johnson quietly brought out the bill, and, to the bewilderment and dismay of the whole diplomatic world, the empire of Japan was dealt a furious slap in the face, by a vote of 46 to 28.

The President, astounded by the news, sent a series of red-hot telegrams to California. The Cabinet went into conference. From Japan arose an indignant protest at this flagrant violation of a treaty. Over in Japan they began to shine up the warships, and our army officers began to wonder what they would do with our pitiful handful of troops against one of the world's great armies.

All of a sudden, this Los Angeles real estate man, playing politics for fun, found himself a world figure—appealed to by the President of the United States to save our flag from the dishonor of a broken treaty.

Peace has its victories. There are men who die for the honor of the flag when the batteries are changing front and machine guns are spraying out bullets like a hose; there are men who have suffered alone in dismal fever swamps for the flag. This happened to be a time when a man did slick politics for the honor of the flag. It nearly cost him his life at that, as the effort caused a break-down in which he was near death.

Like a general ordering a reserve into action, Phil Stanton told one of the Los Angeles legislators to change his vote so he could move to reconsider—and the game of lobbying that the world watched had begun.

The next day the motion to reconsider was to come up, and Stanton and his lieutenants spent the whole night trying to drag votes over against the detestable bill. Nothing doing. No one dared to change.

When the Assembly met the next day, one of Stanton's leading fighters sneaked up to the Speaker's desk. His head was bowed, and he looked like a shot dog.

"It's no use; we are licked," he said, shaking his head.

"Like hell we are," retorted the Speaker.

They hastily consulted over the list and he could see that they were beaten.

"I'm going to get this postponed," he announced, savagely chewing his cigar.

THE FIGHTING HEART.

"They won't do it," protested his henchman, disheartened.

Then Stanton showed that he had the fighting heart that makes men fight on when all hope is lost. Some one has said that pluck is fighting with the scabbard when the sword is broken. Stanton grabbed up the scabbard.

He called some one to the chair and went down on the floor between the belligerent mutineers. Amid a death-like hush he was recognized by the Speaker.

The speech he made was a subtle masterpiece of political manipulation. He played on the fear all men have of the mysterious.

"Gentlemen," he said, darkly, "if you were in possession of the information in my keeping I am sure that you would agree with me that further consideration of this matter should be had. The situation is critical, but my lips are sealed. We are treading on dangerous ground, and I can almost feel the soil slipping from beneath my feet. Without asking you to pledge yourselves to vote against this measure, I do most earnestly request you to postpone further consideration for one week."

He succeeded in making them feel they were walking on top of some sort of mysterious volcano.

"Is that all so?" asked one of the Democrats, coming over and whispering excitedly to the Speaker.

Stanton solemnly nodded; and the Assembly uneasily and reluctantly agreed to postpone the vote to reconsider for one week.

The history of that week will never be known. It was a campaign of fierce wire-pulling, pleading, arguing, defiance, threats, cajolery, of telegrams from Washington, of consultations.

On February 10, with the Speaker glaring them straight in the eye, some hang-dog looking Assemblymen changed their votes, which had been for the anti-Jap bill, and voted to reconsider. The fight was won.

That night, the following telegram came over the wires from Washington:

FROM ROOSEVELT.

"THE WHITE HOUSE (Washington) Feb. 10.—Hon P. A. Stanton: Accept my heartiest thanks and congratulations for the great service you have rendered on behalf of the people of the United States. I thank the people of California and their representatives in the Legislature.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The Choir May Go.

"I hear that your church has installed a phonograph stuffed with sacred music."

"Yes. Had to do it. Choir hall struck."

"New scheme work all right?"

"It's beautiful. Never quarrels with itself, has no skirts to rustle, doesn't fret about the angle of its hat, refrains from gigging or powdering its nose, and if it gets out of order a mechanic can repair it."—[Philadelphia Ledger.

YOUR LAME BACK WILL FEEL FINE.

OUT-OF-ORDER KIDNEYS ARE REGULATED AND BLADDER MISERY VANISHES.

A few doses of Pape's Diuretic will clean and regulate your Kidneys, ending Backache and Urinary trouble. No man or woman here in Los Angeles, whether young or old, can afford to neglect the slightest Kidney Disorder for a single day.

A real surprise awaits every suffered from kidney or bladder trouble who takes several doses of Pape's Diuretic. Misery in the back, sides or loins, sick headache, nervousness, rheumatism pains, heart palpitations, dizziness, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, lack of energy and all symptoms of out-of-order kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, offensive and discolored water, and other bladder misery ends.

The moment you suspect kidney or urinary disorder, or feel any rheumatism, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a 50c treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

It is needless to feel miserable and worried, because this unusual preparation goes at once to the out-of-order kidneys and urinary system, distributing its cleansing, healing and strengthening influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker, or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Accept only Pape's Diuretic — 50c treatment—any drug store—anywhere in the world.

E. H. Barmore, who is at the head of the Los Angeles Transfer Company; George Lyons, who is still urged, even though he says he is out of it; W. T. Harris, a Democrat, and Dr. Chambers, another Democrat.

In spite of the Mayor's declaration friends of Dr. Chambers said there is at least one commissioner who will stand by him to the last. Commissioner Wellborn is credited with supporting Browne, the Mayor is supposed to favor Galloway, Commissioner Davidson is understood to be back of Barmore and Topham is the Chambers man. Commissioner Johnson is credited with being for Chambers, too.

There was a stronger belief yesterday than before that the commission may choose some man who has not yet been named in connection with the position. The conferences yesterday were along that line, according to reports, and the effort is directed to obtain a thorough administration partisan so that the political end of the work will not be in any but trusted hands.

It was predicted last night that little short of a political miracle could bring the commission to one candidate by tomorrow night's meeting.

What Jackson Ought to Do.

"Well, by Jove, this is lucky," cried a young man as he heartily slapped the back of a gentleman whom he overtook in the street. The other turned around sharply and angrily, showing the face of a complete stranger.

"I thought it was my friend Jackson," said the young man, confused.

"All right," said the stranger; and he doubled the young man up with a tremendous poke in the waistcoat.

"What did you do that for?"

"I thought that was what Jackson ought to do," remarked the stranger, as he resumed his interrupted walk.—[Judge's Library.

LIQUOR VIOLATION.

Justice Ortega yesterday imposed a fine of $150 upon M. Hoffelt of Moorpark, charged with violation of the county liquor ordinance. Another charge, that of giving liquor to a minor, was also held against defendant, but judgment was suspended in this case pending good behavior of the accused.

PTOMAINE POISONING.

She says she has tried all the dairies in St. Louis and has been half around the world in a vain search for buttermilk of the good old-fashioned kind, churned in the good old-fashioned way, with little pieces of butter floating around in it.

TREE-SAVING.

LARGER WORK TO CONSERVE.

MORE CAMPAIGNING ON THE FOREST RESERVE.

Rangers Busy Running New Trails Along the Mountain Divides, Making It Easier to Reach Possible Fires, and Large Breaks Where They Will Do the Most Good.

More work is being undertaken this year than ever before to conserve the timber and water of the Angeles Forest Reserve. Supervisor Charlton said yesterday that the appropriations had enabled him to plan for more active campaigning the coming summer. At the present time his rangers are running new trails along the divides in the mountains, thus making it easier to get to a given point in case of forest fires.

These trails are seventeen or eighteen feet wide, "said Charlton," and are of the utmost importance in case of a fire. The flames generally run up the mountain-sides; if we have trails along the divide, the rangers can follow them to the point of danger.

Firebrakes from fifty to eighty feet wide are being constructed where they will do the most good. A telephone system connects the houses of the rangers. Boxes of fire-fighting apparatus are placed in accessible spots through the mountains. We are trying in every way to safeguard against destructive forest fires, for the Angeles reserve is of peculiar value, to this part of Southern California.

"In the government reserves are the watersheds and the heavy growth of timber that protects the little brooks and rivers. The value of our work has been appreciated not only by the State but by private concerns as well. At the last State Legislature, $5000 was appropriated for the work of conservation in the Angeles reserve. San Bernardino county has contributed $1400 and Los Angeles county will probably appropriate $5000 as it has done in the past two years. Fruit exchanges and citrus associations have given us $2500 to be expended on the watershed. The allotment of the forest service is $63,500, which includes salaries and expenditures for improvements."

Charlton said that forest fires are preventable at a cost slight in itself and insignificant compared with the value of the timber they destroy. Experience has shown the way to keep down fires is to employ men to watch for them during the long dry summer and early autumn.

In a communication received from the Forestry Bureau at Washington, it is stated that the expenditure of a few hundred dollars in employing men to patrol the forests is more effective than the expenditure of many times this sum in the often futile attempt to put out fires that have gathered great headway.

Private owners are urged to coöperate with the rangers in watching the danger points during the dry season.

Another branch of the work that will be energetically prosecuted in the Angeles reserve this year is tree-planting. Charlton believes in setting out large areas each year to trees that are naturally adapted to the particular locality. The young trees are raised in nurseries and planted at the right time of the year. Spots heretofore barren will be covered with a thick growth of eucalyptus in a few years. It is stated that Southern California has 1,000,000 acres outside the national forests that could be made productive by planting the right kind of trees. When private owners awake to the knowledge that forests started now will be a valuable legacy to future generations, more interest will be taken in the work.

The United States contains 65,000,000 acres of stripped land that is suitable only for growing trees, according to estimates. The West contains 16,000,000 acres of naturally treeless land which could be successfully planted.

GRAVE DANGERS OF RADIUM.

Its Successes Accompanied by Many Casualties to Those Who Proved Its Powers.

It seems now fairly well concluded that the range of efficacy in radium therapeusis is exceedingly small, while its dangers are grave and generally irreparable. It is likely we shall have to conclude that radium has done more harm than good to suffering humankind, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

We recognize that there are still enthusiasts. The council of the Royal British Radium Institute includes Sir Frederick Treves, physician to King Edward; Sir William Ramsay and Joseph John Thompson, professor of physics at the Royal Institution, and Sir Frederick in February last held the view that the utility of radium is likely to be very great.

"I have seen," he says, "moles removed by it. I have watched it cure a birthmark the size of a gooseberry on a baby's head; an angioma on a girl's eyelid as big as a plum; port wine stains can be removed by it; even lumps under the skin yield to it —four weeks' treatment dispersed one as large as a hen's egg; rodent ulcers of a certain type may also be succes fully treated. At the same time, though we know that radium do these things, we know little else abo it."

What we do know very definitely an amazing list of casualties followi upon such experimentation, by com parison with which the therapeut triumphs here cited by Sir Edwa should justly be termed contemptib Amazing claims are made in Fran for radium efficacy. In February, Degra's of Paris declared "We are longer in a period of expectancy; are now in a period of confirmation At the Paris Radium Institute sixty four out of eighty-six cases of surfa cancer have been reported cured; kinds of cutaneous affections ha been treated successfully, it is sa and chronic rheumatism and tuberc losis have yielded to radium treatmen Cum grano salis, we advise.

On the other hand, the list of disa ters due to the use of radium and its congener, the X-ray, is simply a palling. Dr. John H. Edwards, pre dent of the British Electrotherapeut Society, has (or had in 1906) a cance ous growth caused by constant exp sure. His left arm has had to be am putated.

Another victim was Clarence Dall who submitted to repeated amputa tions of fingers, and finally of t arms, but who finally died. Radigu of Paris died from the effects of h experiments; so did Blacker of Lo don, Dr. Louis Weigel of Rochest and Wolfram C. Fuchs of Chicago.

The Bulletin of the Geographical S ciety of Italy announces another Ar tic expedition. The leader will Baldwin, the leader of the Arctic e pedition of 1901-1902. He proposes exploration of the polar regions ar to reach the pole. He proposes to fo low the route taken by Nansen in th Fram. It is proposed to spend fo years, altogether, in the search.

GOOD MOVE.

HAPPIER AS CONSOLIDATED.

an Pedro's Business Men Glad 'Twas Done.

oining Los Angeles Proved Advantage to All.

hat Citizens of the Harbor Town Have to Say.

Consolidation with Los Angeles is oving to be one of the best things at ever happened to San Pedro. This the consensus of opinion among the ominent citizens of the seaport, ualified only by the condition that os Angeles shall "make good."

These who were opposed to consolidation acknowledge that so far they ave observed none but good effects, d that on the whole business has en better than it ever was before. e large majority who were for comg into Los Angeles from the first e more enthusiastic now than ever. hey believe that consolidation has en the making of both Los Angeles d San Pedro.

There are two things that are now manded of Los Angeles. One is bet r fire protection, and the other the ting of harbor bonds and their apication to harbor improvements acrding to the pledges made. The eatest concern as to the city's intenons is that instead of taking advange of the frontage in the outer harr the money will be spent in develing an inner harbor.

If other suburbanites contemplating nexation to the city of Los Anles were to talk with any of the sidents of San Pedro they would get immediate impression that everying is to be gained and nothing lost such a move. Even those who are clined to be impatient, because the nds are not already voted and the oney being spent, freely admit that e time is much closer than if San dro were still managing her own fairs.

The following are some of the imessions and suggestions of leading siness men of San Pedro on "How nsolidation Feels:"

Edward L. Blanchard, president of e Chamber of Commerce: "Business good, and things are looking fine. here will be a lot more enthusiasm out the situation, I expect, when s Angeles begins to do things down re. I am not one of those who excted that San Pedro would get evything she needed right on the spot e minute we went into the city. here is one serious doubt that we ould like to have removed from our inds, and that is this harbor building heme for Nigger Slough. Now evy man in San Pedro who knows ything about harbors, and there are ts of them who have a practical acuaintance with the subject, will tell u that San Pedro has one of the est deep water harbors in the world ght in the outer harbor. We taxyers of San Pedro don't want to end our money in Nigger Slough un l some of the resources of this outer arbor have been developed."

Charles Mason, real estate dealer, d formerly opposed to consolidation: believe the real estate business has en a little better. I have been hanling a tract which Mrs. Dodson pened on the strength of consolidaon, and have sold about $80,000 worth property since we came into Los ngeles. There is more building going now than there has ever been bere. I believe the people are very ell satisfied with everything Los Aneles has done, and one of the most pular moves now would be to give us lequate fire protection."

Capt. L. D. Hansen, leader of conolidation forces, said: "San Pedro ouldn't have been on the map now it hadn't been for consolidation. We e now the best seaport on the Pafic Coast, and we are soon going to the biggest. Take a look at what going on in this harbor today. Down ere where they are working on the iner fill, driving the concrete piling, will be but a short time until you ill see the ocean liners from foreign aters at dock. There lies 146 acres longing to the city. What could San edro have done? It would have been long while before we could have oted $3,000,000 in bonds, as Los Aneles will do next month. Now all at is necessary is to have $2,000,000 that money spent here in the outer arbor, and San Pedro will be a rival any port in the world. I am talkg of this matter from the point of ew of a sea captain who has made l of the large ports of the world. nce let the people see this brought bout, and there will be no question bout what consolidation has done r San Pedro—and Los Angeles, too."

Henry Bailey, cashier of the Bank San Pedro, and originally opposed consolidation, said: "There has en no disappointment so far in what as expected of consolidation. Our olice protection has been better, and e affairs of the town have on the hole been quite as well conducted. It ill be necessary for us to have better e protection very soon, or there will discontent on that ground. Most us are waiting now to see Los Anles "make good" in some of her romises, and will be quite ready to pplaud when the time comes."

O. C. Abbott, Sr., real estate dealer, id: "Business has improved noticebly since consolidation took place. here has been more building, the perits showing a steady growth from onth to month. I believe there are me thirty or forty houses now in rocess of construction. The real esate demand is very healthy. We have eople who come in and look around r several weeks without saying ery much. As soon as they have beome thoroughly acquainted with the round they begin to buy right and ft. San Pedro seems to have struck strong and steady gait."

Arthur P. Ferl, real estate dealer, aid: "I have always been a booster r Greater Los Angeles, and I'm just much of a one as ever. I suppose ere are some people here in San Pero who hold to their same old objecons to consolidation, but I haven't eard any one point to a single instance in which we have lost anything far. Whatever there is of disconent is based on what they think may appen in the future. Now, as far I can see, that is the most promisng part of it. Here we are about ady to vote $3,000,000 in bonds to be ent in this harbor. That single thing will benefit every resident of this town s well as every property owner.

John T. Gaffey said: "The one thing at consolidation means to both Los ngeles and San Pedro is a harbor. o far consolidation has not actually ccomplished anything in regard to e harbor, and to that extent is still ntested as an actuality. But we beeve it is going to do something. So r as I can learn there is no queson but that the bonds will be voted. the money is spent according to the ledges made to this city, which are n record, we shall soon have here a arbor adequate for the present needs commerce. After that we know os Angeles will take all necessary terest in further improvement and development. We are a little worried here now about the talk of going into the inner harbor with the city's improvements. It is almost impossible to believe that this can be true. After the government has spent millions in providing a splendid deep water harbor, are we to throw it all aside and go up a crooked channel into some mud flats to build another? It is so far out of reason, and the people of Los Angeles have done so much toward securing this harbor that we have, that we can scarcely believe any such plan would have a chance of prevailing."

E. B. Moores, assistant cashier First National Bank, said: "Our business has shown a marked increase in the past year, if that is any indication of how things are faring with San Pedro. So far as I have learned, the general tone here has been strengthened by the alliance with a more powerful municipality. The feeling among the merchants seems to be particularly good at the present time, and we are all very well satisfied as far as we have gone."

Ray Mitchell, hardware merchant, said: "There have been several noticeable improvements, among them the closing of the saloons on Sunday. We should like to see still further reform along this line in reducing the number of them. As to general conditions, I think they are better, if anything. We have better police protection, and we have prospects of more rapid development as a harbor city."

To Keep the Hair Light and Fluffy

(From Chicago Inter Ocean.)

The proper care of the hair does not require a woman to scour her scalp with soap and drench her hair with water until a shampoo, including drying the hair, takes the better part of the day. In fact, authorities say that the less soap and water used on the hair the better, as the alkali and moisture tend to make the hair coarse, dull and brittle.

If you want to keep the scalp clean and the hair light and fluffy, try dry shampooing. Put in a quart jar, or any other handy container, four ounces of powdered orris root and four ounces of therox. Stir and shake until thoroughly mixed. A beautiful cleansing powder with a delicate perfume will be the result.

Sprinkle a tablespoonful of this mixture on the head and then brush it well through the hair. This brings out the natural color of the hair, makes it soft and glossy, and if continued regularly, tends to make the hair long and abundant, for it is a natural hair grower.

TEARS IN LOVE'S DREAM.

District Attorney Investigating Complaint That Girl's Age Was Misrepresented to Get License.

The young dream of love of Jake Snodgrass of Anaheim and Ruby Ruth, daughter of Edward Ruth of Sherman, may end in bitterness and tears, if the representations made to the District Attorney yesterday are true.

Friends of the family asked the official to look into the case, as they declared that the girl is only sixteen years old, and that her sweetheart swore she is two years older in order to get a marriage license, which was issued Wednesday.

For more than a year Snodgrass has sought to claim the girl as his bride but met with stern parental objections. He was denied admittance to the home of Miss Ruth, but this did not check his ardor. He addressed letters to her, which she received through the general delivery in Los Angeles.

Love letters passed between them daily for several weeks before her parents found out about this method of communication. They then restrained her from getting mail in this manner.

The girl came to the city to visit her sister, Mrs. Clinton Black, No. 935 East Fifty-seventh street, early last week. She left Thursday morning, saying she was going back to Sherman. She has not been seen by relatives since. From the fact that a marriage license was issued, it is believed that the couple has eloped.

A deputy district attorney will probably make an investigation of the case tomorrow. If he finds that the facts are as they have been stated, it is likely that he will issue a warrant charging perjury.

Might Always Wear It.

"John, do you recognize this hat?"

"No, I can't say that I do. It looks rather dilapidated."

"Yes. I have been keeping it as a dear memento. I was wearing it when you and I first met. That was eleven years ago."

"I hope you'll keep it always. It ought to convince you that you must have been mighty good-looking once, seeing that even with that thing on your head you caused me to fall in love with you."—[Record-Herald.

O POLITICIANS LINING R BELSHAW FOR GOVERNOR

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

[illegible]

nominating conventions before the primary, to agree upon candidates and thus concentrate their forces. The Democrats are going ahead with their convention, but Rowell has apparently changed his mind about it. Why go to all that trouble when he is entirely competent to pick out the nominees himself? Besides, the task of getting together that larger committee, or convention, with members from all the Assembly districts in the State, is an embarrassing one. For one thing, it would result in a showdown for the league, and demonstrate how weak it is except in three or four counties.

Davis has refused Rowell's tender of the Gubernatorial indorsement. Hiram Johnson has refused. Mott hesitates. There is only Belshaw left, or one of the many nobodies who have been mentioned. If the Call and the Chronicle are correct, Belshaw had a clear majority on the test ballot at the meeting of the league committee this week. But Rowell prefers Mott if he will accept, and there the case rests for the time being. What Rowell might decide upon tomorrow or next week, is something that even he would have trouble in predicting. Another meeting will be held next Tuesday.

Lissner and the other leaguers from Southern California are supporting Rowell in the plan to name a ticket in star-chamber caucus, and to ignore the instructions given them. They are afraid of the effect of a convention, although every one of them voted for it at the Oakland meeting. They lack the courage of their convictions.

At present writing, the indications are that there will be four candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor: Stanton, Curry, Anderson and a leaguer, probably Belshaw. With the assistance of Democrats registered as Republicans, the league candidate may possibly win. It would be idle to deny that this is a possibility. Curry is the present choice in the betting, but it is too early to drop the flag on any one of the four. If Southern California would come up solidly to the front for Stanton, he would stand a good chance, with the vote in the north split up as much as it is bound to be. Alden Anderson will be a dangerous competitor, however. If the organization gets back of Anderson, as the best man in the field of starters, the odds on the race will undergo radical change.

If Belshaw is turned down by the league, it is an open secret that his friends will go to Curry, providing he quits. There is one rock upon which his campaign may go to smash, however, and that is its entanglement with the fight for his present office. Curry office force is committed to Jordan. His direct lieutenants are talking Jordan and supporting Jordan. In return, Jordan can talk for Curry. But there are several other active candidates for Secretary of State who will take the hint and talk for some one else. Curry insists that he has made no combination, but his office seems to have made one for him.

And speaking of combinations between candidates, it is said that Judge Wilbur of Los Angeles will travel through the campaign as the team mate of Justice Sloss, both with the Lincoln-Roosevelt indorsement. Justice Sloss is a fine man and a good judge, but the southern candidate who wants help in this part of the State will be lucky if he can make a working agreement with Justice Melvin. There isn't a better campaigner in California than Harry Melvin, even though he be a grave—sometimes—and learned member of the Supreme Court. The south wants and is entitled to another justice. But if, as seems probable, there are four or five candidates from the south, the north will take both places again.

A single candidate from the south may win, while two or three will split the vote so that both Sloss and Melvin will be reëlected. It must be remembered that the average citizen is inclined against making changes in the judiciary unless there is some good reason therefor. Hence, Sloss and Melvin are both assured of a much larger vote than would be theirs if they were running for the first time.

Isadore Dockweiler has been telling the people up here that Joe Call ought to be the Democratic nominee for Governor, but that if Call will not take it, he is for Senator Miller, of Visalia. The mention of Miller's name has been revived since the retirement of Gov. Gillett from the race. Miller plainly declared that he had no desire to sacrifice himself if Gillett was to be the Republican candidate. And the nomination has been conceded to Bell. But the Democrats are keeping mighty quiet about their intentions. By holding a convention to name the ticket they will be in a position to do whatever seems best at the last moment and to take advantage of Republican quarrels. Bell can have it, unless there appears at the time of the Democratic convention a fair chance of Democratic victory next fall. In that case, he can have it—if he can get it. If he does get it, he is certain to be knifed with much enthusiasm in his own party.

That journalistic exponent of Heneyism, the Liberator, organ of the so-called League of Justice, is in the throes of dissolution. It appears this week a little larger than a postage stamp, and with a pathetic reference to its lack of money, lack of advertising, lack of income—and should have added, lack of a reason for existence.

Just another little item of news: Another candidate for Governor; as though there were not enough already. The friends of Mayor Druffel of Santa Clara are urging him to make the race. There's no law against it.

Roger M. Andrews, Menominee, Mich., head of the Department of Mineral Statistics of that State, is in the city. He will make a study of California oil and mining conditions.

ONE DOSE MAKES INDIGESTION GO

HEARTBURN, GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND ALL MISERY FROM STOMACH VANISHES BEFORE YOU REALIZE IT.

Hundreds of readers of The Times will be forever rid of Stomach trouble after taking a little Diapepsin, which promptly stops food fermentation and regulates the digestion even in the worst out-of-order stomach.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sours your entire meal — interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, sick headache, biliousness, constipation, griping, etc. Your case is no different — you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours, producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost 50c at any pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that fermentation and sour stomach is causing the misery of indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

COMMEMORATE ANNIVERSARY.

Lincoln Celebration at Tropico By Post and Corps and By the School Children.

TROPICO, Feb. 12.—Officers and members of W. P. Banks, Post and Corps, gave an interesting programme at G.A.R. hall, commemorating Lincoln's anniversary.

Following the singing of America, Mrs. D. S. Erskine, accompanist, an address was given by Mrs. Alfred Enblehardt, Corps President. Rev. J. H. Henry, Post chaplain, led in prayer. T. M. Barrett, Post Commander, gave an address touching upon the patriotism, loyalty and love for Lincoln by all of "Abe's boys." Mrs. Marilla Pratt read a paper on Lincoln's faith in prayer; Mrs. Susie Miller, on Lincoln's sympathy; Rev. J. H. Henry gave an address on "Lincoln," and Miss Cora Hickman spoke on "Lincoln as a lawyer." Mrs. David H. Imler rendered a piano solo. Brief speeches were made by Frank Campbell, Mrs N. P. Ogier and Mrs. J. E. Shuey, all of whom were personally acquainted with Lincoln.

Appropriate exercises were held in the assembly room of the Tropico schools, conducted by Mrs. M. E. McClure, principal, assisted by the teachers. A number of boys, in soldier costumes, seated in a tent, sang "Tenting Tonight." Pupils assisting on the programme were Mary Eichbaum, Dorothy Hobbs, Gladys Brunson, Murray Breeden, Mayme Imler, Lillie Schick, Muriel Turner, Elizabeth Utter, Lucile Bondy, Fannie Higgin. Pupils of Miss Ingraham gave drills.

A pleasing feature of the exercises was the patriotic music, given with enthusiasm and vim. The programme closed with the salute to the flag.

r the Senior Senator Departs h Association Meeting, Frank- Scribe Lets Loose a Flow of Vinoing Oratory Which Caused olutions to Be Adopted.

DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

IANAPOLIS (Ind.) Feb. 12.—usive Dispatch.] Despite the ly potent oratory of Senator Bev- e and the constant work of his ed followers in the ranks of the ership of the Indiana Republi- Editorial Association, that body ast evening, and incidentally af- he departure of the distinguished or for the scene of the Lincoln he banquet at Columbus, Ind., ed unanimously a straight out sement of the Payne-Aldrich editors had, up to the time that t A. Brown of Frankfort, an ive speaker, appeared and asked tion, left the subject of the much sed tariff law with only bare on in the resolutions. But n did not wish it that way, and developed there were others of ame way of thinking.

Frankfort man briefly called tion to the fact of the omission, hen in impassioned style pro- l to plead his cause in a manner soon literally swept the editors oosierdom off their feet. Smiles, s and an occasional wink were ed in at the apparent omission moments before the Clinton y Demosthenes arose to speak ndorsement of the Payne-Aldrich

A little later, with set counte- s, the molders of public opinion uded that Brown was right and the indorsement should be in- rated with the resolutions al- adopted, and when the vote taken it was unanimous for ion.

FATHER OF FRIJOLES.

BY ALOYSIUS COLL.

Father of frijoles! Not the of the legume family—that first bean that hung over the gar- all of Eden, whose descendants been feeding the peoples of Asia and Europe and Mexico for gen- ns; but the man who has been ng for years to show Arizona the soil of that Territory natural home of the pink which is caviar, salad, en- nd desert for the prospector in ills and the Mexican housewife Douglas on the borderland of the ory of Arizona to Yucatan.

her of the frijole! The patriarch- eudonym would indicate a white- chief of the garden patch, an iated duplicate of "The Man the Hoe." But far from it. His is Frank Doan. A quick glance set his age inside 40—but thirty of the forty have been occupied study of the bean problem. He son of Hon. Fletcher M. Doan, e years District Judge of Cochise Santa Cruz counties in Arizona, a member of the law firm of Rich- n and Doan, specialists in land ts and mining deals both in Ari- and in Sonora, the firm having recently issued in booklet form a lation into English of the new an mining law, with lucid anno- s for the lay mind. Some might ute the keen face of Frank Doan law practice, but those who him best realize that it is the which has stamped its likeness his countenance. His nose is a , half-matured kidney bean; his are two seeds of the Kentucky ier; his snappy black eyes, sed through great glasses, re- e nothing so much as the germ of a Black-eyed Marifat or the ellipse of an Early Wax, while art is as big and warm as a pot ston Bakes.

n is just now engaged in a cam- to show that while Ventura y, California, is making a record xty-five thousand acres of bean with an average yield of 42.65 s per acre, across the border, in ulphur Springs Valley of Arizona, ree hundred thousand acres of land, with conditions even more able than those which have made ura the bean wonder of the world.

has just received from the ber of Commerce at Ventura on the bean culture and product at county. He compares this data conditions and production in ern Arizona, with a view to ng what a future the great Ter- has in the production of this one egume. He sums up his reasons his conclusion in several heads.

tura county has no summer The rains begin in September, beans are harvesting in Arizona, continue till May. The annual ll in Ventura county is sixteen . The rainy season begins in ern Arizona in July or the lat- rt of June, and continues till mber, when the crop is matured harvested during the dry weather succeeding. The annual rainfall Sulphur Springs Valley is seven- inches, or one inch better than n Ventura county. If the beans lanted in the Sulphur Springs just following the heaviest the crop while growing gets the t of six inches of rainfall during st and September.

tura county reports sales averag- wenty sacks of beans to the acre the best lands, and according to figures farmers are getting for harvest about eighty dollars an for beans. The agricultural re- however, give the average as more than half that figure. The ur Springs Valley is as fertile or fertile than other districts in the ern part of the Territory where ean crop is already an important s of wealth with the farmers and ers, and in these districts, notably south of Tucson, the average of beans has produced an aver- wealth of one hundred dollars an This comparison is the more for- when it is considered that the lands in Ventura county sell for hundred dollars an acre, while ands in the Sulphur Springs Val- may be taken up as the gift of overnment by homesteaders, or red by the laying of scrip, which at present about fifteen dollars re.

average cost of cultivating and sting a crop of beans on an of Ventura lands is about fifteen enty dollars. The cost does not d ten dollars an acre in the Sul- Springs Valley, largely due to act that the growing season in ern California is not more than months, or about half as long as required for maturity in Ventura The total value of the annual crop of beans in Ventura county is given as $2,775,000, produced on 65,000 acres of land, whereas the 300,000 acres of fertile land in the million acres within the Sulphur Springs Valley, if the present rate of Southern Arizonan production were maintained at one hundred dollars' yield per acre, would mean a revenue of $30,000,000. If only 10 per cent. of the crop were produced, the income would be three millions of dollars, or greater than the whole of Ventura county.

The Agricultural College of Arizona puts beans among the crops that are not grown with great success, and just why this is the average tiller of the soil has not been able to understand, in the face of the immense yields that have been taken from the lands so far given over to the bean culture. The Heffern Mining Company plowed up for the first time six acres on mining claims, by no means the best ground in the Sulphur Springs Valley, between Douglas and Courtland, last summer, and the production of frijole beans was astonishing. The pods were of gigantic size and the fruit also, while some of the stalks bore and matured as many as sixty-five pods. Samples of these beans and photographs of the field in various stages of cultivation are on exhibition in the Douglas Chamber of Commerce and Mines. Others who planted beans, among them Father Doan, found that the crop matured under the most adverse circumstances. Doan's experimental station is located just east of Douglas, against the mountains, where there is no opportunity to store water for irrigation, and he has been serving his crop to the guests he takes out to his ranch. During the next season he will plant beans and cow peas on the worst of his ground to demonstrate that any acre in the Sulphur Springs Valley, so long neglected, is the field for the frijole, with its wonderful richness in nitrogen and calores, which the government statistics give as 1605 calores per pound.

The Agricultural College gives the spring and autumn as the best time to plant in Southern Arizona, and some of the best crops have been harvested when the seed had been planted after the rains had ceased in August.

We Treat You 30 Days FREE

Blood Poison can never be cured with mercury or potash. You might as well know this first as last. Medical authorities say so. The most these drugs can do is to drive the blood poison back into the system and smother it for several years. Then when you think you are cured, pitiful mercury symptoms will break out, and you find that your bones have been rotting all the while. Your teeth will begin to loosen and your tissues, glands, brain, and vital organs will show the terrible destructive power of the mercury and potash. Locomotor Ataxia, Paralysis, Imbecility and Premature Death are then almost inevitable. Any medical authority will corroborate these statements. The remarkable vegetable Obbac Treatment does not drive in the but drives it out. It positively contains no mineral poisons whatever, so that once cured by the Obbac Treatment you never run the terrible risk of having your bones soften, your nerves collapse, your teeth fall out, your kidneys degenerate or your brain weaken. The Obbac Treatment is a marvel, producing remarkable changes in only 30 days. This is why we offer to any blood poison victim living, no matter how bad a case, a

INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

Sugar from Corn Plant.

Experiments have proved that sugar can be made from Indian corn of equal rank with beet sugar. By the removal of the immature ear from the stalk such a reorganization of the vital forces of the plant occurs that little silica is deposited upon it, and a new supply of sugar and other nutricious elements is stored up within the interior cells and the stalk is considerably increased in weight. The experiments have continued for a series of years at Murrysville, Pa., where machinery has been devised for the work of extracting the sugar content and for the utilization of the by-products.

New Use for Concrete.

One of the diversified uses of reinforced concrete is the construction at Owensboro, Ky., of a reinforced concrete dock which has been successfully launched and proven satisfactory. The dock consists of an expanded metal frame plastered with concrete. It is fifty feet long, sixteen feet wide and four feet deep. The reinforcement is so put together as to form thirty hollow compartments, each four feet deep. When plastered inside and out these compartmnts are air and water tight. The concrete partitions of the compartments and the top, bottom, sides and ends of the dock are two inches thick. Three miles of fine wire was used in wiring the steel framework together. The proportions used in the concrete were one part Universal Portland cement, one part hydrate of lime, one and one-half parts sharp clean Ohio River sand and one part finely screened Ohio River gravel. The dock has two bulkheads, fore and aft. It draws fourteen inches of water and is capable of carrying a load of 118 tons.

By-product Coke Plants.

The United States Steel Corporation has now definitely decided to abandon gradually the great coke oven plants at Connellsville, Pa. The purpose is not only to anticipate the exhaustion of the Connellsville region, but to develop a system of by-product coking under which yield of coke from coal can be increased from 66 per cent. to 75 per cent., besides obtaining in the operation the valuable products of gas, tar and ammonia. In one ton of coal they are now able to save ten gallons of tar, twenty-three pounds of ammonia and from 3500 to 4000 feet of gas. The gas is the surplus above what is required for operating the coke plant. The value of these products is about $1.25, and by having plants erected in connection with the various iron and steel mills at different places a great saving in coal freight is contemplated. This system is similar in purpose to the by-products method adopted with such success by the oil and beef trusts. The initial mill in this plan has just been completed and put in operation at Joliet, Ill., and others are projected at Girard and Youngstown, O. As the Connellsville ovens go out, other by-product plants contiguous to the furnaces of the trust will be erected.

New Shingle Selling Plan.

The owners of several hundred shingle mills in Western Washington have decided to establish selling agencies in each shingle manufacturing district, and eliminate the middlemen who have been largely responsible for keeping the market demoralized by over production.

They invented "in transit" shipments, whereby the destination of cars would not be given to the railroads until they reach the eastern terminals. This permitted sales to eastern lumber yards after shipments were started. Sometimes several thousand cars have piled up at a Minnesota transfer point, demoralizing the market for months.

The shingle-makers now propose profiting by what the lumbermen have accomplished. Brokers and wholesalers, it is claimed have made a habit of pounding small shingle manufacturers needing money, inducing them to sell below cost.

By eliminating the middlemen much expense can be saved and better protection given the small manufacturers.

Too Good a Liar.

"I should like to be excused, your lordship," said a man who had been summoned on a jury in England, says Cassel's Journal. "What for?" "I owe a man £5 and I want to hunt him up and pay it." "Do you mean to tell this court you would hunt up a man to pay a bill instead of waiting for him to hunt you up?" "Yes, your lordship." "You are excused. I don't want any one on the jury who will lie like that."—[Kansas City Star.

Talks on Snake Culture

No. 45—One Kind of Fun

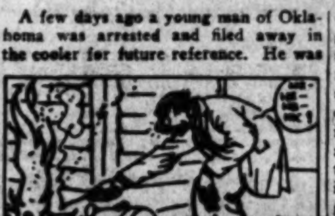
A few days ago a young man of Oklahoma was arrested and filed away in the cooler for future reference. He was a born humorist, and for several months he derived much amusement from setting fire to buildings. Fires had been epidemic in the town for a long time, and when it was discovered that this young man was responsible it was generally agreed that he had carried the joke too far. Even the Village Cut-up must observe some limitations. The young man, after being arrested, confessed everything. He said that whenever he took a drink of the old red goods he felt an irresistible longing to set fire to some building, and couldn't rest until he did it. The chief of police said "hoot, mon!" to such a story, and everybody heard it incredulously. Yet it is probably true. The man who takes a drink big enough and strong enough to hit the spot ceases to be sane until its effects wear off. A liberal four-fingers dose reverses the nature of many men. The peaceful citizen takes the war trail, and insists upon having trouble; the truthful man becomes an earnest and indefatigable liar; the honest man feels a strange desire to deal in counterfeit money; the loving husband goes after his family with a club. Willis says that Poe, the poet, was an ideal gentleman when sober, but one drink made a hyena of him. You may not do a criminal thing after taking a snifter or two, but you are sure to do foolish things, which is just about as bad.



PSYCHOLOGIST STAGES HOLD-UP.

Kansas Educator Tests Memories of Eyewitnesses Under Great Excitement in Novel Manner.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MANHATTAN (Kan.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prof. McKeever of the Kansas State Agricultural College performed an interesting experiment before a psychology class in which he staged a "hold-up" in his class room and afterward took testimony on the subject. The object was to test the reliability of eyewitnesses.

Prof. McKeever selected three young men to stage the "hold-up," and had them practice their parts in his office. They were instructed exactly what to do and what to say. All of these things were placed in a notebook in order that the testimony might be compared with the facts.

When the affair was over, Prof. McKeever told them the object of the testimony, and asked each member of the class to write an account of what happened.

One student in the affair was armed with a revolver, but some of the "eyewitnesses" could not say which of the three "actors" carried the weapon. Likewise, the testimony as to the appearance of the "actors" varied. One wore a raincoat, but when the testimony was taken, spectators couldn't agree as to which of the trio wore the garment. It was a case of trying to tell what was seen when excited, but the class could not do it, and agree.

New York State's largest canal, now being constructed, will cost $101,000,000.

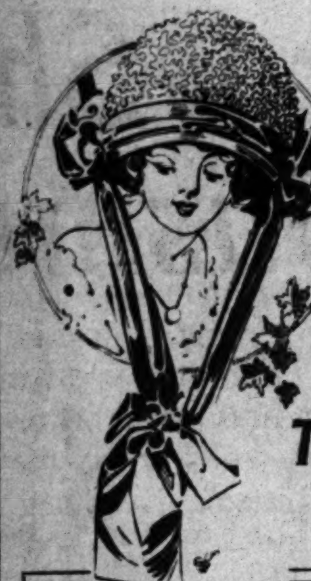
GREAT! Is The Word That Describes This Won… derful Purchase and Sale of Women's New Spring Suits and Dresses $15.00



But "great" does not half express the enthusiasm we feel in presenting such a wonderful assortment of cleverly made, cleverly finished and cleverly modeled garments. In no season past, at this early date, have we had a parallel buying opportunity.

Three Different Manufacturers Combine to Make This Sale Possible

When we tell you that the garments are the richly tailored kind that are to be so prominent this spring, when we tell you that we combined the purchases from three manufacturers to make this a great sale feature at $15.

When we tell you that two of the manufacturers are noted for the making of high class tailored suits, and one celebrated for silk dresses, we say when we tell you all this that we are just stating a few facts that will serve to direct your attention to this crowning suit event of the spring season.

The Three Illustrations Hint At The Styles

These three garments are drawn from suits included in the sale, which features

New Cream Serge Suits
New Silk Dresses
New Novelty Suits-

They came flying across the continent by express to be here just ahead of the department manager, who has arrived to be present at the greatest sale event of the month.

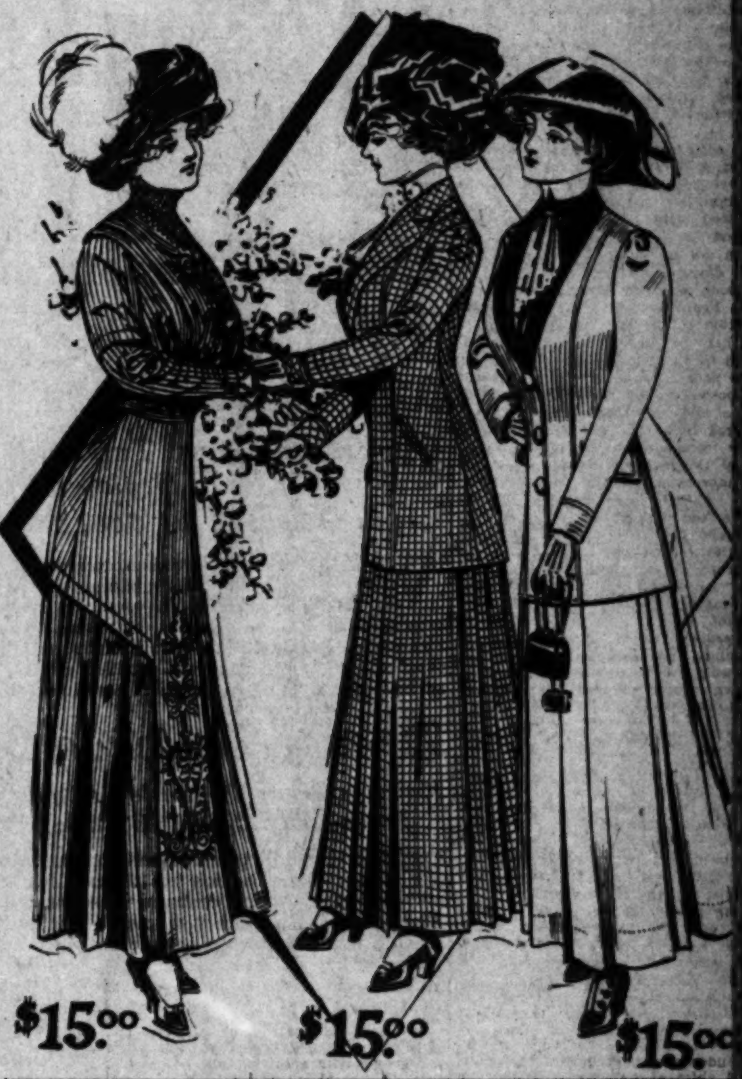
THE CREAM SERGE SUIT like the one at the extreme right is a 32-inch coat style and has the long shawl collar of black liberty satin. This is also shown with plain collar and cuff inlaid with black satin.

New Spring Suits $15.00

Of course, they were bought far under value, else we could never have sold them at this price. They're in the new 32-inch fitted models in the pretty spring shades and colorings. Have clever long lapel, two-button effect. Skirts full pleated. These of shadow checked panama and striped woolens full satin lined.

New Taffeta Dresses $15.00

Like the the illustration to the left. Solid blacks, blues and resedas, pink and white and novelty stripes in black, white, Helio and reseda. Beautifully trimmed with rat tail embroidery and lace yokes. New pleated skirt. Sale price $15.



Dutch Bonnets Are the Biggest Hits Since the Famous Merry Widow

The Spring millinery season has brought forth no greater sensation than the Dutch bonnet. Have you seen them? They are the most charming style that has been produced in years.

They are so becoming to the younger folks, and they are so attractive, really you will want one the minute you see them.

We are fortunate indeed in being able to announce the readiness of a broad variety of these Dutch bonnets, made of silk hair braid. Some covered completely with small flowers similar to the illustration. Made with ribbon streamers. Prices start at $5 and upwards.

Yes, Plenty of Those White Milan Shapes $2.35

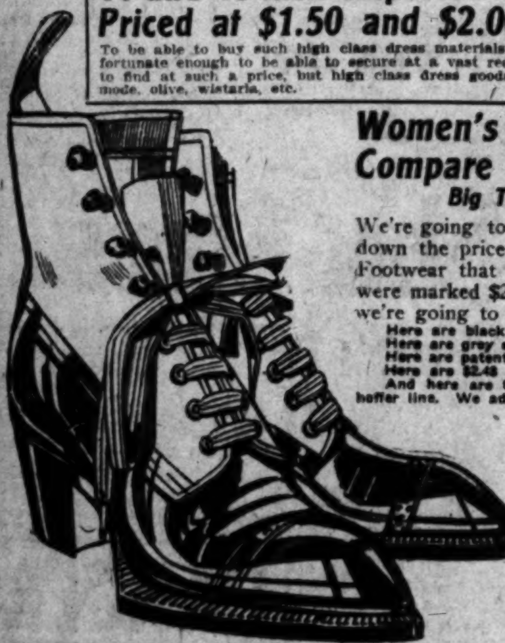
Seems as though everyone wants milan shapes in straw hats, and we're ready with the new Barrymore shape in white, burnt and black, $2.35 is the Broadway price—that you'll appreciate.

Our Famous Line of $5 Hats Are Blossoming Out in All Their Spring Beauty

Not since the first season, when we began to feature $5.00 hats have we been able to present a more notable gathering. Really, hats of such charm and character are seldom found below the $10.00 mark.

44 and 48-inch Imported Novelty Suitings That Should Be Priced at $1.50 and $2.00, Now . . . . 95c YARD

To be able to buy such high class dress materials at 95c is as rare as it is remarkable. Just 25 pieces that we were fortunate enough to be able to secure at a vast reduction. These are not the ordinary dress materials that you'd expect to find at such a price, but high class dress goods, the imported weaves including mixtures, brown, grey, black, navy, mode, olive, wistaria, etc.



Women's Shoes, Oxfords and Pumps Compare With $3 and $3.50 Grades $1.95 tives who do this, know what they are about for they know Joseph G. Cannon, and they believe in him, regardless of what people at a distance say, who do not know him.

Four times in succession; greater honor than was ever before conferred upon any man; they have chosen this venerable gentleman for the Speakership, because he is their next door neighbor in the Congress, and they believe in him.

Now, in the chair of the Speaker, this gentleman is perfectly harmless. But, the same majority that elected him proceeds to adopt a set of rules of procedure; a code which is intended to throttle the minority and compel them to permit legislation without undue delays. Those rules may be properly subjected to criticism, even to destructive criticism; but the man who is chosen to enforce those rules and does enforce them, is merely an instrument in the hands of the majority. He can be deposed at any time by that majority. He does not make the rules; but he is elected and reëlected because the majority knows that he will obey the behest of that majority, and enforce those rules to the uttermost.

You see, it is useless to curse Cannon. If he were dead, some other strong man would be elected to enforce those same rules, who would enforce them. So, if any cursing is to be done, curse the rules, and not the man who enforces them. If any berating is to be done, let the men be berated who make the rules, instead of the man who does the bidding of the majority, in enforcing them.

But first understand, that the rules are intended to enable the majority to carry on business, and to prevent the minority from obstructing business, as was done in ye olden tyme.

Col. William P. Hepburn of Iowa, who was for twenty-six years one of the foremost members of the House, always opposed the rules, and repeatedly tried to have them repealed or modified. Here is an extract from his denunciation of those rules:

"When the 'Reed Rules' were adopted, the House was at the mercy of a mob, whenever mob spirit was rife. Then, under three privileged questions—to adjourn, to adjourn for a certain time, and to take a recess—under those three privileged motions, half a dozen men could hold the House captive for hours and days, by compelling round after round of roll calls; and this throttling of legislation by the minority was called 'a filibuster.'

"The 'Reed Rules' were intended to do away with that irresponsible mob. The purpose was accomplished by taking away from two of those motions their privileged character.

"But, while the House escaped from the power of an irresponsible mob, it has not escaped from the undue and over-grown power of the Speaker. In my belief none of the animadversions upon the Speaker can be imputed to the person of the gentleman (Mr. Cannon,) who now occupies that office in this body.

"If we are to have a benevolent despot, then the gentleman who is our despot would be my choice. It is not the man; it is the system against which I am in rebellion. I rebel against it because, through the power that we have invested in this gentleman, and that the Speaker has invested in himself from time to time by construction of the rules, we have changed the whole character of our government."

This is the end of the solo; a plea for "peace on earth" so far as "Uncle Joe" is concerned. It might be well to repeat the refrain of Col. Hepburn:

"It is not the man; it is the system against which I am in rebellion."

Now, as to whether or not the system is faulty, men may differ earnestly and vehemently. History shows that the system, meaning the "Reed Rules," was successful in the hands of the masterful Republican Speaker, and history also shows that the system was successful in the hands of the gentle Democrat, Crisp, in subsequent Congresses. So, history shows that both political parties have used the system; and for the purpose of suppressing mob spirit and mob action, on the part of the minority.

As an old peddler in the Far West used to say when displaying his goods: "You pays your money, and you takes your choice."

LONDON'S PORECLAIN MAN.

Strange Case of Ossification of Human Muscles While the Body Has Not Lost Sensation.

A case of myositis ossificans, or ossification of the muscles, is being watched with interest in England. Alban Rushbrook, the sufferer, has become so fragile through the disease that were he to fall down he would probably break in several places. He has become, in the words of one doctor, a porcelain man, says a London dispatch to the Washington Post.

The action of his left arm below the elbow, a very slight parting of the jaws, a twitching of the fingers of the right hand, a restricted movement from side to side of the head, and a halting shift forward and backward of one leg, comprise the whole range of movement left to him.

This disease makes very slow progress with him, but the doctors agree that his case is hopeless, and nothing can be done to stay its attacks. The movement of his eyes is almost the only sign when he is speaking. With the aid of two sticks he manages to shuffle slowly across the floor. He cannot sit down.

When he is not lying flat on his bed he leans upright against a stool. He has learned the trick of tilting his body back across the edge of the stool and of swinging his feet in the air, balancing himself in this position as though he were a plank. The effect when he does so is extraordinary.

His jaws are practically locked together. Through an aperture made by removing some of his teeth, his food is passed into his mouth. Smoking a pipe is one of his pleasures, that and reading.

"Sometimes I am in pain," he says. "That is when my muscles are inflamed. The doctors have told me that they can do nothing for me. When I was 8 the ossification of my muscles began. I first had a stiffening in one of my shoulders. They thought at first it was paralysis."

Rushbrook is now 42. To the touch his body and limbs are hard as iron, but he has not lost sensation in them. He can, indeed, feel the tickling of a feather, even over the most ossified part of his body. His digestion is good and his mind is quite unaffected.

In discussing the case of Rushbrook, Dr. Smyly, house surgeon of the Meath Hospital, Dublin, referred to William Clarke, a County Cork man, who suffered from myositis ossificans. The disease attacked Clarke when he was a boy, but he lived to the age of 67.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University, sailed yesterday from New York for Bermuda. He declined to discuss the situation at the university created by the withdrawal of the William Cooper Practor $500,000 gift.

Oslerization.

ANGELES, Feb. 11.—[To the apers recently that our new city

nment, on the plea of economy, discharged from the street de-ent twenty or more men on the d that they were 60 or more years
. I have looked over our city put in their places. Is it not ble that there is some other rea-an that of economy behind the rge of these old men? Possibly oung men may be more zealous al workers! Very likely they are.

ting this to be true is that any eason why these old men should ave a fair show? If any one is turned out to rustle for a living be the young men. Down near lling waves of the blue Pacific vernment has erected a magnifiome for the old soldier, where he can spend his last days in peace and plenty. A worthy and fitting tribute to age and honored services. Over on Boyle Heights one of the grandest women of this, or any other State, has built and endowed a home for the aged women of Southern California, who, for any reason, are homeless and disqualified to care for themselves. A fitting tribute to aged womanhood. There is a wealthy gentleman, somewhat of an invalid, who is spending the winter in our city, who has at his home, I am told, quite a number of fine horses to which he is very much attached, and that he has made provision in his will that after his death each animal shall have a personal attendant to feed and care for it during the rest of its life. A very humane and kindly act, but the great city of Los Angeles, the most prosperous of its size of any city in the country, on the plea of saving a few dollars, will turn out to shift for themselves and families a score or more of men because they have reached the age of 60 or more years. God pity us if we cannot find some better way to begin to economize than this.

POPULAR RECIPE

This Home-Made Cough Syrup Stops Coughs Quickly.

Make a plain syrup by taking one pint of Granulated Sugar, add one-half pint of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put two and one-half ounces of pure Pinex in a pint bottle and fill up with the Granulated Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Keep well corked and it will never spoil.

The effectiveness of this simple home-made article is surprising. It usually stops a deep-seated cough in twenty-four hours. It is also excellent for colds, whooping coughs, pains in the chest, bronchial troubles and similar ailments.

Use the real Pinex in making it, however. It is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract, and it is far superior to the numerous pine oil and pine tar preparations. If your druggist does not have it, he can get it for you without trouble.

The proportion above suggested makes a full pint of the best cold and cough remedy. The taste is so pleasant that the children take it willingly. The total cost is about 54 cents.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.

SPOKANE.

[illegible]

A. The government of the United States would deport them.

Q. What do the Americans do in passing our national colors?

A. They either bare their heads or salute the flag in token of respect.

Q. What do the I.W.W.'s do with "Old Glory?"

A. Sing against it, hurl vile epithets against it, and spit upon it.

Q. What flag does the I.W.W. carry?

A. The red flag.

Q. What does the red flag stand for?

A. Blood—the flag of anarchy.

Q. What did the Mayor and Common Council do for the I.W.W. in Spokane?

A. Offered them a lot to speak in, allowed them the use of one of the courthouses in the City Hall and permitted them to hold all the meetings they wished outside of the fire limits.

Q. What is the politics of Spokane?

A. It is a Republican city.

Q. What are the politics of the Mayor of Spokane?

A. Independent Democrat.

Q. How did he come to be elected?

A. In a popular uprising against ring rule. He was elected by a large majority of the votes of the people because they thought that his record as a business man and Councilman showed that he was apt to make a good Mayor.

Q. What has he proved himself to be?

A. One of the fairest and best Mayors Spokane has ever had, universally respected by everyone.

Q. What has the Mayor done for workingmen lately?

A. Closed the doors of six employment agencies.

Q. Why?

A. Because they broke the laws and cheated the workingman.

Q. What did he also make them do?

A. Refund the money they had gotten by misrepresentation.

Q. What is the present Spokane law against street speaking?

A. "It is unlawful for any person or persons to hold any public meeting or make any speech, give any show, performance, exhibition, or do any other act which would tend to draw or collect a crowd upon any street, alley or sidewalk."

Q. Whom does this ordinance apply to?

A. Every one within the fire limits of the city.

This law has prevented the Salvation Army, Volunteers of America and kindred organizations from holding public meetings, so that there has been no unfairness shown to the I. W. W.'s.

Q. Did the authorities first warn the I.W.W.'s before the arrest?

A. They did.

Q. What did the I.W.W. do?

A. Telegraphed and wrote to distant cities for hobos to come who had no money with which to pay their fares, in order that they might break the existing laws.

Q. Did they come?

A. They did, by hundreds, broke the law, filled the jails, so that the Chief of Police was obliged to arrest over 450 of them.

Q. What else did they do?

A. Published inflammatory literature and sent broadcast through the country lying assertions about the city; sent for a woman named Elizabeth Gurley Flynn-Jones to make inflammatory speeches to create sympathy just because she was a woman. This woman's husband was the manager of the I.W.W.'s at Missoula. Neither of them have any source of income, take up collections nightly in order to get an income.

Q. Was Miss Flynn arrested and put in the City Jail?

A. Listen to the answer of Mayor Pratt: "It may surprise you to be informed that Miss Flynn was never confined in the Spokane City Jail, that inasmuch as the charge preferred against her was conspiracy under the State law, she was confined in the Spokane County Jail, over which the city and its authorities have no jurisdiction."

Q. What kind of a city is Spokane?

A. One of the finest in the world; climate temperate, scenery beautiful; population of over 132,000, and one of the finest Chambers of Commerce in the United States, now numbering over 850 in its membership. Listen to the recent report of Secretary Levi C. Monroe, for 1909, just published:

Bank clearings	$396,504,824
Bank deposits	32,800,001
Building expenditures	8,765,226
Jobbing trade	27,500,300
Population	132,503
Number of manufacturers	450
Capital invested	24,200,000
Output of products	19,000,000
Wage earners employed	7,500
Wages paid	6,500,000
Taxes paid on real estate	60,111,290
City taxes	10 mills

With such a report as this, from one of the finest bodies of business men in the world, and the statements of a first-class Mayor and Chief of Police, will you who read this article believe the statement of an unreliable body of lawbreakers who are strangers in our city and have no interest whatever in it?

Q. What did the Spokane Chamber of Commerce do in reference to this matter?

A. They passed the following resolutions unanimously:

"Resolved, by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, representing the commercial interests, the employers and well wishers of labor, that we most emphatically condemn the acts and attitude of the irresponsible leadership of the Industrial Workers of the World, as un-American, un-patriotic and undesirable, and a menace to the peace, prosperity and happiness of the community. Be it further

"Resolved, that we most heartily commend the Mayor, City Council, Police Commissioner and police officers for the firm stand they have made for the enforcement of law and order; that we indorse every action taken to protect life and property and uphold the peace and dignity of the city, and that we unanimously recommend that every encouragement and resource be placed at the command of the authorities until this reign of lawlessness shall cease."

HER HEAD SHAVED BY MISTAKE

A few months ago the case was reported of a little girl living in Hackensack who was sent to three different hair specialists in New York for treatment of a scalp affection which they considered a contagious disease. One went so far as to have her hair shaved off. Later, the trouble was found to be a simple case of eczema, which was cured in a few days by poslam.

In the various forms of skin troubles in both infants and adults, poslam produces beneficial results from the first application. Eczema, acne, herpes, rash, tetter, etc., yield readily to its remarkable curative properties. Occasional applications will quickly banish pimples, blotches and complexion blemishes and will relieve and cure itching feet, scaly scalp, humors, etc.

Poslam can be had for 50 cents at any reliable druggists, particularly The Owl Drug Co., who make a specialty of it. Or the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City, will send a trial supply free by mail to any one who will write for it. This is sufficient to show results in 24 hours.

NEW TESTAMENT IS REVISED.

Thirty-eight Years Has Elapsed Since Work on Marginal References Was Begun.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Bible students are keenly interested in the announcement of a new edition of a revised version of the New Testament, with full marginal references. The task has taken thirty-eight years, having been begun in 1873 by the late Dr. Frederick H. Scrivener and the late Prof. Moulton. The revised version, published in 1898, contained only abridged references.

In recent years Drs. J. H. Moulton and A. W. Greenup have been engaged in completion of the work. To many verses of gospel and epistles they have added nearly 100 marginal references, each bearing upon the text or meaning of the verse.

"I often worked ten to thirteen hours a day during my vacations," said Dr. Greenup today. "To aid me, I had large sheets printed with gospel text in large type, and the amplest margins. On these I compiled a list of references. References to a single verse occupied from the first to the last of thirteen years, returning to it, as I did over and over again. The publication will take place in a few days, and I presume that Bible students throughout the world will want the new work."

HOW TO GET FAT FREE

Don't Be "All Skin and Bone" When You Can Speedily Become Plump and Attractive.

50c BOX OF NEW DISCOVERY MAILED FREE

"Gee! Look at that pair of skinny scarecrows! Why don't they try Sargol?"

This should attract the eyes of every skinny, scrawny, cadaverous man or woman who reads this paper. The missing link between food eating and fat making has at last been discovered.

The principle which turns food into solid flesh has been located, analyzed and reproduced in tablet form for all to take.

The chronically thin are generally hearty eaters. Many a man with a big bay window eats less than some withered up shrimp with hips like two clam shells nailed to a board.

Eating will not produce fat unless the food be assimilated.

Assimilated is the word.

Plump, well-nourished men and women assimilate their food. Skinny people do not.

That is all there is to it.

Give a thin, scrawny woman the power to assimilate her food properly and in a fortnight she may develop a rounded figure which will be the admiration of passers-by. Let any fat and sassy happy-go-lucky business man lose this power to properly assimilate his food and in a jiffy his clothes will hang in festoons upon his emaciated frame.

During the past ten or twelve months some very convincing tests have been made with a new treatment. It seems to contain what might be called the active principle of assimilation. Its record as a fat and tissue builder has been so remarkable that arrangements are now being made with leading papers whereby all readers can have an opportunity to test this new discovery free of charge.

The name Sargol has been given to this new preparation. By using it you may [illegible] plump, strong and hearty. The food you eat will be turned into firm, healthy tissue, red blood, bone and muscle, and will not pass unassimilated from the system—as formerly.

Take Sargol and you can eat anything and everything in reason, you will be free from fits of the blues, can hold up your head and meet the world with a smiling face.

No one knows the mortification that thin persons suffer but they themselves. Thin folks get the sneers and rebuffs. Scrawny men never look like real money and they are crowded aside in the race for success. Thin women are pushed up against the wall and left there. It is seldom that a skinny woman is very popular.

By special arrangement, all readers who are lacking in bodily development and symmetry can make a test of Sargol, free of charge. All you need to do is to cut out the coupon below and send it today with your name and address to the Sargol Co., 64-P, Herald Building. Full directions will be sent with the free treatment. You will be shown clearly why it is that you have remained thin and what to do to put on more flesh.

COUPON.

This certificate and 10 cents to help defray distribution expenses entitles the holder to one 50-cent package of Sargol tablets, the home treatment which make thin folk plump and attractive.

Issued for account of Los Angeles Times.

PLUTO.

Robert J. Burdette.

BURDETTE.

tality. It's the fool who makes most of the sorrow and trouble in the world.

It is cruel, even if it be the cruelty of ignorance, to abuse an animal so docile and willing as a good horse. Or a mean horse for that matter. For so long as there are mean men in the world there will be mean horses. And lazy horses. Proportionately, there are fewer lazy horses in the world than there are lazy men. The whip is good medicine for the lazy horse. And even overdoses of it have very little effect, save to stimulate a sudden exertion, which is transient in inverse ratio to the square of its intensity. As to the lazy man, an old philosopher has said, "There is no known cure for laziness; but a second wife has been known to hurry it up, some."

But if it be cruel to abuse good animals, it is far more brutal to abuse good human servants. It is much meaner and more cowardly to whip a child than it is to kick a dog. And it is a thousand times wickeder to drive a man to death than it is to overdrive the best horse that ever looked through a bride.

And yet for years past the man, being more humanly intelligent than the horse, has fought for his life against being overdriven, by himself and by his employers. The old hours of a farm laborer used to begin before daylight and last until the evening chores had to be done by lantern light. The farmer who was guilty of this cruelty drove himself, just as hard as he did his hands. And he was foolish enough to try to keep this pace up after the introduction of farm machinery. And mill owners and manufacturers did the same thing, forgetting that God never intended that a thing of steel and steam or electricity should be put into a mill as a pacemaker for the strongest of His children. And as he resolutely refused to change the human constitution, and make a piece of flesh and blood part of a lightning-driven wheel, the hours of labor had to be shortened lest the human working thing be driven to death. Which would be unprofitable. And is, therefore, to be condemned.

But while the Almighty can protect His children against each other, even infinite power can't shield a man against himself. And so we can and do drive ourselves to death in the wild speed madness which had fallen upon the world. Every meeting of anything that can go, horses, wheels or wings, is heralded by the prophecies and the hopes of broken records. Always a strain for faster time. Always a disappointment when no "records" are broken. It wasn't enough of an achievement when men won the struggle of centuries and learned to fly. What we want now is to fly faster. If we can't do that, there is some satisfaction in driving the horse to death. And sometimes the "horse" is that great Ass of all Asses, the man himself. "Forgive us," an old father of the church used to pray when he remembered how we overdrive and abuse this patient burden bearer, the body—"forgive us, in that we have abused our brother, the Ass." And truly, it was a most fervent prayer, uttered in the profoundest religious spirit.

It is some satisfaction to know that the railway trains carry us much faster than the old stage coaches and canal boats used to do. And last year they killed 10,313, and wounded 105,234 of us "breaking records." It isn't much consolation for the man who is being carried so much faster than his grandfather could imagine, if he is landed in one of the two ports beyond eternity when his ticket called for Los Angeles. We pay for increased speed in everything, even though all the passenger rates on everything should be reduced. In 1890 there were 162 hospitals for the insane in the United States, with 74,028 inmates. Thirteen years later the number of hospitals had a trifle more than doubled—328, as had the number of inmates—150,151. We sure are making time in more than one direction.

The Commentator was especially impressed with one paragraph in Mr. Willson's interesting account of his flight in Paulhan's airship. The story of a trained journalist, accustomed to noting and measuring sensation and recording facts, it is worthy of profound consideration. This was that the sensation of speed, which beholders from the spectators' stands viewed with wonder, almost if not wholly vanished as the ship left the earth. Motion seemed to have no rapidity when it lost the terrestrial objects of measurement—when the great bird ceased to fly past telegraph and telephone poles, houses and trees.

Men and brethren, those few sentences in Mr. Willson's report make a great sermon. It's a good one to paste up on your mirrors where it will be ever before you. We are a great people, this human race. Our progress from the canoe to the battleship is something marvelous. From the running of Ahimaaz from the battlefield with tidings for the king at the gate, to the message of the wireless speeding a thousand miles over the seas in the space of a thought, is great advance. It is speed beyond human conception.

It does sound fast. It does seem fast. So long as we measure by the telegraph posts and the houses and other things that stand still.

Now, wait a minute. Get off the earth a little ways. Get us into the air. Soar into the ether. Now—race a few miles with God's airships, launched into space millions of years ago, long before the birds knew how to fly.

Good start! What time are you making, you Paulhan, king of the flyers? Forty-five miles an hour and doing it easily. And I can drive it up to ninety miles.

Now look down at the earth, hobbling along on schedule time. Hello, you old lump of mud! Get a move on you! Put on a little velocity before we get out of sight! How are you limping along today?

"Nineteen miles a second! More than a thousand miles a minute. About 70,000 miles an hour! Been doing it for millions of years, and never laid off a minute for repairs! Never had a broken shaft, a sprained wing, or a jammed piston since I started. What's the airship standing still for? Keep within the zone of my attraction, and I'll carry you as fast as Halley's comet—so fast you can't know that you're moving."

Oh, yes, children. We can fly. Ninety miles an hour when we keep close enough to the ground to measure by the telegraph poles. But we ground on a mud bank when we get to racing with the planets. We are a mighty race—the mightiest ever, when we enter ourselves against Patagonia. But we want a handicap when we stack up against the Universe. We can perceive the motion when we are riding seventy miles an hour on a limited train, and we congratulate ourselves and say, "Going some, eh? This is the limit." But when we stand still, sit down calmly and let the earth carry us along a thousand miles a minute, we say, "I'm tired to death of sitting still. I believe I'll get up and move along a little."

It's the little things that think they move. When a boy rows you out on a pond in his skiff, every jerk of the oars jolts you unsteadily on your seat. But the great ocean liner glides out from her dock so quietly you are carried off like a stowaway before you know you are moving.

When we get away from the earth, with its little cares and petty ambitions that fret and jar and jostle the soul, when we begin to move in time with the universe, we'll know how infinitely more speedy is serenity than hurry.

AUTO-SPEED LAW HOLDS.

State Supreme Court Sustains Validity of City Ordinance Affixing a Jail Sentence.

The validity of the city ordinance which affixes a jail sentence upon automobilists who drive faster than thirty miles an hour through the streets, appears finally established. The Supreme Court has denied the application of J. H. Snowden for a writ of habeas corpus after the Second District Court of Appeal had passed upon his case.

In denying the application, the court says: "The complaint filed against the petitioner charges an offense under the State statute prohibiting automobiles from traveling over the streets of a city at a rate of over fifteen miles an hour. The Police Court, therefore has jurisdiction of the action. The question whether the ordinance of Los Angeles is valid or not can only arise when it shall appear that the Police Court has imposed upon the defendant a penalty greater than allowed by State statute."

Unless Snowden's attorney can find some other legal loophole, it would appear that the defendant must serve sentence in jail as he was convicted some time ago of driving his machine faster than thirty miles an hour.

With the ordinance proved to be sound in every respect, the police will probably start a campaign against reckless drivers. Conviction of a violation of the ordinance makes it compulsory for the court to give a jail sentence.

Under an international agreement of several countries, a map of the world on a scale of sixteen miles to an inch is being made.

Why Do Men DRINK?

When you stop to think of the terrible results which come to men who indulge to excess in intoxicating beverages, well may you ask, Why do men drink? The fact simply stated is "A victim of the Drink Habit can no more resist liquor than a man with ague can stop shivering." Drunkenness is a disease and must be treated as such. The wives and mothers of those who drink intoxicants will be glad to know there is a remedy which will restore their loved ones to lives of sobriety and usefulness. Many thousands of grateful women praise Orrine for its benefits. Orrine has been known to effect a cure after all other means failed.

Paxson & Rockefeller, 24 West Park St., Butte, Mont., tell about a case of drunkenness of 25 years' standing. Read what they say. "A gentleman well known to us, who has been a hard drinker for twenty-five years, stated he had been entirely cured by Orrine. We consider this a remarkable case, as this gentleman has been treated three different times at a well-known sanatorium. This and other cases that have come to our knowledge gives us confidence in your preparation, and it gives us pleasure to recommend it to those needing a reliable cure in intemperance."

Orrine is prepared in two forms. No. 1, a powder, absolutely tasteless and odorless, given secretly in food or drink. Orrine No. 2, in pill form, is for those who wish to cure themselves. Orrine costs only $1 a box. The guarantee is in each box. Write for Free Orrine Booklet (mailed in plain sealed envelope) to Orrine Co., 919 Orrine Building, Washington, D. C. Orrine is for sale in this city by The Owl Drug Co., Inc., 320 S. Spring St., Fifth and Broadway, 625 So. Broadway.

They know Orrine is a reliable and efficacious remedy for drunkenness and they will not offer you a substitute.

Hundreds of Thousands of D From Insidious Kidney Dis

3,500,000 Persons Sick Every Day in the U. S.—a Larg of These Poor Unfortunates Stricken With S Form of Deadly Kidney Ailment

A New York dispatch, under date of November 24, 1909, to one of the great leading daily newspapers of the country, states that—

As Consumption Lessens Kidney Troubles Grow

New York, Nov. 26.—The vagaries of disease are interestingly shown in a little pamphlet gotten out by a life insurance company, wherein tables of increases and decreases give some knowledge of how, when we are freed of one malady, another increases. For instance, in the whole United States consumption has decreased [illegible] per cent since 1890, but, offsetting this, kidney troubles have increased 131 per cent in the same period. Chicago's kidney troubles have gone up to 167 per cent, and Chicago is down for an increase of 25 per cent of deaths from pneumonia. There are every day 3,500,000 persons ill in the United States.

This is the grim record that confronts every man, woman and child, according to the figures and statements of medical experts and scientists.

What, then, are the conclusions to be drawn? Do not these facts constitute a condition calculated to strike terror to the stoutest heart—especially with any individual who has the slightest reason to suspicion that he or she is affected with even the mildest form or initial stage of any Kidney disorder?

And even when one has reason only to believe that he or she is predisposed to this class of ailments (through hereditary or other causes), can too great precaution and care be taken that the too frequent dire consequences of neglected Kidney Disease be averted?

Now, friends, let us stop and think for a few minutes. We must all do this—sometimes—if we have a proper care and consideration for our own health and happiness, and the welfare and happiness of the loved ones dependent upon us.

Have You Any Symptom of Kidney Disease?

You know what these symptoms are—if not, we will tell you:

That weak, lame and aching back—those sharp, stabbing, shooting pains and twitchings in groin and limbs—that inflammation, soreness and tenderness of the muscles—those scalding, burning sensations; inability to retain the urine; sediment and deposits from the urine; inflamed bladder and passages, etc.,—that "all-gone," "played-out," dragging weariness and despondency—the dullness, lack of ability for concentration, restlessness, sleeplessness, unnatural nervousness and irritability, irregularity of the heart action, etc.

All These Mean Kidney Disease

if neglected—sooner or later—in some form or another, more or less deadly in characteristics.

If you have noted only such premonitory symptoms or indications as constantly recurrent "sick-headaches," unaccustomed languor or feeling of exhaustion, dragging sensation and tenderness of the back and groins, bloating of the extremities, sharp "stitches" when rising suddenly from sitting or stooping position, etc.—you may be quite certain that all these are indications of in the system. There can hardly be any mistake about that. The great mistake will be if you willfully neglect such symptoms.

For uric acid poisoning of the system invariably means diseased kidneys and bladder—then chronic inflammation of the kidneys, bladder and passages, inflammatory rheumatism, gravel and gall-stones, chronic nervous disorders, dropsy, diabetes, Bright's disease, etc. Assuredly, these are matters serious enough to merit the instant attention of any man or woman.

And whenever there is the slightest indication of one's kidneys and bladder having "gone wrong," common sense should at once suggest the selection of a good, honest, reliable remedy for this class of nervous derangements. And such a remedy—one of thoroughly proven efficacy, in thousands and thousands of even the most desperate cases—is found in

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills

If any man or woman (or child) will give these Pills an honest and fair trial—and there is anything wrong with his or her kidneys and bladder—these Pills will speedily and surely benefit—unless the disease has been trifled with and neglected until all possible hope or chance of help is gone.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are especially recommended for all derangements of the kidneys and bladder, in persons of either sex. They are thoroughly antiseptic, soothing, healing and tonic in action, and cannot possibly do anything but benefit you.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills, as soon as taken into the system, commence their work of neutralizing and rendering harmless the dangerous uric acid poison which is playing havoc with the system of the victim. Then, by a perfectly natural process of elimination, they drive that poison out of the system.

It will thus be seen that DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are an absolutely dependable remedy and preventative for all of the insidious and dangerous ailments and diseases resultant upon uric acid poisoning.

And when it is positively known (as is the case) that these genuinely good Pills are a thoroughly reliable and efficient treatment for such conditions there seems no logical or sensible reason why any person should neglect taking advantage of an opportunity of making a

Generous Trial of These Pills At No Cost Whatever

—as per the free offer of the manufacturers.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are prepared and put up in sanitary, air-tight, sealed glass containers—to effectually preserve their strength and purity—and are sold by all druggists everywhere.

Containing no opiates or narcotics they (as previously stated) cannot do anything but benefit you. And their marvelously soothing, healing, rejuvenating and tonic effects are in evidence almost as soon as one commences their use.

E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago (whose name appears upon every package of these Pills), are exceedingly anxious to have every man or woman, afflicted and suffering from any form of kidney and bladder disease (or having the slightest reason to suspect that he or she is afflicted), write and send name and address, and a free trial of these Pills will at once be forwarded direct to the person requesting same, all charges prepaid.

Certainly no one can afford to delay accepting so generous an offer as this. You have nothing to lose by making an honest trial of these Pills—and so much to gain, if you can thereby avert the oncoming attack of possibly fatal kidney disease.

And—perchance—you are already in the grasp of some one or another of these insidiously operating and remorseless diseases—how much greater, then, the reason for your knowing, and at once, just what DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills will do for you.

BATTLE HARD TO SAVE BODY.

Tragic Story of How Millionaire Mine Owner Met Death Is Told in Court.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch. The tragic story of how Henry Curtis Elliott, the millionaire mine owner, who lost his life in an Alaskan snowslide, came to light today, following a start of the fight in the courts between his first and second wives, the point at issue being the first wife's claim to half the estate because of having "grub staked" her husband when he found the mines. The story was told by A. H. Berry, who, with Henry V. Geer of Seattle, recovered Mr. Elliott's body, after five days' struggle with ice and snow.

Berry and his companion, injured and bruised, with meager food and shelter, dug for five days that their lost companion might have a Christian burial. After recovering the body they then struggled over 120 miles of unbeaten paths to bring their burden to civilization. Mr. Berry is now at his home resting and recuperating from his injuries sustained in the BUNCH DORGAN.

One of the men suddenly said, "You've got to leave this dance at once. I'm on the Floor Committee. I don't know who you are; but you must leave at once."

Bunch coolly blew cigarette smoke in his face.

"I shall send for the police to eject you," said the floor manager with sudden heat.

"You had better send in a riot call then," said Bunch, with quick savagery. "Just one more crack like that out of you and I am going to give you the worst licking you ever heard of. You can send to the Police Station if you want to make this dance end up in a big scandal; but you had better send for the ambulance, too."

"Oh, you can't bluff me," said the floor manager, hotly.

"Bluff you," snorted Bunch? "Here. Feel that and see if you think I am bluffing." He held up a biceps which, even though his clown's dress looked like the limb of a tree.

"On the level," snarled Bunch. "If you start anything I am going to kill you; I am going to beat you to death right here."

"You look like a prize fighter," said the floor manager, turning very white.

"You will find that I feel like a prize fighter, Horace," said Bunch quietly.

A sudden stillness fell. Bunch swept the circle. "Every man in this room," he said, "hand me his dance programme."

Tremulously a half dozen programmes were handed over. Bunch comaring them with Mary's programme which he held. He calmly scratched out names from the men's programmes and wrote in initials on hers until her programme was bursting with popularity marks.

"You weren't a nice boy; so you get soaked for three," said Bunch, to the floor committeeman.

He turned at the door as he was leaving. "By the way," he said, "I want this little girl to have a good time. I will ask her afterward and if there way any one of you she didn't like, I'll hunt you up tomorrow and break in your slats; so you had better get charming when you dance with her."

After the dance that night, little Mary crept into her aunt's room in her night gown. "Auntie, darling," said she, "if I live a million years I never shall forget this glorious, glorious night."

"I am glad you were so popular, dear," said the Boss's wife, with a little smile.

The night Society went to the auto show, Bunch slipped away and went down to the fight. The Boss was home now and they sat together at the ringside. Bunch seemed rather bored.

"This beats those mollycoddle dances, Bunch," sighed the Boss, as Mr. Flynn butted head first into the black anatomy of Mr. Langford, the cave man.

"Oh, well," said Bunch, reflectively, "sometimes them dances ain't so tame."

[ECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

HOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—What people of Phoenix desire known "the second aviation meet in eries" is now in progress at the ritorial fair grounds near this city. weather is nothing short of ideal, h a bright sky, medium tempera- es and only about five-mile breezes the most. Yesterday there was appointment over the number of nissions, but today the grand stand more than crowded, for the ex- ted excursions from other Arizona ns arrived in force. One factor t may have diminished the at- dance was the absence of Glenn tiss, who is reported to have been d up in New York by a Wright thers' lawsuit, affecting an alleged ringement of the Wright patents. se biplanes are here. Hamilton is dling the eight-cylinder machine t took the elevation record last k at Fresno. Gov. Sloan has been ited to accompany him on a flight may go aloft tomorrow. Yester- Harry I. Latham of the local Avi- n Committee, was the Governor's stitute. But his flight was of only ut 200 yards, when the machine uped down in front of the grand nd. Hamilton thereafter went ne, remarking that the air here, at feet of elevation above sea level, much less lifting power than at Angeles.

MAKES FINE RECORD.

he greatest work of the meet thus was this afternoon, when Hamil- bussed around the mile track ten es, in about thirteen minutes, ding a four-cylinder Buick auto t diligently tore up the dust with- success. The auto finally heated and went out of the race, but the ship made the full course without a ase. The time is considered remark- e in consideration of the two rp turns in each mile.

hough an Arizona crowd has repu- ion for blasé reception of any en- tainment much short of supernat- l, it rose to the proper pitch of en- siasm on several occasions when milton, poised from three to four dred feet above, stopped his en- e and swooped down like a sand- crane to safely alight in front of grand stand. The crowd on the t day was slow to enthuse, though ost pathetically and repeatedly ed to cheer by a husky-voiced ng agent of the visiting aviators. here were mishaps, of course. Once, alighting on the infield, Hamilton into a stake that had been used in ing down a balloon at the last fair. out an hour was consumed in fixing the resultant damage to the under- cing of the machine, a dull hour to crowd, for Willard before this had appeared from sight several miles y to the eastward. When he re- ned, it was after a lapse of a ple of hours, which had been spent a field north of Phoenix repairing wires. He told that on his rise m the field he was assisted by about r hundred farmers. Willard seemed have had a hard time keeping above tops of the tall, bare cottonwood es that are boundary markers on st of the Salt River Valley farms.

IDEAL FOR AVIATION.

he fair grounds have proved ideal aviation purposes. The start of h flight is made on the broad trot- g track, where the coast racing rds have been cut down each fair e. At first the aviators seemed to fer the broad grassy field for alight- , but later gauged exactly the drop the track from which they started.

hough Phoenix accommodations e been stretched as never before, crowds have been cared for, and e have been without beds or food. s has been accomplished only by lization of cots in every hotel, hall of accommodations in hundreds of nes.

inancially the local committee is ing its way clear to paying ex- nses, though there was discourage- nt at first. Curtiss had contracted $12,000, and for 25 per cent. of the e receipts. When he failed to ap- r, the contract was cut to $9000 flat. e total expense of the meet, about ,000, will probably be covered by the e box and concession receipts. An mense amount of work has been e without charge by the local com- ttee, headed by M. C. MacDougall, Phoenix merchant, who has laid e his business for the past couple weeks to devote himself to what he siders a task of pure patriotism.

[ECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

OUGLAS (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—"Back to e old New York for me!"

hese were the words uttered to eral friends by A. A. Browning, uted to be a wealthy broker from metropolis, as he left his apart- nts in a hotel at Phoenix, and hur- d out of Arizona. Incidentally, as took his departure, he left behind a little golden haired soubrette om he had made his wife on short uaintance, the wedding following an omobile dash to the Mexican border e one night a few weeks ago.

he girl who is his wife was Miss vena May. She came originally m Dallas, Texas, but had been on stage at Los Angeles, where it is ted Browning met her. He hap- ned to be in Arizona when the erican Musical Comedy Company ne into this territory. Miss May taking a leading part in the stock npany. The troupe had a long nd at Phoenix, and then came to uglas.

iss May and the troupe then went Bisbee. There Browning again wed up. One night after the show drove up to the lady's apartments, with the leading man, Charles lly and another soubrette for wit- ses drove his big auto through the ert and under the Arizona stars to co, a sleepy old relic of the gambling days on the Mexican border, where the two were married.

Mrs. Browning quit the footlights, at her husband's request, she states. A honeymoon trip which included everything from the Grand Cañon to the operas of Berlin was planned. One look at the Grand Cañon, however, and the husband's ardor seems to have cooled considerably. The couple went to Phoenix, where the dreams of Paris and Berlin melted away into the cruel realization that things were not as smooth as they might have been. The end was soon in sight, and Browning took the plunge for separation as quickly as he had taken his bride.

His wife passed the usual period of disconsolate weeping, then spunked up a bit and has just returned to the footlights.

DOUGLAS, ARIZ.

ANGELENO SUES FOR COMMISSION.

ECHO OF FAMOUS EL TIGRE MINE LITIGATION.

M. M. Dodge and Associate Get Grant of New Trial in $35,000 Damage Action and Case Will Be Heard in Tucson—Property Now Worth About Fifteen Millions.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—M. M. Dodge and D. Forbes McRae's petition for a change of venue in the trial of their suit for $35,000 damages against certain Kansas City men and others for alleged fraud in the transaction of sale of El Tigre Mining Company stock about four years ago, has been granted, and a new trial will come up at the next term of court in Tucson, Ariz. The case was tried in Tombstone, the capital of Cochise county, and Judge Doan awarded the plaintiffs the full amount of the damages claimed, but later heard arguments for a new trial, and this was granted. The petition for a new trial was argued by Attorney John S. Ives of Tucson, and interested in the case also for the defendants were Richardson and Lockwood of Douglas and Attorney Keeler of Kansas City. Interested in the case on behalf of the prosecution were Attorneys Goodrich and Watson of Douglas, who are still the attorneys for the claimants.

Dodge is now located in Los Angeles and McRae, the other plaintiff, is now superintendent and vice-president of the Calumet and Sonora Mining Company of Cananea. When the action first took place Dodge and McRae were mining brokers in Douglas. Kansas City men, among them E. C. Sooey, W. A. Moses, C. S. Jobes, A. L. Harroun and John Kelly, with others, had already been interested in the now famous El Tigre mine, located about sixty miles south of Douglas, in Sonora, Mex., which had been partially developed by James Suits, Alex Grant, B. F. Graham and others of Douglas and El Paso.

CHARGES BAD FAITH.

They desired to gain control of the mine, and began to buy up stock to give them a majority. It was found necessary to gather in $350,000 worth of the stock, valued at $10 a share, and Dodge and McRae in their complaint allege that they were detailed to make the sales. In their complaint, as filed at Tombstone, they allege that their commission of $35,000 was never paid to them, but that on the contrary the buyers and the sellers entered into a side agreement to conduct the transfers among themselves, charge the stockholders $1 per share and dispose of the profits among themselves.

Now that the change of venue has been granted, the whole matter will be rehearsed again in the Tucson courts, probably at the next term of court. The plaintiffs have not brought suit on the contract, but have entered an action for damages, which they set at the same amount as the amount of the commissions which they claim are due them for the sale of the stock.

The suit brings to mind the wonderful growth of the El Tigre mine, known as "The Lucky Tiger." At the time of the transfer the mine was valued at $640,000, and now it is probable that it would not be placed on the market for $15,000,000. Every foot of development work has served only to extend the strikes of rich ore. A car is ready for shipment this week, which it is said will net $29,000.

TWO NEW STRIKES MADE.

Since Thanksgiving the management has developed what are known as the Sooey and Seitz strikes, in veins running toward the south on the main series of ledges, and silver ore is found in these tunnels which run well toward two thousands of ounces to the ton, with values of from five to six ounces in gold and over. The company has a concentrator, and the concentrates are shipped over the wagon road from the camp to Ysabal, on the Nacozari Railroad, thence to Douglas, and over the El Paso and Southwestern Railroad to the smelter at El Paso for treatment.

The company is now driving a large main tunnel, which will cut all the ledges under the other workings, and eventually all the ores extracted will be sent down chutes to this main tunnel, and hauled out to the mill. This under tunnel will handle all the water, which supplies the plant for every need also, and will simplify the operations of the mine to a great extent. The concentrator is not as perfect in its operations as those at Pilares, Nacozari or at Cananea, and with improvements in concentrating the company will aim to save a far greater percentage of the metal than is now expected.

The North Tigre and South Tigre properties, lying immediately north and south of El Tigre proper, are new mines which are making great showings in Sonora also. The Tigre vein is opened to a point within 300 feet of the South Tigre property. Interested in this company are W. L. Rynerson and A. J. King of Douglas, Judge Lovejoy of Houston, Tex., and others.

"SIMPLE LIFE" FOR HADLEY.

Missouri's Governor Buys Farm and Will Practice Preaching of "Back to the Soil."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

JEFFERSON CITY (Mo.) Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Herbert Spencer Hadley has bought the 120-acre "cyclone" farm five miles west of here, in which he and his family will spend their summers.

Country life, explained he today, beats summering at the seaside or mountains. By setting an example to the people, he has been publicly advising them to get back to the soil.

The Governor expects to raise the cost of his living and get real enjoyment. He will care for his old-fashioned "dominick" hens and his truck garden himself, overseeing the plowing and reaping of grain. He has eleven dogs to keep rabbits from eating the bark from the fruit trees. He will drive in his automobile to and from the executive mansion.

Mrs. Hadley will have ample room to entertain on the model farm.

[illegible] way:
[illegible]

Bill wiped his mouth with the back of his hand.

"Well, when she got close up, she stops, and speaks to me.

" 'Mister!' says she—and her voice was sort of out of breath as if she'd been a running—'would you please do me a favor?'

"She had a kind of pretty face, mostly eyes, and her voice sounded sort of nice and soft like.

" 'Well,' I sez, sez I, 'I don't like refusing to do anything I can for the ladies, and what might be your asking me to do for you?'

"And then she sez, 'Would you be kind enough, mister, to take this bundle to John O'Donovan's in the next block at a hundred and nine Bleecker?'

" 'It's a baby,' I sez, sort of amused like.

" 'Yes!' she sez, 'it's a baby.' And she hurries the words out. 'They sent me with it from the home over in Spring street. I was to leave it at O'Donovan's, but my husband caught me and wouldn't let me bring it earlier. I jest got away from him, seein' he's pretty far gone in liquor, and I'm afraid he'll beat me if I'm gone away long. He's a good man when he don't drink.'

"I began to explain, colonel, as how we'd take care of him if he beat her, when she went right on again.

" 'Please take the baby, mister, down to O'Donovan's for me. They'll be awfully angry at the home, and the O'Donovans will be mad, and my husband will be mad, and, oh, what shall I do!'

"Well, before I knew what was happening, and quick as a snap of your finger, she laid the baby in my arms—and turned on her heel and ran down Bleecker street jest like a streak.

"Well, colonel, I couldn't help it. There I was with the bundle of baby in my arms, and she gone like a flash of lightning. It beat any flim-flam game I ever saw. Well, I knew where the O'Donovans lived, all right, as I pass the house every night on the way home. They've got an outside bell, with a shiny brass plate and their name on it. I remembered that about six months ago there was some white crepe tied to the bell, and I heard they had lost their kid. Naturally, I s'posed they were adopting another baby from the home, and this woman was asked to bring it over.

"So I went along carrying the bundle, which had an old shawl on the outside, and when I got to O'Donovan's I gave a pull on the bell, and had made up my mind to ask for the missus, when the door opened and a youngish, big, six-footed man stood there. I sez, 'Is Mrs. O'Donovan to home?' 'She is,' he sez.

" 'I brought her a Valentine,' I sez. I don't know jest what made me say those words, 'cause I'd forgot it was the fourteenth, but I jest blurted it out like that, fore I thought, and then I sez, too, 'I'm kind of late, but better late than never.'

" 'Come in,' he sez, 'and I'll call Mrs. O'Donovan.' So I stepped in the hall, and he shut the door after me, not noticin' the bundle very particular, and then he went to the end of the hall, and called, 'Em'ly, Em'ly, here's a Valentine, as has jest come for you.'

"In about a minute out comes a young woman, who might have been mighty pretty if she hadn't looked so cross like. She sort of stared at me with her big eyes, and me standin' there like a fool, holding the baby, which was getting kind of heavy by this time.

" 'I don't want any Valentine,' she sez.

" 'Maybe you'll want this one, Missus O'Donovan,' I sez. 'Can't we go in by the fire?' For through the open door I noticed a nice fire burnin' in the sittin' room, and to tell the truth, colonel, I was tired of holdin' the baby and wanted to land it somewhere, and alongside a good fire struck me as a mighty good place to drop the bundle.

" 'Come in,' sez she, tired-like and heaving a little sigh. 'What have you got?'

" 'Well,' I sez, lifting up the bundle which kept slipping down, 'I've brought your new baby.'

"Before my words got cold, Colonel, I wished a thousand times I hadn't said it, for that little woman threw up her hands, and let out one scream after another.

" 'Take it away, take it away, oh, John, John.'

"Well, the tall feller put his arm around her, soothing like, and led her out into another room. I set down in a chair then with the baby in my lap, and presently he came back into the room.

"I must have looked like a big fool, setting there by the fire, and more so cause the kid commenced to whimper. It didn't cry 'Wah, wah,' like any other baby I ever heard, but jest whimpered soft, like it wished someone to speak to it. You know, colonel, that noise from the baby seemed to break O'Donovan all up and he jest crumpled.

" 'Mebbe it's smotherin',' sez he.

" 'Mebbe it is,' said I.

" 'Mebbe we might undo it,' sez he.

" 'Then you get busy,' sez I; 'this is the first time I ever had one in my arms, and I can't get head or tail to it.'

"He seemed to be willing, and begun to undo the fastenings, and when it got uncovered, and the kid felt the warm from the fire, and saw the blaze shining, I'll be darned, if it didn't jest look up and smile, and do you know, colonel, I never knew babies could smile like that."

The captain was sitting quietly, listening intently to Connor's narrative, his teeth closed on an unlighted cigar.

"Well," continued Connor, "this O'Donovan wanted to take up the baby in his arms, and, of course, I let him, for I wasn't going to hold on to it forever.

" 'What's this?' he sez all of a sudden, and pulls out a letter from somewhere in the baby's clothes, which, by the way, were kind of cheap and ragged.

" 'You read it,' sez he, and I could see plain enough he didn't want to lay that kid down long enough to do it himself.

"I opened the letter and read it to him, and here it is, colonel; you can read it yourself."

Detective Connor fumbled in his coat pocket, and drew out a letter which he opened and laid on the captain's desk. The captain took up the letter, leaned back in his chair, and, gripping his cigar more tightly between his teeth, read the following:

"This is to be the end of it all—the baby and this letter. I can get no work because I've got a baby, and no one seems to want a woman to work who has a baby with her, and my poor baby is a cripple. Mebbe you think I am wicked to leave my baby and drown myself in the river, which I am going to do tonight. But I am not hard and cruel and I do care, but I ain't so hard as God and the Charities.

"I went to the Charities—went there twice, to their fine rooms, and their cross typewriter girls. They treated me just like I was dirt out of the gutter. They asked me so many questions, and I was so tired and hungry I couldn't think of half the answers. They told me I must get two preachers to sign the paper, and I must leave my address, and I would be investigated and a report would be made in four days. My God! four days, and me and the baby starving! I asked for work; they were sorry, but they didn't have any work there. They would take my name and let me know when they had any. So they sent me away.

"There wasn't anything left but the streets. Maggie was crying, and I stole a bottle of milk from a doorstep. But I mustn't steal, for the police will catch me, and then they'll send me to the workhouse. I can't go to prison. My baby will grow up, and if she found out her mother had been in jail, or on the streets, she would never forgive me, and would have to be ashamed all the rest of her life. Poor little Maggie! I can't take her into the water with me. I can't hurt little Maggie. Mebbe God will make up for it, somehow. The missionary folks talk that way.

"When they pick me up along the river they will know it's me, because my shoes ain't mates—one's black and one's brown. I'm a good woman and her father was an honest man. It was the drink that killed him. Whoever takes Maggie, try to be good to her. Don't let her be ashamed of her father and mother.

"MARGARET O'DONOVAN."

"Umph!" grunted the captain, as he finished reading the letter. "O'Donovan—same name. Did they know her?"

"No, colonel," said Connor. "This poor woman found somehow that a family of the same name lived in Bleecker street, but they were no relation."

"And you left the baby there?" queried the captain, taking on a softer, kinder tone.

"Sure I did," said Connor. "When the tall, young feller heard me read the letter, he sort of cuddled the baby up to him.

" 'Crippled, is it,' sez he, in a whisper, 'like the one we lost.'

"He stood holding the baby in his arms in front of the fire, and then he puts it up over his shoulder, and goes to patting it gently on the back. Just then his wife—Em'ly, you know, he called her Em'ly—she opens the door and looks in from the other room. She was jest going to say something, but didn't, as she caught sight of him holding the kid. Then she jest covered her eyes with her hands and gasped, and then came along in very slowly, her eyes uncovered and both of 'em looking straight at the baby. She seemed drawn right up to the kid in spite of herself.

"When she got real close she saw a crooked little foot sticking out. Then she choked and sobbed.

" 'John,' sez she.

" 'Em'ly,' sez he, and he laughed sad like, and turned toward her. He held out the kid to her and she took it in her arms and dropped into a chair, hugging the baby and crying.

"The tall feller was still smiling and

"GATLIN"— THREE DAYS

When You Come to Realize What Drink Is Doing to You and Wish to Stop, Just Think Gatlin Treatment—Cures in Three Days Under Contract

A WHISKY BRAIN NO GOOD IN BUSINESS

NO MAN drinks liquor because he believes it insures his business standing or enhances his chances of SUCCESS. He drinks it because he can't help it; there is craving, desire and physical necessity for alcohol over which he has no control. His WILL IS WEAKENED and MENTAL EQUILIBRIUM DESTROYED by alcoholic poison stored up in the system. Until this poison is driven out by proper treatment he will drink, no matter how frequently he may "swear off" and declare that he is "going to quit."

The CAUSE of drunkenness, or continued drinking, is accumulated alcoholic poison; the EFFECTS are craving, desire and physical demand for liquor and the many harassing nervous symptoms. The Gatlin treatment drives out the CAUSE in THREE DAYS—that means a cure, as every EFFECT of drunkenness disappears with the CAUSE. There are no hypodermic injections, no strong drugs, no disagreeable features. A longer period than THREE DAYS would be superfluous.

Where the EFFECTS of drunkenness are treated by hypodermic injections of SUBSTITUTIVE STIMULANTS, leaving the CAUSE in the system, EIGHTY PER CENT. of those so treated RELAPSE.

Come to the Gatlin Institute. You will be treated under a plain, legally-executed contract that a cure will be effected in THREE DAYS—a cure satisfactory to you and to your family—or the full fee paid shall be refunded, at the end of the third day, and treatment shall cost nothing. We do not judge the cure—YOU do that. More than five thousand patients have been treated without one failure. Financial references of the highest character submitted as to the value of the Gatlin Institute contract.

If you cannot come to the Institute for THREE DAYS, send for the Gatlin Home Treatment. It is just as efficient as Institute treatment, and carries practically the same contract, the only change being one to protect us against unscrupulous persons.

Institute located at 1125 So. Grand ave., Los Angeles. Call or write for books of particulars, copies of contracts, and other information. Long distance and local telephone—Sunset Broadway 1377, Home F1022.

Remarkable 11 Years' Test of Tuberculosis Cure

Visitors to the exhibition recently held in Philadelphia to acquaint the public with the dangers of Tuberculosis and to demonstrate the methods of prevention and the cure of Consumption, were surprised when informed at the Bureau of Information that no statement of cures was at hand. In the past few years, immense sums have been spent and many persons treated by the eggs, milk and fresh air advocates, yet curiously, cured cases are rarely found.

That Eckman's Alterative positively cures Tuberculosis (Consumption) and stands the test of time is proven by the following letters:

Philadelphia, Pa., Mar. 25, 1898.

Gentlemen—My son commenced taking your medicine February 2, 1898. Previous to that time my family physician had given him up to die with Consumption. Not being satisfied, I had him taken to a prominent hospital in this city, where they informed me that both upper lobes of his lungs were diseased. Upon examination of his sputum they found it full of bacilli, and said there was no hope of his recovery. He was compelled to give up his position. He commenced to improve almost immediately after taking your remedy, and has now returned to his office work.

AFTER ELEVEN YEARS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 24, 1909.

Gentlemen—Your inquiry as to the health of my son, Shapleigh, received. I can truthfully say he is, and has been in excellent health; never had a return of the disease since taking your Alterative eleven years ago.

I cannot speak highly enough of your Alterative, as it saved my boy's life.

Respectfully yours,

(Signed) Mrs. E. F. Bird.

ECKMAN'S ALTERATIVE is good for all throat and lung troubles and is on sale at all Owl Drug Co.'s Stores in Los Angeles. Ask for booklet of cured cases. It can also be obtained at or procured from your local druggist. Bright's Disease and Diabetes

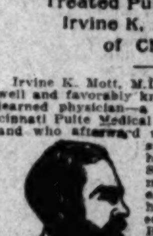
Under the Auspices of the Cincinnati Evening Post, Five Test Cases Were Selected and Treated Publicly by Dr. Irvine K. Mott, Free of Charge.



Irvine K. Mott, M.D., of Cincinnati, Ohio, well and favorably known in that city as a learned physician—a graduate of the Cincinnati Pulte Medical College, class of 1882, and who afterward received Clinical instructions abroad, and has since 1890 been a Specialist for the treatment of kidney diseases—believes that he has discovered a remedy to successfully treat Bright's Disease, Diabetes and other kidney troubles, either in their first, intermediate or last stages. Dr. Mott says: "My method arrests the disease, even though it has destroyed most of the kidneys, and preserves intact that portion not yet destroyed. The medicines I use neutralize the poisons that form a toxine that destroys the cells in the tubes of the kidneys."

The Evening Post, one of the leading daily papers of Cincinnati, Ohio, hearing of Dr. Mott's success, asked if he would be willing to give a public test to demonstrate his faith in his treatment, and prove its merits by treating five persons suffering from Bright's Disease and Diabetes, free of charge, the Post to select the cases.

Dr. Mott accepted the conditions, and twelve persons were selected. After a most critical chemical analysis and microscopic examination had been made, five of the cases out of the twelve, those showing the most advanced form of these diseases, were decided upon. These cases were placed under Dr. Mott's care and reports published each week in the Post. In three months all were discharged by Dr. Mott. The persons treated gained their normal weight, strength and appetite, and were able to resume their usual work. Any one desiring to read the details of this public test can obtain copies by sending to Dr. Mott for them.

The public demonstration gave Dr. Mott an international reputation that has brought him into correspondence with people all over the world, and several noted Europeans are numbered among those who have been successfully treated, as treatment can be administered effectively by mail.

The Doctor will correspond with those who are suffering with Bright's Disease, Diabetes, or any kidney trouble whatever, and will be pleased to give his expert opinion free to those who will send him a description of their symptoms. An essay which the doctor has prepared about kidney trouble and describing his new method of treatment, will also be mailed by him. Correspondence for this purpose should be addressed to Irvine K. Mott, M.D., 912 Mitchell Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

"The wages here are now enormous; bricklayers, plumbers, and plasterers get from $5 to $6 (20s. to 24s.) a day of eight hours, carpenters about $4 (16s.) a day, and the ordinary laborer, who has to feed and house himself, $1.50 to $2 (6s. to 8s.) a day. Where Hypnotism Failed.

When Daysey Mayme Appleton returned recently from a party where the influence of several minds over one had been the evening's entertainment and told her mother how six girls, with their minds bent on one thought, had made a man stand on his head; another man, at their silent command, had tried on a woman's hat, and another man had tried to eat water with a fork, it put a suggestion into Mrs. Lysander John Appleton's brain. That evening when Lysander John came home his wife and four daughters sat in a circle, with their hands covering their faces and their heads bowed. To all his inquiries they said nothing, and at last, fearing they had gone mad, he sent for the doctor. "We concentrated our minds on the thought that Lysander John must give us $5 each, and instead of that we have a doctor bill to pay," sobbed Mrs. Appleton, "and they said it would be particularly easy to work if the man's

DETECTIVE CONNOR.

he turns to me and sez: 'You see, our baby we lost was a crippled baby, that's why she takes to it so.'

"Well, colonel, when she began to fuss over that kid, the little thing began to crow to beat the band, and the tall feller quit his laughing and the tears began to roll down his cheeks like a small Niagara Falls. Oh, yes, I left the baby there all right. He said they'd keep it, and he sneaks the letter out to me, and I put it in my pocket, for I guess he didn't want her to see it. And do you know that crippled baby made her happy. She didn't look like the same woman. When I left 'em he had his arm around her, and I'll bet they'll take good care of the kid."

Connor heaved a big sigh of relief.

"That's the whole story, Colonel, only I was out nearly all night trying to find that poor woman. I looked along the river and everywhere, hopin' to head her off, but I couldn't find her, and when I laid down for a snooze, I was tired out and overslept. That's why I was late getting here. Now I'll go up to the morgue and finish the case."

It was a coroner's case, to be sure, but they tell the story at Duffy's how Big Bill Connor put on a bold front and claimed that the dead woman was an old friend of his and he would attend to the funeral. And Bill did. He bought a little plot on a sunny slope in Calvary, and he had the mother of little Maggie buried there. More than that, he quietly began to do some real detective work on his own account, and he searched the records at the too, and in a short while he found where little Maggie's father was buried among the pauper's dead. And they also tell the story at Duffy's how Big Bill had Dennis O'Donovan moved from the Potter's Field to Calvary, and how, later on, a small stone bearing the names of Dennis and Margaret was erected to their memory.

It was at Duffy's one Saturday night, that Denny, the barkeeper, told these things to O'Donovan, the big tall man of Bleecker street, who is very fond of a very pretty baby known to the neighborhood children as Maggie.

The next Sunday morning O'Donovan was wheeling a baby cart past the Sixth Precinct Police Station house, when whom should he meet but Detective Connor.

"Good morning, sir," said O'Donovan, smiling broadly, "I hope I see you well, Mr. Connor."

"Fine, young feller; fine as they make 'em," replier Connor, and his glance fell on two chubby cheeks in the go-cart. "And how's my little valentine?"

"Looks is better than words," said O'Donovan, laughing. "She's a darling, 'nd Em'ly couldn't get along without her."

Something tempted O'Donovan to speak to Big Bill about the stories he had been hearing at Duffy's. Was it true he had buried little Maggie's father and mother in Calvary? What had been the cost, and could O'Donovan share at least half of the expense?

"Nothing doing, my boy," said Detective Connor. "It was a mere trifle, and I was born to spend money. I wanted little Maggie there, when she father and mother. And I don't want my only valentine to be ashamed of her folks."

DOESN'T LIKE LENGTHY KISSES.

Ten Minutes of Steady Osculation Causes Solomon to Balk and Become "Human Iceberg."

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Solomon Lowenthal, 26 years old, a salesman for a liquor firm, summoned his pretty wife, Myrtle, to the Morrisiana court today and asked Magistrate Corrigan to compel her to return home and live with him.

"Why, he's a human iceburg, your honor. He does not love me any more. He never kisses me," exclaimed Mrs. Lowenthal, when she was asked what was the trouble between her husband and herself.

"That's not true, your honor," interrupted Lowenthal, "but her kisses last ten minutes, and I don't like that kind of kisses."

After more than half an hour's argument the magistrate rendered judgment that the couple were to go home together and live peaceably for one week, after which they were to come back if they found they could not get along.

Dr. Sophie Herzog, of Brazoria, Tex., is said to be the only woman railroad surgeon in the world. She is a native of Austria, came to this country in 1886, studied medicine and surgery and for nine years after graduation practiced medicine in New York. Soon after moving to Texas her work as a surgeon attracted the attention of the St. Louis, Brownsville and Mexican Railroad, and she was

FREE SUPERFLUOUS HAIR CURE

A Positive Remedy That Removes Any Hairy Growth and Does Not Burn the Skin.

SENT FREE TO YOU FOR TRIAL.

It is easy now for any woman to have a beautiful face, handsome arms and bust, free from all disfiguring superfluous hair. It doesn't matter whether it's only a few hairs or a regular mustache or goatee, or how light or heavy the growth is, it can be destroyed in a few minutes with the marvelous new remedy, Elec-tro-la.

This wonderful hair destroyer can be used on the face, neck, arms, bust, or any portion of the body with perfect safety. It is not like other remedies. It positively will not irritate, burn or scar the most tender skin, no matter how long it is left on, and it never fails to remove even the most obstinate growth almost instantly. If you want a permanent, lasting cure, not merely temporary relief, Elec-tro-la is what you should use, for it goes to the hair roots and kills them.

We have decided to send a trial bottle of Elec-tro-la to any man or woman who writes for it, to prove that it does all we say, upon receipt of a two-cent stamp to help cover cost of mailing. The regular sized bottle is $1.00 and your money will be refunded if Elec-tro-la does not do all we claim. We don't ask you to take our word for what Elec-tro-la will do. Just fill out trial coupon below and mail with a two-cent stamp today.

FREE TREATMENT

Fill in your name and address on dotted lines below and send it to Ko-Rec-Tiv Co., 5165 State St., Chicago, Ill., enclosing a two-cent stamp to help cover mailing, and we will send at once a free trial bottle that will show you what Elec-tro-la will do for you. A999.

DEVELOPMENT.

TO INCREASE BUSINESS AREA.

PLAN TO CUT DOWN SAN PEDRO; ELEVATE WILMINGTON.

City Officials Inspect Project to Level Knob Hill and to Raise the Grades in Latter City to Make Room for Future Commercial Interests—Speculations on Costs.

Plans to cut down San Pedro and to elevate Wilmington were investigated yesterday by the Board of Public Works in company with City Attorney Hewitt and City Engineer Hamlin.

Cutting down San Pedro means the reduction of Knob Hill at the north end of the business section; elevating Wilmington means the raising of the grades of a large portion of its business section east of Third street by establishing a new grade for streets.

The officials first visited Wilmington and surveyed the topography of what the future seems to promise as a large harbor business section. Preparing for that future greatness the City Engineer has given warning that sewers cannot be installed with success until the street grades are raised. A raise of from two feet to eight feet seems necessary to put the sewer system high enough above the sea level to insure proper drainage.

The engineer will submit a report later as to what he deems is the necessary elevation for the different streets. Of course this carries with it the filling of private land to the same level.

The reduction of Knob Hill is planned to enlarge the congested business district of San Pedro. It is now confined to a cup-like flat surrounded by hills and the feasible scheme presented by commercial and land interests there is that the hill be cut down as much as forty feet in some places to produce a level that will make the business section, the hill area and so-called "Happy Valley," now beyond the hill, continuous on the same grade.

It is estimated that a steam shovel set to work on the hill could reduce it and deliver the dirt by rail to the big fills in progress on the outer harbor water front for 5 cents a cubic yard. It is believed the Miner fill and other interests would be willing to cooperate in the scheme and reduce the cost to a nominal amount.

The region to be reclaimed to the business section is north of Third street and east of Palos Verdes, though there is also a suggestion that Center street may be a feasible west boundary. In all, the project east of Palos Verdes street will reclaim about fourteen city blocks that are now unfit for commercial use because of the hill.

MANY WILL MISS HIM.

Untimely Death Takes Away Sierra Madre Young Man—Board of Trade to Have Banquet.

SIERRA MADRE, Feb. 12.—When Thomas L. Dwyer answered the summons to his Maker Thursday noon, there passed out of this life a young man of sterling character and worth, and a lovable friend to all who knew him. "Tom" Dwyer, as he was familiarly called by those who associated with him, had just passed his thirtieth birthday anniversary, but he had accomplished much. He was born and reared in Chicago, and received his education at the De La Salle Institute of that city. After spending several years there he embarked in the furniture business, and followed it until within a few weeks of the end, traveling for a Los Angeles house.

Although an active worker, he was a student, and devoted much time to reading and studying the deeper subjects of life. He possessed a clear, bright mind, and was very affable and companionable. Shortly before his death he was engaged in writing a comedy skit. Funeral services are to be held Monday morning in Pasadena.

TRADE BOARD BANQUET.

The annual banquet of the Sierra Madre Board of Trade is to be held next Thursday evening at the Women's Club House. The dinner will be provided, and served by the women of the club. Among the speakers of the evening will be Willis Booth of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. Plates will be set for 100 guests. The committee having charge of the affair consists of J. A. Osgood, chairman; M. D. Welsher, Cabot A. Yerxa, Prof. J. J. Hart and George B. Morgridge. Special arrangements have been made for out-of-town guests.

Much activity is noted in the real estate market here, and many demands are made for choice building sites. So great has been the call for furnished cottages this season that many lessees and owners have booked orders ahead.

Miss A. R. Polley, municipal nurse, has taken a leave of absence for several weeks, during which she will visit several Middle West cities and endeavor to recuperate after a strenuous winter's work.

BUYS SPLENDID RANCH.

Man from Illinois Gives Up Residence in East to Settle Down on La Habra Property.

WHITTIER, Feb. 12.—C. H. Osmun recently from North Crystal Lake, Ill., has purchased twenty-seven and three-fourth acres of orchard land in La Habra from J. A. Althouse. The price is not announced. The property is improved with fine house and barn, water piped, with seven acres of three-year-old lemons, eleven acres of four-year-old Valencias, and the balance in navels and walnuts. The property lies about five miles east of Whittier, and is regarded as one of the best young orchard ranches in that vicinity.

HIGH SCHOOL PAPER.

Cardinal and White, the Whittier High School paper, is just out, and is a fine number. The paper is managed entirely by students, the editor being Albert Stone. Willis Beede is manager.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morris celebrated their silver wedding at their home on North Comstock avenue Thursday evening.

PRIZES AWARDED.

Boys Receive Rewards Furnishing Names for Use in Y.M.C.A. Membership Campaign.

At a gathering of 200 boys and other visitors, in the Y.M.C.A. boys' gymnasium, yesterday morning, the prizes were awarded to the winners for the largest list of eligibles to membership in the association, as follows: The first prize, an order for a $25 suit of clothes, went to Herbert Haynes. Russell Wagner received a mandolin; Harold Walker, an auto coaster; Harry Bamesburger, a camera; Archie Brown, a sweater vest; Lester Lipp, a dozen cabinet photographs; Louis R. Conti, a solid gold Y.M.C.A. pin. After the awarding of the prizes, R. L. Allen outlined the campaign for the coming week, and received a promise of all of the boys to assist in boosting the membership as high as possible. The important work done by these boys is in furnishing tangible material upon which the seekers after new members will work next week.

One Policeman Enough.

Of the culprits held before a police magistrate there was one—an Irishman—who had caused no end of trouble to the police. The magistrate regarded the prisoner with mingled curiosity and indignation. "So you're the man that gave the officers so much trouble?" His Honor asked. "I understand that it took seven policemen to lock you up." "Yes, Your Honor," responded the Celt, with a broad grin, "but it would take only one to let me out."—[Kansas City Star.

GENEROUS LANDLADY.

Coachman Is Said to Have Sent Her to Theater While He Made Get-Away.

Willard Coleman, formerly a coachman in the employ of W. W. Mines, is being sought by the police on a charge of passing a worthless check for $150 on John Hinch, proprietor of the Chicago Club.

Coleman is said to have played a clever game on his landlady. He boarded at No. 1043 South Hope street. On the night of his disappearance, it is said, he bought two tickets to a theater and presented them to her and while she was away he packed his belongings and departed, leaving a board bill for $83.

Detectives Ritch and Roberds are investigating the case.

"ON THE HEIGHTS."

Dr. William Horace Day will deliver his lecture "On the Heights" next Thursday evening in the Y.W.C.A. auditorium, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the institution. The lecture will be illustrated by the splendid photographic slides taken by Dr. Day during his 230-mile trip in the saddle among the lofty mountains of California last summer, and also interesting views of the Owens River aqueduct, his trip including more than 280 miles along its course. Tickets for this interesting and instructive lecture are now on sale at the Y.W.C.A.

WILL HEAR OF "SCOLDING."

At a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Union-avenue school Wednesday at 2:30 p.m., Mrs. O. T. Helping will read a paper on "Scolding." A fine musical programme by Mrs. C. F. Strasburg is promised.

The Conflict of Love and Fat.

The average man will "jolly" with the stout girl; but he steals glances over her shoulder at that Miss Slender. He would sooner hold the hands of the latter in a fatuous silence than really enjoy himself with the other. Such is the power of line. Just a line—from chin to toe, or nape to heel—that's all. But it rings the merry marriage bell.

Fat women should not repine—but refine—their own lines by means of that phenomenal—the Marmola Tablet. No exercising or dieting is necessary. Simply take one tablet after each meal and at bedtime, and in a little while the overplus fat—the "coarseness of aspect—will disappear. The figure will become slight enough to permit of a maidenly contour, a pure outline, being fashioned with corset and gown. Then victory—if not revenge.

Although Marmola Tablets often take off uniformly a pound of flabby fat a day, they are quite harmless (being made of the famous fashionable prescription; ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water). Consequently, even timid ones are safe in using them, for no ill—not even a wrinkle or stomach ache—will follow their use; seventy-five cents secures a large case at any druggist's or by mail from the Marmola Co., 225 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Prominent Symptoms of Catarrh

Read Them All. Which of Them Apply to You?

THE HEAD AND THROAT.

This form of catarrh is most common—resulting from neglected colds—quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Is your head stopped up?
Does your nose discharge?
Is your nose sore and tender?
Is there pain in front of the head?
Do you hawk to clear the throat?
Is your throat dry in the morning?
Do you sleep with your mouth open?

You can be easily cured now. Don't let it run into complications.

THE BRONCHIAL TUBES

When catarrh of the head or throat is neglected or wrongfully treated, it extends down the windpipe into the bronchial tubes, and after a while attacks the lungs. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Have you a cough?
Do you take cold easily?
Have you pain in the side?
Do you raise frothy materials?
Do you spit up little cheesy lumps?
Do you feel like you are growing weaker?

Don't risk neglecting these warnings—stop the disease before it reaches the lungs.

OF THE EARS.

Catarrh extends from the throat along the eustachian tubes into the ears, causing partial or complete deafness. Quickly cured with little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Is your hearing failing?
Do your ears discharge?
Is the wax drying in your ears?
Do you hear better some days than others?
Is your hearing worse when you have a cold?

Don't neglect this until your hearing is irreparably destroyed.

OF THE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach is usually caused by swallowing mucous which drops down from the head and throat at night. Quickly cured at little cost by Drs. Shores' famous treatment.

Is there nausea?
Do you belch up gas?
Are you constipated?
Do you bloat up after eating?
Is there constant bad taste in the mouth?

Now is the time to be permanently cured. Drs. Shores are curing hundreds every year.

The annual debate between Stanford and California for the Carnot medal, is to be held at Berkeley, Saturday night. Stanford will be represented by G. F. Morgan, '10, of Los Angeles, R. J. Miller, '11, of Hanford, and P. J. Batkin, '10, of Los Angeles.

The senior girls appeared on the quadrangle this morning in caps and gowns. The academic costumes will be worn by the "co-eds" of the graduating class every Wednesday during the remainder of the year.

OWNERS ARE CAUTIONED.

Riverside Authorities Find Case of Rabies in Japanese Camp—Redondo Couple Married.

RIVERSIDE, Feb. 12.—Owners of dogs have been cautioned by the Chief of Police to watch them, as a case of rabies was discovered yesterday in the Japanese camp at the intersection of Victoria avenue and Jackson street. A white bulldog, which was acting strangely, was examined by a local veterinarian and was pronounced to be afflicted with a typical case of rabies, the disease manifesting itself in a semi-comatose, rather than the "traveling" form. The dog was killed and buried.

The animal was bitten by a dog that went on a rampage about two weeks ago and bit several dogs along West Seventh street. One canine bitten by this dog was placed under a veterinarian's care and has since died with marked symptoms of hydrophobia.

DIRECTORS ELECTED.

At the annual meeting of the East Riverside Water Company, the directors chosen were L. C. Waite, S. H. Herrick, C. F. Marcy, J. E. Brown, Nelson H. Twogood and John Meharg. The board organized by the election of L. C. Waite as president; S. H. Herrick, vice-president; Citizens' National Bank, treasurer; A. Martin, secretary; Michael Krieg, superintendent; C. F. Holmes, assistant superintendent.

REDONDO COUPLE MARY.

The marriage of Perry C. Ridgley and Miss Frances Edith Booth, both of Redondo Beach, was solemnized at the First Baptist Church day before yesterday with the pastor, Rev. Dr. George F. Holt, officiating. The bride, who was unattended, wore a tailored suit of light brown. After a short stay at the Glenwood Mission Inn, Mr. and Mrs. Ridgley left for Redondo, where the groom is engaged in business.

WILL PLANT GROVES.

Extensive planting of orange and lemon groves will be started soon by the Riverside Groves and Water Company, which is developing a large tract at La Sierra Heights. The contract has been let for 40,000 orange and lemon trees, which will be set out this spring.

WANTS TO BE COUNTY SEAT.

Oxnard Desires to Oust Ventura and Will Put Its Proposition Before the Supervisors.

OXNARD, Feb. 12.—The county seat fight is now on. The people of Oxnard and district are preparing to request the Supervisors to submit the question of relocating the county seat, thus changing from Ventura to Oxnard. The Board of Trade will hold a special meeting on Monday evening. This morning over $40,000 was subscribed to a fund, which it is proposed to increase to over $100,000. The proposition to the Supervisors will be that if the voters decide to move the seat of county government from Ventura to Oxnard the people of this community will donate sufficient money to purchase a site and erect a modern Courthouse.

BOXING BOUTS.

The Oxnard Athletic Club will put on a series of boxing events next Saturday evening. The main event will be a twenty-round bout at 110 pounds between Jimmie Royal of Los Angeles and Jack Ward of Denver. Kid Butson, Los Angeles, and Frank Matway will box for six rounds at 125 pounds. Jim Murrieta of Oxnard has been matched with Manuel Flores of Ventura for six rounds. George Blake of Los Angeles will referee.

CHARITY CONFERENCE.

A meeting of the Charity Conference Committee will be held in the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday morning at 10:30, for the transaction of business.

The United States each year produces almost one-third of the world's supply of flaxseed, more than is produced by any other nation.

WHY DID

three large concerns with nearly 100 employees decide to pay their men with checks on us? Because they found that over half of their checks were being cashed by saloons. They thought they owed it to their employees to do business where it would not be necessary for their employees to go to saloons. We pay interest on deposits. 403.

NOVEL IDEAS SEEN IN STOCK.

MOROSCO'S SYSTEM FOR NEW PLAYS AND REVIVALS.

Will Have Long Season of Late High-Royalty Pieces and Then a Season of Feature Revivals—New Circuit of Stock Theaters Soon to Become Verity.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Formerly variety theaters — now vaudeville, please—were the only things that ran in circuits. Later the managers added the hugest combine of high-priced houses that the world has known or may ever know, and called it the Syndicate. Now two westerners, Messrs. Morosco and Belasco, propose to make a stock circuit.

The Morosco-Belasco interests have acquired houses in Portland, Seattle, Spokane and a working agreement in Oakland, together with the long-established San Francisco Alcazar and the Los Angeles Burbank.

"We will probably have a theater in Kansas City," said Mr. Morosco, "and I am in hopes of getting one in Denver, though it will have to be built. Denver is a good town for a first-class stock company, and everything seems to be ripe there for the starting of one."

Mr. Morosco also is putting into vogue, today, a new idea of his own concerning plays.

"I feel that in the presentation of 'Cameo Kirby,'" he continued, "that I am inaugurating a long-planned policy which will be successful here. This one play will be the beginning of plans that have been maturing for years.

"As a rule, all stock organizations are obliged to depend mainly upon revivals of favorite pieces, making at best every fourth or fifth production a novelty. Of course it would be impossible to do nothing but new plays, but I think it feasible to give an extended season of 'all new' pieces, and then another exclusive season of big 'revivals,' featuring both.

"Then, if you like, back to the new plays, or whatever you wish, but in this way you get that which is the secret of success in any line—novelty and progress—and you have a longer time between repetitions of standard plays, which, you know, it is considered good policy to do at least every nine months.

"Mr. Belasco will come down the first of the week to commence rehearsals on 'Kitty Bellaires,' which is scheduled to follow 'Cameo Kirby' at the Burbank. Notwithstanding several announcements, the play has never been done in Los Angeles, though many people are under the impression that it has been seen here.

"After the play is launched, Mr. Belasco and myself will make a two months' tour of the West. In the North we are affiliated with George L. Baker, for which we are very thankful, as Mr. Baker is one of the representative theatrical men of the entire country, and one to whom the Northwest owes a great deal for its high-class dramatic entertainment in recent years.

"Royalties? Well, 'Sweet Kitty Bellaires' is about the most expensive play I could offer Los Angeles, for its financial demands sound the limit of safety. In addition to the original cost of the play itself, its production will necessitate the employment of three stage directors, instead of one, and about forty extra players—not supers, but 'regular' actors, and actresses, all with lines.

"Among the plays known only in the Syndicate field, which are to follow 'Sweet Kitty Bellaires' in rapid succession, are 'Brewster's Millions,' 'Caught in the Rain,' 'The Thief,' 'Samson,' 'A Message From Mars,' 'Quincy Adams Sawyer,' 'The Substitute,' 'The Barbarians,' 'The Flag Lieutenant,' 'An American Widow,' 'The Light that Failed,' 'The Chaperon,' and a number of similar pieces whose names I can't recall just now.

"This season, now starting, will also include first production of at least two new plays for which I have the highest hopes.

"What do I mean by 'revivals?' Only such plays as 'The Lion and the Mouse,' 'Pierre of the Plains,' 'Divorcons,' 'The Admirable Creighton,' and other pieces, which, though comparatively new, have, at the same time been practically eliminated from the traveling field and are known generally as distinctive stock plays.

"I believe that the future of American theatricals will, in a large sense, be worked out in the West. I believe that the western stock company is the best maker of actresses and actors that the metropolis has. We have instances of that constantly before us. Here is a letter,"—business of picking up and opening the same—"which tells of Eugene Walter's newest play, 'Just A Wife,' which he has written for the stellar use of his own wife, Charlotte Walker. The cast is small, and prominent in it are Amelia Gardner, one of the most popular leading women Los Angeles ever had, and Bobby North, who frequently acted here in musical stock, recently achieving great prominence in one of Savage's shows last fall."

"Yes, this is a Shubert theater," said L. E. Behymer, at the Auditorium the other afternoon, "and you don't need to speak so satirically.

"It is probable that we will reopen for Florence Roberts and her company in 'The Transformation,' which is now having a remarkably successful run in San Francisco.

"The title 'Transformation' might be applied to Miss Roberts's acting as well, for she has completely changed her familiar methods in the past year. White Whittlesey, the leading man, is extremely artistic, and gives a splendid performance.

"There remain, I believe, about twelve weeks of Shubert bookings in the present season."

NEW BELASCO RECORD.

"Man of the Hour" Sets a New Mark for Opening Attendance and Holds High Promise.

"The Man of the Hour" may set a new record at the Belasco Theater, since all attendance marks for a first two weeks, so far, have been annihilated, and the prospect for the third week is very large. At nearly half the performances the orchestra has been removed, and extra chairs have been put in the places of the musicians.

The unusual attendance bestowed on theatrical events in Los Angeles during the past winter betokens unusual prosperity. It means something more than a mere influx of the curious, but indicates a pretty substantial condi-

THE WEEK.

MARIE CAHILL AT THE MASON.

"THE BOYS AND BETTY" OFFERED FOR OBSERVATION.

"Florodora" and "The Man of the Hour" Both Promising Continuances—Orpheum Has Novelty in a Troupe of Genuine Geishas—Figman at the Majestic.

The Mason Operahouse will reopen tomorrow night with Marie Cahill as the attraction, in her newest musical play, "The Boys and Betty," written for her by George V. Hobart, who supplied the book and lyrics, and Silvio Hein, who composed the music. Miss Cahill's last appearances in Los Angeles were in "Marrying Mary," in which she established herself as a favorite with local playgoers.

"The Boys and Betty" was adapted by Mr. Hobart from a French farce called "La Papillon," but has been Americanized. The story deals with a young American girl, Betty, the part played by Miss Cahill, who, while pursuing her studies in Paris, has fallen in love with and married a so-called "musical genius," who immediately after the ceremony starts in to make her life as miserable as possible. So little does he contribute to the home expenses that she is obliged to take boarders in order to stock the family larder. These boarders are four young art students, who are the "boys" of the play. They are patronized by Betty, who encourages them in their work and helps them all she can in getting over the rough places, and as a consequence they are devoted to her and unfriendly to the brute of a husband. So unhappy is Betty that she finally leaves him, and sets up a novelty shop in the metropolis, which proves successful, and the boys become the clerks and help toward the establishment of a good paying business. The husband, Casimir Barbeau, then reappears on the scene, but he is caught in the act of attempting a bigamous marriage. Betty is enabled to secure a divorce, and all ends happily. Around this thread of a story, Playwright Hobart has strung many situations for the star, and Composer Hein has given her many songs. Among the musical numbers are "Whoop La La," "The Tetrazzini Family," "The Arab Love Song," and others peculiarly adapted to Miss Cahill's style. Miss Cahill will have a large company in her support, among them being W. G. Stewart, Sam B. Hardy, Wallace McCutcheon, Jr., James B. Carson, Edward Earle, Lucien Kesney, Kenneth Davenport, Anna Mooney, Hattie Fox, Jane Rutledge and Mary Mooney, and the Cahill chorus, made up entirely of pretty girls, who are able to wear clothes gracefully as well as sing and dance. For this engagement the orchestra at the Mason will be greatly augmented, and will be presided over by the composer, Silvio Hein.

Comedy in abundance will reign at the Majestic for the week commencing tonight, when Max Figman will open his annual Los Angeles engagement in "Mary Jane's Pa."

Figman is a sincere and winning artist, and in Edith Ellis's story of Indiana, "Mary Jane's Pa," he has a vehicle that will bring out his best efforts and demonstrate his versatility. Furthermore, he is supported by an unusually strong company, including Miss Helen Lackaye, and Messrs. Edwin Chapman, Franklin Searight, Toney West, Charles Merriwell, Thomas C. King, Ernest Warde, David Marlowe, G. H. Stewart, the Misses Dorothy Phillips, Nina Ainscoe, Helen Hartley, and last, but no means least, the clever child actress, Gretchen Hartman.

"Mary Jane's Pa," by all accounts, is a very lovable fellow, and made friends in New York for six months; in Chicago for three months; in Philadelphia for one month, and since in a number of cities and towns has become a favorite. Described by Edith Ellis, he is a tramp printer from a small town in Indiana, and bears the prosaic name of Hiram Perkins. His ambitions are too closely confined in the dwarfed Indiana village, so in answer to the call of the wanderlust of his nature he departs one day from his home, wife and children, and wanders around the world for eleven years. When he returns to another village he finds his wife a woman developed with remarkable business capacity; his children grown up, and his own memory almost dead to them. His wife, though true to him all these years, has begun to form other attachments, which his return so unexpectedly seriously complicates. Her woman's instinct of charity prevents her from turning him out when in need, and yet she does not feel justified in acknowledging him as her husband, either to the children or to the world. Remembering that he was an expert in the kitchen, she offers to let him remain as cook at stated wages, and with certain conditions, thinking he will refuse. Struck by the audacity of the proposition, he accepts.

The scenes are laid in the Perkins home and in the print shop of Mrs. Perkins, where the newspaper scene is enacted. The locale affords opportunities for character sketches, and Edith Ellis has made the most of them. The character of little Mary Jane, whose love and sympathy are the ultimate cause of the reunion of the parents, is played by Gretchen Hartman. Mr. Figman is under the management of John Cort.

One of the most unusual and interesting acts presented will head the Orpheum bill for the week beginning Monday. It consists of eight real Geisha girls, direct from Nagasaki, Japan, an act now making its first tour of the United States, and said to be the first ever permitted outside the land of the Mikado. These eight singers and dancers of Nippon are not of the "tea-house" class, usually shown to foreigners, but of the select entertaining clan, and their work is looked upon as highly honorable and exclusive. Their act includes the native dances and songs, posturings and typical entertaining features, to the accompaniment of the samisen, their own instrument. Many of the dances interpret great historical episodes, and are done to the accompaniment of descriptive verses, chanted by the company. The whole act has the Nipponese setting and atmosphere.

Jean Clermont's "Burleske Cirkus" is a real circus. It is a recent importation from Germany. The troupe makes its appearance in the old-time wagon, drawn by a mule. As they reach the center of the stage, a halt is made, the tent is pitched, and the show begins. Clermont takes care of the comedy end of affairs, while the dogs and the military ponies do the serious work. One poodle plays a piano, and another dog sings to orchestral accompaniment.

Brown, Harris and Brown are listed as "Just to Laugh—That's All." Viola Harris wears some stunning gowns, and sings in a way to add much to the act, while Elmer Brown is a vocalist of no mean sort.

While most of the great army of his singing countrymen in Europe are following the mad chase for the bays of the opera stage, Léon Rennay is one of the four or five Americans who are demonstrating to the world at large that the American concert singer is also a factor to be reckoned with. For the past two years this baritone of individual endowment has chosen to identify himself to a great extent with the music life of the Italian cities, where he has won deserved popularity. A few days ago he made Florentine concert-goers acquainted with the "Legend of the Sagebrush" from Massenet's "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame." The French section of his programme also contained a number of Weckerlin's "Bergerettes" and "Pastourelles" and Versepuy's "Sons des Cloches."

While resting before ending her Australasian season with a series of concerts in Western Australia, Nellie Melba has been listening to young singers eager for advice. One result has been still another Melba "discovery," this time a Tasmanian soprano who is such a marvel of "voice, technic, intelligence, temperament and industry" that the great diva is going to take her, in addition to her New Zealand contralto "discovery," back to Europe with her and there supervise her training for a professional career. A few weeks ago Melba laid the foundation stone of the new building for the University Conservatory of Music in Melbourne. She has attempted to stimulate interest in the organization of a permanent orchestra in her native city by offering to donate $500 a year for five years if nineteen others will do the same, but without evoking any response—not because Australians are not musical, we are assured, but simply because the population is not yet large enough to do more than it is doing now "in support of the ultimate refinements of civilization."

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

Sparks Berry is bringing a larger company than usual on this Lambardi tour, and is traveling by special train of fourteen cars. Notices of the organization and its work have, in all cities visited so far, been unusually good.

The repertoire for the week of February 21, at the Mason, may be announced with definite certainty, and is as follows:

Monday, "Gioconda."

Tuesday, "Il Trovatore."

Wednesday matinée, "Gioconda;" Wednesday night, "Lucia."

Thursday, "Madama Butterfly."

Friday, "Faust."

Saturday matinée, "Madama Butterfly;" Saturday night, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci."

It will be seen that Lambardi, in "Butterfly" and "Gioconda," is giving two unusual works, and while the absence of "Boheme" will doubtless be lamented by many, yet royalties and other cruel expenses incidental to an operatic tour must be remembered.

Premier artists of the organization, as developed so far, appear to be Elvira Bosetti and Mme. Adaberto, dramatic soprani; Giuseppe Maggi, baritone; Isabella de Frate and Marina Calvi, lyric soprani; Dolores Frau, contralto, and Attilio Maurini, tenor. A new basso, Antonio Sabellico, will join the company here. He comes direct from Italy.

Ralph Ginsburg.

Young Los Angeles violinist of brilliant powers, who will be heard in recital this week.

Bosetti, Maurini, Maggi, Frau and Sabellico will appear in the opening cast.

The orchestra, under Guerrieri, numbers forty men, and is carried entire.

Ralph Ginsburg, a very talented young violinist, pupil of Arnold Krauss, will be heard in a recital at Simpson Auditorium on Thursday night, with Mrs. Harry Loft as the accompanist.

His programme will include the Max Bruch Concerto in G Minor, the Lalo Symphonie Espagnole, the Schubert-Wilhelmj Ave Maria, Sarasate's Spanish Dance No. 8, and Ernst's Hungarian Airs.

Beginning Monday, there will be inaugurated at Levy's what may be termed the first attempt to import a bit of continental café life to Los Angeles. At that time, Al Levy will start in his restaurant a series of café chantants—a series for which contracts have been made a year ahead.

Five artists have been secured for the entertaining features, besides an orchestra under the leadership of Jacob N. Willey. Edith Helena heads the list. Miss Helena is a prima donna of phenomenal range of voice, and she has sung in most of the grand operas and knows many of the lighter ones. Dare and Wolford are whistling prima donnas, and will furnish a novel act with their bird imitations and duets. Elsa Ward is a soprano of ability. Carl Bravo is a tenor of alleged ability. Señor Galgano is an eminent harpist.

Mr. Levy plans three daily appearances for his company. Every day from 3 to 5:30, he will serve afternoon tea, and the first programme will be given then. There will be a full evening concert, from 8:30 to 10 o'clock and a third after-theater appearance, from 10:30 to 12:30 o'clock.

The Municipal Band, under the direction of Harley Hamilton, will play at Central Park this afternoon, the programme including Friedmann's "Kaiser Friedrich" march, the Raff Cavatina, Albert's "Cherry Intermezzo," the Liszt Second Rhapsody, and a Medieval Dance by Glendon.

Moore's Concert Band, at Eastlake, today will offer a programme including German's "Merrie England," Tobani's "Woman Divine" waltz, Bendix's "A Day at West Point," Yradier's "La Paloma," a selection from Verdi's "Attila," Schubert's "Rosamunde" overture, and Keler-Bela's "The Son of Pusgata."

Archibald Sessions's eighty-third organ recital at Christ Church will take place Wednesday afternoon, with Mrs. Bertha Vaughan as the soloist.

Two novelties on the organist's programme will be Fannie Dillon's Chromatic Prelude, Op. 8, No. 5, and the De Bricueville Etude for pedals alone. Other numbers are the Bartlett Toccata in E Major, the Guilmant Op. 45 Lamentation, and the Buck Op. 22 Sonata in E Flat.

Mrs. Vaughan will sing "With Verdure Clad," from "The Creation."

The Matinée Musical Club will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. L. Allen of No. 2127 West Twenty-ninth place. The hostess will be assisted by Miss Ella Holmes, Ros…

SOCIETY.

AFFAIRS.

party to be given at her home, No. 2249 Harvard boulevard, next Friday. The afternoon is planned in compliment to Mrs. W. McGaan of Cleveland, O., who is spending the winter in this city.

Engagement Announcement.

The engagement of Miss Mary Elliott, daughter of J. M. Elliott, president of the First National Bank of this city, and Williams Richards, who recently came to Los Angeles to reside, was formally announced last week.

Betrothal.

Miss Dorothy Meyer, daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Meyer at No. 105 North Bunker Hill street, is engaged to George Robles, a jeweler of his city. Miss Meyer is an attractive young woman. The wedding will be solemnized in the summer.

Reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Moore Grigg and members of the faculty of the Cumnock School of Expression, entertained yesterday afternoon with a reception.

PAST EVENTS.

Home Again.

Mrs. Harmon D. Ryus and her little daughter, Miss Celeste Nellis, who have been guests during the last few months of Mrs. Ryus's sister, Mrs. Albert Phillips of Seattle, formerly Miss Anna Marie Nellis, who visited here recently, have returned home. Capt. and Mrs. Ryus are settled in their new home at No. 2715 Wilshire boulevard.

Valentine Party.

Mrs. E. J. Kieffer of Roselawn Drive, entertained with a Valentine party Tuesday afternoon. Whist was played and prizes were won by Mrs. Charles T. Reilly, Mrs. J. W. Barr and Miss Meta Eckert. The home was decorated with red hearts, and the place cards were heart shaped and tied with red ribbon. The guests were Mrs. Barr, Mrs. J. A. Crocker, Mrs. E. F. Conway, Mrs. Frank Coan, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. M. E. Diebold, Mrs. William Friederick, Mrs. Fitzsimmons, Mrs. H. V. Hoffman, Mrs. George Kettwig, Mrs. Henry Romer, Mrs. Charles T. Mrs. Kirk Hostess.

Mrs. Harry Dow Kirk of Colegrove entertained with a Valentine musical last evening, the home being gay with hearts and red carnations in honor of the occasion. Mrs. Kirk was assisted by Mrs. B. W. Harper, Mrs. V. Maescher, Miss Luella Smith, Miss Lillian Cox and Mrs. James Lander. An excellent programme was given. Selections were contributed by Miss Lucretia Olcott, Mr. Maescher, Miss Smith, Mrs. Landers, Mr. Kerchoffer, Heber Coleman and Miss O'Connor. A collation was served and many unique games were played.

News from Honolulu.

News has been received from Honolulu of the recent wedding of Mrs. Grace Bannerman, formerly of this city, to Stephen Norton Bobo, a prominent business man of the island. The wedding is the culmination of an interesting romance which began only three short months ago, when Mrs. Bannerman was visiting her sister, who is living in Honolulu. She will be remembered as a talented singer.

Goes to Borneo.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy-Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

One Objection to the Lords.

The great objection to the Lords is not that they occasionally reject Liberal measures, but that they never reject Conservative measures; not that they do one-half of their work too thoroughly, but that they do not do the other half at all. To this it may, of course, be answered that the bills brought forward by a Conservative government are in general so reasonable, so little revolutionary and so much in harmony with popular wishes as to make rejection or amendment unnecessary. But the plea will hardly bear the test of fact. The education bill of 1902, the licensing bill of 1904 were both of them measures that were vehemently resented by a majority of the British people. They were precisely the kind of measures that a strong and impartial second chamber, free from party subserviency and taking the broad, national point of view, would have rejected. The Lords, however, not only passed them, but strengthened some of their most obnoxious features.—[Sydney Brooks, in January Atlantic.

Expense of Compulsory Honesty.

The appropriations made by the Federal government for detective service now mounts into the millions of dollars, the various departments receiving the following amounts this year:

Counterfeiter detectives	115,000
Bureau of Corporations detectives	175,000
Interstate commerce detectives	460,000
Public land detectives	500,000
Anti-trust law detectives	250,000
Pension Bureau detectives	283,000
Meat inspection detectives	3,000,000
Pure food detectives	836,000
Total appropriation for detectives	$7,128,000

Spring Suits

For Misses And Women

$25

THIS Special Offering includes a fine assortment of Spring Suits—unusually strong values at the price. Among them are Black and White Checks, decidedly the most popular effect for the coming season—shown in both plain tailored models and in semi-tailored styles, prettily trimmed with moire collars and buttons, colored pipings, with the new full pleated skirts. Smart braided effects are also shown. Other Suits are in Wide Wale Serges and Light Worsteds—in pretty tans, grays and other shades, as well as in navy.

We have included in this special assortment about 150 of our Imported Models in Fall styles. These garments are all suitable for Spring and Summer wear. They're in handsome Chiffon Broadcloths, Worsteds, Wide Wale Serges and Tweeds. All have Skinner satin linings and the best tailoring throughout. Every garment among these is worth as much as or more than twice the selling price. Be sure to examine them carefully Monday.

Dr. James M. Buckley.

family," he continues. "When women become active in political campaigns and in the administration of the government, religion will suffer. Their exemption from these absorbing responsibilities has secured to women the time, and matured in them the disposition to support the institutions of religion; to attend upon its services, receive its sacraments, teach it to their children, and to maintain a close connection with its members." Nor does this exhaust the contention that woman suffrage will make inroads upon family life. Dr. Buckley goes deepest of all when he says:

"The relation of the sexes is the most fundamental problem of society. The domestic life of its individual members turns upon it, and the increase, and consequently the very existence of population on the earth. Were the race separated into units—universal prostitution, with little or no care or training of children, would be the result. In the civilization represented by Europe and the civilized parts of America, the foundation of society is the family, consisting of one husband and one wife; the contract between them being for life, never to be broken except for extraordinary causes and by the processes of law.

"As marriage is the general law for the race, and is a life partnership 'for better or for worse,' how is it made to cohere? A vital question, for wedlock is a partnership indeed imposing mutual rights, and equal, though not identical, responsibilities.

"Upon these principles and facts I assume that the family is the foundation of the social organization; that it could not cohere without certain intellectual and moral differences between husband and wife. . . . The family is a union of two different manifestations of a common human nature—moulding, governing and guiding the children, each after its own manner, and diffusing through society the blended influence of wife, mother, daughter, sister, and husband, father, son and brother. Such an institution involving two distinct personalities of the same kind, requiring lifelong living together, day and night, would break down under the strain if there were no natural and spontaneous predominating tendency. When the warmth of passion had subsided, the novelty of the relation disappeared, the imperfections of each had become apparent, and the struggles and disappointments of life accumulate, discord would soon arise and each will refusing to bend, the breach would widen and secret aversion or open rupture ensue.

"But the marriage relation does hold together, and by what means? Tennyson answers in the following lines:

Woman is not undeveloped man,
But diverse. Could we make her as the man
Sweet love were slain, whose dearest bond is this:
Not like to thee, but like in difference.

"Man reasons, debates, decides, and the tendency is to his headship. Woman, if she approves, conforms; but if she does not approve, endeavors to modify—not in an authoritative, imperative spirit, but gently, tenderly, persuasively. . . .

"The bearing of these principles upon the relations of wives and mothers to the suffrage is that to govern in the State would unfit woman for her position in the family."

"I believe that there are two objects in nature alike obnoxious—a mannish woman and a womanish man; also in the wisdom as well as the wit of the toast offered at a banquet, a day after Woman Suffrage went into effect in one of the States of the Union: "'The Ladies—Our superiors yesterday, our equals today.'"—[Review by Current Literature.

HOW WE DESTROYED OUR SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

I Will Send Free to Any Lady the Secret Which Cured Me. My Friend Also Delighted.

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, liquids, creams and other rub-on preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse. For weeks I suffered the electric needle without being rid of my blemish. I spent a great deal of money on various things in vain, until a friend recommended a simple preparation, which succeeded where all else failed.

I then advised its use to other friends who found it just as successful

Among them was the lady whose picture is printed in this paper with mine.

This simple remedy enabled us permanently to find entire relief from all trace of unwelcome hair, and forever end our embarrassment. It is simple, safe, sure and can be used privately at home, without fear of pain or blemish. It makes the electric needle entirely unnecessary.

I will tell in detail full particulars to enable other sufferers to achieve the same happy results as we did. All I ask is a 2-cent stamp for reply. Address Caroline Osgood, 742 D. A. Vaughan Bldg., Providence, R. I.

COMIC OPERA.

It Has a Real Future, Says Julian Edwards in a Recent Discussion of Facts and Conditions.

The main feature of the January entertainment given by the Century Theater Club at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Friday afternoon of last week, says Musical America, was the reading of a paper, written by Julian Edwards, on "Comic Opera." Mr. Edwards undertook to illustrate the great differences between the comic opera of the type advocated by him, the opera comique of France, and the so-called musical comedy which has, unfortunately, been identified with this country. Of late years, however, the reaction from the latter has tended to cause some persons to look upon all light music with disdain, he declared.

"We do not despise Moliere because he wrote 'Les Précieuses Ridicules' and other satires and burlesques," observed Mr. Edwards, "nor Cervantes because he wrote hundreds of little farces, nor Shakespeare when he descends to buffoonery to please the groundlings. May it not be possible to turn this form of entertainment into a kind of kindergarten training whereby the musically uneducated may learn to improve their taste, and so be gradually led to appreciate and better to understand the beauties and treasures of the great comic operas, such as 'Die Meistersinger' and 'Falstaff?'

"Unfortunately, many unworthy pieces are produced which have neither music, wit, nor sense in their composition, and whose chief components are slang, bustle, noise and vulgarity. The popularity of these has been a detriment to the better class of works, inasmuch as the unthinking have not discriminated between the two, and consequently both have been tarred by the same brush.

"Some signs point to a brighter state of affairs in the near future, notably the successes of some better productions of late which give indications of growing taste on the part of the public for a higher grade of amusement. Who that has had the privilege of hearing the performances of 'Il Maestro di Cappella,' 'Fra Diavolo,' 'Czar und Zimmerman' and 'La Fille de Mme. Angot' at the New Theater does not feel that comic opera well done is a joy?"

Mr. Edwards gave a brief survey of the higher class of light opera in America, mentioning Reginald de Koven and Victor Herbert as its two leading exponents. Musicians had repeatedly asked him, he said, why he gave so much of his own time to the production of comic operas, and to this he replied that "it was because he had faith in it."

"In the hands of these capable composers the future of American comic opera ought to be safe. The day is about over when it is considered good form to sneer at music produced on this soil.

OUR FIRST NAME.

Origin and the Famous Folk Who Have Borne It.

BERTRAM BERTHA

A name of the epic romances of the Middle Age—How stories of Charlemagne, Roland, the Black Prince and the Crusaders gather about these names—Mild Berchta, who rocked neglected cradles, and brought plenty to the farmers—The names all come from "perchten," which means shining or bright.

By FRANCES MARSHALL.

rtha, Bertram, Berthold, Bertrand, all their variations, belong to the h-filled Middle Ages. About these ies could be woven the great epic iances of such medieval heroes as rlemagne, Roland, William the quéror, the Black Prince and St. ustine. About them, too, could be iered tales of the troubadour's genart, the Crusader's zeal, and the erful medieval church. For their ous bearers in those far away s of mystery and romance were and women who were making ld history.

wo of the earliest of them played g part in the conversion of pagan ope. Bertha was the gentle French cess who, in 590, persuaded her an husband, Ethelbert, King of t, to receive St. Augustine and teachings into England. St. Ber- abbot of Omer, was one of the f workers, about fifty years later, converting the North of France. oung Bertin was a great friend of aissionary in the North, St. Omer; about the year 628, when Bertin only a few years past 20, he set with two companions to aid St. er.

fter a tedious journey the three g enthusiasts found themselves at scene of Omer's labors—in the st of a marshy, flat country, cov- with bulrushes and rank sea- d. Bertin chose a little hillock, r looking than the surrounding s, and there built a small house his companions and himself. Every ning the three young men would and talk to the heathen natives. a short time they won converts, before very many months had sed they converted one of the rich powerful nobles of the land. This gave St. Omer property on which build a monastery. Over 150 con- ts entered this monastery as monks, eventually St. Bertin became its ot.

ertha of Kent was not the only enly woman, and Bertin, abbot of monastery of Omer, was not the man of religion to bring fame to name.

t about the same time that Bertha d in England, Bertrude was the able and popular Queen of Clotaire King of the Franks, and a couple centuries later two other royal thas gained fame in France. One the mother of Charlemagne, Ber- of the Great Foot; the other was rlemagne's sister, mother of Ro- d, whose far-farmed bugle cry in pass of Roncesvalles has echoed n to the present time in story legend.

nother royal Bertha lived in the th century, and was the wife, first Rudolf II, King of Trans-Jurane, rgundy and after his death, of go, King of Italy. She is renowned an excellent housekeeper, and is erally represented with a spinning eel by her side.

. Bertin's fellow-workers who bore name in the Middle Age church e many. St. Bertulf, abbot of Bob- who died about 640, was one of tin's contemporaries, but little is own of him save that he was a verted nobleman of Austrasia.

ive centuries later there lived two er great churchmen of the name, echtold of Engleoerg, who died in , and Berthold, apostle of Livonia, died the following year. The for- was the quiet and learned abbot a Swiss monastery; the latter was warlike and active leader of an ny sent to convert Baltic-bound onia.

erchtold of Engleberg, besides gov- ing his monastery with strictness l wisdom, encouraging the less- rned monks to copy books, and the re learned ones to write them, ned fame in the country round ut for his miracles; it was said t, by blessing a near-by lake, he cked it with fish, which proved a on to the peasants.

erthold of Livonia was the second sionary appointed to that place. alous and brave, he started out at head of an army to convert the athen by force. He was victorious, but at the height of the battle his se became frightened, ran away the midst of the fleeing Livon- s, and Berthold was killed.

ertrand de Goth, who became Pope Clement V. in 1305, and moved the al seat from Rome to Avignon, ance; Berthold of Ratisbon, called weet Brother Berthold," whose out- doors sermons in the thirteenth tury roused fighters for the cru- les; Berthold of Henneberg, arch- hop of Mainz, who on January 4, , established the first censorship of press in history; and Berthold of iemsee, the German bishop who a le later founded a hospital for in- n priests at Saalfeldem—these are ne of the others who have made ir name great in the medieval rch.

great Bertha, too, was revered in early church, but according to oular legend and tradition, she is a ange combination of several living men of the name, of early Chris- n beliefs and customs, and of the pagan goddess, Freya.

ertha, or Perahta, as it used to be, l all the other forms of the name, ne from the old Teutonic word rchten," shining or bright. This rd, followed by tac or naht, day or ht, was used in the early church to ignate Epiphany, the season com- morating the bright and shining r that led the Wise Men to Jeru- em. So these perchten names were en to children born in the Epiphany ason; and the idea of Epiphany was de tangible in the form of Berchta Mild—something between a saint d a goddess.

Like Freya, she watched over the usewives' spinning. She was, the ecial guardian of children, and used steal softly to rock neglected dles, and to care for homeless and endless babies. She watched over farms and brought them plenty; d unless the farmers displeased her, and her troop of children—those o had died in babyhood—wandered er the countryside, Mild Bertha wing and the babies watering the lds.

There were some historic Saint Ber- as, too. One was the wife of Saint mbert, a nobleman of royal French od. Gumbert built a nunnery for wife and her maidens, and him- f retired to a cave on the seacoast, ere he was soon killed by marau- rs. In 690 Bertha herself was rtyred. In 725 another Saint Ber-

California Art Club.

The newly-formed California Art Club held its second monthly meeting at the home of Franz A. Bischoff, No. 126 Pasadena avenue, South Pasadena, on Saturday evening, February 5.

After inspecting the handsome gallery, with the many examples of his work, that forms a part of Mr. Bischoff's studio, the club was called to order for a business session by its president, Frank R. Liddell.

A constitution was adopted similar to that of the Society of Western Artists, so that the club can send its exhibitions over a circuit of cities in California, just as the society exhibits its pictures in the principal cities in the Middle West.

A permanent Exhibition Committee, numbering Messrs. Wendt, Wagner, Bischoff, Borg and Austin, was appointed. This committee has now under way arrangements for securing an exhibition room for the club's forthcoming show, which will probably be given before Easter. While the club has had offers of galleries outside the city, the sentiment of the members is for holding the exhibition in Los Angeles, where all the artists have friends.

Besides Rob Wagner, John Rich of Pasadena has become an active member of the club. The associate members are Messrs. Matern, De Haaff, Miner, Welles and Durand, all of whom joined the club last Saturday night.

The club's next meeting, on Saturday, March 5, will be at the home of A. E. Kilpatrick.

An Omar Relief.

Visitors to the late exhibition of the Architectural League, held in the Hamburger building, will remember with pleasure several photographs of sculptures by Haig Patigian.

Mr. Patigian is a gifted young Armenian, who lives in San Francisco. Recently a fine bit of bas relief from his hands was placed in the bookroom of Mrs. Lee Phillips, Berkeley Square, this city.

Mrs. Phillips is a devoted admirer of Omar Khayyam and his quatrains, and some months ago one of her favorite stanzas was submitted to Mr. Patigian. This bas relief is the happy result.

The sculptor's most notable work is his bronze statue, "Ancient History," which was exhibited in the Paris Salon of 1906. A beautiful reduction of this, entitled "The Head of Iris," is now on exhibition in the northern city. One of his most charming friezes is that in the "storkroom" of the new Bohemian Club building in San Francisco.

ART NOTES.

An exhibition of the works of Detleff Sammann, formerly of Los Angeles, but now of New York, will be held at the Blanchard gallery, beginning tomorrow. The pictures—landscapes, decorations, etc., as well as a number of excellent copies from famous canvases in the Dresden galleries—will be shown in the larger Blanchard exhibition room.

Elizabeth Leicester Waggoner, arts crafts worker and instructor in the School of Art and Design, Garvanza, has had built for her and has just opened a very artistic studio on Thorne street, overlooking the Arroyo Seco. Last Wednesday evening Miss Waggoner entertained a few of her friends at an informal "house-warming."

Melville Chester Findlay and his brother, Berrien H. Findlay, picture dealers from Kansas City, are now in Los Angeles collecting California pictures for their eastern gallery. They deal almost exclusively in American pictures. Melville Chester Findlay will remain here for some months, and will show pictures from his collection at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, in connection with the exhibition of J. F. Kanst.

Marry E. Curran, designer of American color prints," has just issued a very artistic little folder, to be used as a valentine. The design is a silver eucalyptus tree, bending in a February storm of wind and rain—is the design symbolical? Below are four pink hearts, with the letters L O V E on them, each letter being an initial for a line of verse.

Jack Stark stopped in Los Angeles a day or two during the past week, while on his way from San Diego to San Francisco, where he will probably hold an exhibition of his impressionistic landscapes.

In March, Carl Oscar Borg will hold an exhibition of his recent pictures in San Francisco, either at Vickery's or the gallery of the Bohemian Club. Mr. Borg is now busily at work putting the finishing touches to the canvases he will show. His studio is in the Majestic Theater building.

Joseph Greenbaum will go to Paris in a month or two, to remain there till October. He will probably execute an important commission in portraiture before leaving Los Angeles.

Alexander Stirling Calder, whose splendid sculptural work on the new Throop Institute, Pasadena, has been the subject of so much recent comment, has opened a pleasant studio at Croton-on-the-Hudson.

Too Many Laws to Keep.

The mother of little six-year-old Mary had told her a number of times not to hitch her sled to passing sleighs, feeling that it was a dangerous practice. It was such a fascinating sport, however, that Mary could not resist it, and one day her mother saw her go skimming past the house behind a farmer's "bobs."

When she came in from play she was taken to task, her mother saying severely, "Mary, haven't I told you that you must not hitch onto bobs? Besides, you know it is against the law."

Mary tossed her head. "Oh," she said, "don't talk to me about the law. It's all I can do to keep the Ten Commandments!"—[Woman's Home Companion.

A Great Favor.

"So you are the noble youth who plunged into the icy flood and rescued my daughter from a dreadful death?

"Yes, sir."

"And you have come to ask me for a great favor?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have come to ask me to let you marry my child?"

"No, sir. I've come to ask you to let me have $7 until next Saturday night."—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

MAYOR GAYNOR is one of the foremost Bible students in the country, according to Rev. Dr. James M. Farrar of the First Reformed Church of Brooklyn. "I heard Judge Gaynor criticised not long ago for his frequent use of the scriptures in quotation," said Dr. Farrar at a banquet. "I want to say that his familiarity with scripture gives him the right to quote from it. Among theologians who know him the he ranks as a leading authority on the trial of Christ, and as one of the closest students of the Bible in the United States."

John G. Carlise Secretary of the Treasury under the late President Cleveland, who has been ill in St. Vincent's Hospital, in New York, is so much improved, it was said at the hospital, that he is able to be up and to take short exercise in the corridors.

Congressman Frank O. Lowden of Illinois has decided to quit farming. His farm consists of over 1000 acres of high-priced land, besides a large stock of high-grade horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, all being pedigreed. His live stock will be sold first, and enough of the farm retained for a summer home.

Mr. Hauser, who was elected treasurer of the State of New York in 1906, was nominated by the Democratic party on the supposition that he was a German banker, when in fact he was a German baker, says a writer in the Rochester (N. Y.) Express. "Mr. Hauser knew practically nothing about modern business methods; for example, he supposed that if he received a check the proper way would be to send a clerk to one bank to get it cashed and another clerk with the money to another bank to deposit it. He did not understand the mysteries of typewriters and stenographers, nor why letters should be preserved or why replies should be copied, but he did know that the banks were not paying the State enough for the use of the State money, and he lost no time in raising the rate, which was something that his predecessors, better educated and more familiar with business methods, had never done. Mr. Hauser discriminated very sharply between what was right and what was wrong, and did the people of the whole State a real service."

15th ANNIVERSARY SALE OF Nemo CORSETS
INTRODUCING THE NEW LASTIKOPS BANDLET

No 522
$5.00
Nemo
SELF-REDUCING WITH LASTIKOPS BANDLET

A Glorious Success!

IN principal stores, all over the country, women are fast getting acquainted with the greatest corset ever produced, the new Nemo—

Self-Reducing No. 522 with Lastikops Bandlet $5.00

Nemo Corsets have LED for years. In this new model we have outdone ourselves—it is already a glorious success.

Its great new feature, the "Lastikops Bandlet," is semi-elastic, curves closely under the abdomen, and gives such gentle but perfect support from underneath that hips, back, abdomen and upper limbs may be safely and comfortably reduced to a degree you couldn't believe—until you SEE it.

IF YOU WEAR AN ABDOMINAL BELT YOU CAN THROW IT AWAY

The "Bandlet," which is a PART of No. 522, does better work than any separate abdominal belt you could buy at from $5 to $25—fits better, can't slip, is more comfortable; but you get it in this corset with NO EXTRA CHARGE. And it simply won't let the front steels stick out below—not even when you sit down. Think that over!

Other Nemos, for all figures, stout, slender or medium—$3.50 to $10.00.

IN AND ABOUT THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

eorganization in all the schools was order during the week. It is no all matter to plan programmes, and the machinery started for all new pils, who must accustom themselves new conditions, and make acquaint- e with new teachers, and yet, in rly all the schools, by the latter t of the week, things were running smoothly as if no changes had oc- red. "Reorganization was never ore accomplished as quickly and h as little apparent effort, as this nester," said one of the Los Ange- High School teachers. "We are in rs here, at each end of the year," d Dr. Wilson, principal of Olive- eet High School. "Pupils do not h to come here, as a rule, and it is omfort to us to know that they are te as reluctant to leave." This is e, without a doubt. The cramped arters, and meager equipment of Ol- street, is repugnant to pupils, but en they become acquainted with the chers, who seem to make an es- ial effort to endear the pupils to m, and when it is realized that ev- facility is grasped and every pos- ility utilized, a different feeling is gendered, and pupils are really re- tant to leave, even for the better- uipped schools. "We all feel," said principal, speaking for the teachers Olive-street High, "that we have a rticularly bright and active set of idents, this semester; and it is a nuine pleasure to us to know that y may remain with us, and go with to the new Manual Arts High hool." The new students of Olive eet show an especial interest in ath- ics, and while space is limited, it is used to advantage, and there is a t of fascination in trying to trans- m and to create something from ant material. There is also a kind good-fellowship in crowding into se quarters, which seems to draw ople close together in more senses an one.

One of the amusements of the boys Olive street is running around the ck—which means a square and a lf of the steepest uphill in town. y one who walks slowly and breath- sly up this hill, will realize what is exercise of the Olive-street stu- nts means.

Olive-street High has about 475 pu- ls, principally from the grades; but me from Hollywood. A new require- ent at this school, which will help solve the problem, upon which the s Angeles Teachers' Association is ncentrating, is that each pupil shall ke at least one study with the class- om teacher with whom he is en- lled. This will enable that teacher keep more closely in touch with pu- ls, and to learn their requirements as a knowledge of the living conditions of the pupil may be obtained. In the grades, teachers and pupils are more like one family than it is possible to be, in the higher schools, where the large number of students and the fact that they recite to so many different teachers, makes this relation almost impossible. It is with a view of continuing to as great an extent as possible, the closer relation, which obtains in the grades, that the rule as to combining recitation and classroom under one teacher, has been made. "We mean, so far as possible," said Dr. Wilson, "to extend the personal relation between teacher and pupil, to every phase of the student's life, and to make the teacher also the home friend of the pupil. By following up and learning the causes of absence, which often means sickness, either to pupil or some member of his family, and by otherwise becoming better acquainted with the true conditions surrounding the pupils, we hope to do a needed sociological work."

A Lincoln Day programme was given at Olive street on Friday; in commemoration of the birthday (Saturday.) The programme opened with remarks by Mr. Lillard, who always has something good to say; there was a reading by Bertha Wardell, "Captain, Oh My Captain;" an address by Mrs. Gertrude Adams Fisher, "Lincoln at Gettysburg;" "America" and other patriotic songs, by the school. Miss Grant had charge of the programme.

Miss Grant teaches French and history, at Olive street, and always has a method of her own, for whatever she does. She has an original way of expressing herself; never says anything just as any one else would say it; and if she can transfuse this spirit into her teaching, it will be a greater blessing than any impressing of facts; for if there is anything that is needed in life it is originality. She has also an unfailing sense of humor, which is as salt to food. "It is my intention," said Miss Grant, "to arouse individual thought, in teaching history. I try to make pupils not merely learn the occurrences of history, but reason out the causes which led to these happenings."

Miss French, who teaches physical geography at Olive street, has a somewhat unique plan in putting the subject before her students. "I give them first, of course, the construction of the earth, its purely physical surface side of the study, and then follow this up by the chemistry and physics, which apply to the earth, and also the products of the earth. Of course, we study germs," she added, smilingly.

Teachers, principals and pupils of Olive street, are constantly planning and looking forward to the great new Manual Arts High School which will be their home at the opening of the next school year.

Enrollment at Los Angeles High School reached the number of 2341 during the week. And yet by Friday all seemed like old pupils of the school. So completely was the running machinery assembled, and so well fitted together, that one would not have known that new parts had been inserted—in the form of pupils from other schools, and even from outside the city school systems. It must not be forgotten that there is in Los Angeles a constant inpouring of pupils form all parts of the United States, yes, from all the world, and it is no small matter to create an homogeneous student body, from these dissimilar elements.

On Friday, a Lincoln period was given at Los Angeles High School; an excellent programme having been prepared by Dr. Edwards, Mr. McPherron ball emblems occurred, with fitting ceremonies.

Prof. McPherron is at the head of the department of mathematics of Los Angeles High school, and has had his full share in making possible the business career of the many high-school graduates who occupy prominent positions in the city, and elsewhere, for mathematics is at the foundation of all science and all successful business. "So important is this branch," said Prof. McPherron, "that we take it for granted, just as we do the air which we breathe, and I feel that an accurate knowledge of mathematics is as necessary to any successful career, in either business or science, as pure air is necessary to life." Continuing the professor said: "What we undertake to do here is, above all, to teach accuracy. We exact not only correct method, but correct results. It has come to be considered rather old-fashioned in some quarters, to demand that a student shall know not only how to work out a problem, but how to obtain an absolutely correct answer. I have had pupils say, 'I did not get the answer exactly right, but I know how to do it,' as though that were sufficient. My reply is apt to be: 'If you were in commercial work, of course, it would not matter whether your result were correct if you knew the method?' While accuracy is essential in all work where figures are used, it is particularly so in connection with surveying and civil engineering, which studies are very popular with our students. This is illustrated in tunnel work, where it is necessary to bring the work through from both ends, with such precision that they exactly meet. I preach to my pupils that all mathematical work should be as accurate as that work must be." Prof. McPherron believes that accurate work in figures acts, not only as a discipline to the mind, but that by this means, honesty of character is instilled. He makes a fine distinction, too, between work which is not honest, and that which is dishonest; accuracy, not only in method, but in result, he calls honest work. Referring to the comparative progress of girls and boys, he said that girls were, as a rule, quicker at figures than boys, as they seem to have an intuitive faculty which assists in this. Girls, who continue into the higher branches of mathematicism, however, were apt to be exceedingly good, for the reason that their continuance in this line is purely a matter of choice. They do the work because they like it, and so do it well. "We sometimes feel, as teachers, that we pursue about the same methods, from year to year, but when a parent tells us that he is unable to assist his child in mathematics, because it is all done so differently than when he was educated, we realize that we, as well as those in other lines, progress." Prof. McPherron has taught his specialty in Los Angeles High School ever since the time when the Commercial High School was organized. This, as is well known, was the nucleus of the great Polytechnic High School.

Dr. David Starr Jordan gave a talk to the pupils of Los Angeles High School on Wednesday, his theme being the opportunities of today, as applied to young men.

The department of civics at Los Angeles High School, under Miss Anna Stewart, makes a practical study of the affairs of the city. "I find it difficult," said Miss Stewart, "to obtain in text books, what we need in our work; and I wish to tell you that the newspapers are of great assistance to us. I have filed the Midwinter Times for reference upon a number of subjects which are interesting to us in our work and we keep pace with the through the newspapers, as it is reflected there, and there only.

A new division of this department was organized at the beginning of this year under the enthusiastic instruction of A. T. Merrill. The purpose is to study the industrial history and progress of our nation and of our especial locality, and the Coast, with a view to preparing boys for the College of Commerce at Berkeley; and for practical work along lines of large commercial enterprise. It is thought that a thorough understanding of conditions, industrial and commercial upon this side of the United States, will prepare for a better transaction of business not only here, but in connection with Oriental countries which are fast becoming our near neighbors, in business and commerce. The opportunity for such study seems to be appreciated by the pupils of the school.

At Polytechnic the enrollment is 1074 boys, 904 girls. About 200 have come from Olive street, and 102 from the grades. Much musical talent has come in with the new semester, and the teachers in the musical department are busy testing and placing those who wish to qualify for the chorus work. There are about 300 who wish to enter the chorus. A great treat was given the school through this department at assembly on Wednesday, when little Adelaide Goswell, the child pianist—aged 12—gave a recital before the school. The Girls' Glee Club presented the young lady with a pennant of the school, as a token of appreciation.

Miss Edith Jordan, daughter of President David Starr Jordan, is teacher of history at Polytechnic, and a very able teacher, too. She presents to her pupils, not the dry bones of history, by any means, but the living picture of the time under consideration. While she uses a text-book, it plays rather a minor part in her teaching. Archeology, art, architecture, travel, are quite as much a part of the teaching as are dates and occurrences. "I feel that in order to understand history, we must bring to life the people of the peroid studied, and in order to do this, we must be able to grasp the environment of these people. We can best do this by a study of the literature and art of their time. We must know, not only their political happenings, but something of their agriculture, their society, their commerce." Miss Jordan has been an intelligent traveler, and delights to illustrate her talks on history by some incident through which she joins the fact to the place. Last summer, when she was in England, the Budget talk of which now fills the press, had just been introduced, so she heard much local talk regarding this subject; and has been able to bring it before her pupils as a very live issue. During a motor trip through Ireland she was able to see, at close range, this country, which has been an especial study of hers. "There is much hope for Ireland," she said, "and it comes, as I believe, from within Ireland herself, rather than from any outside influence. Ireland has opened her eyes to her own possibilities; she is waking up industrially and is making herself felt politically." Referring to the King, she said: "While he is undoubtedly paramount, socially, the King is of little consequence in the real affairs of England, and can have little effect upon the status of Ireland, politically." So impressive are Miss Jordan's talks upon her favorite subject, history—that 'it is said—her pupils in using her words than the words of the text-book.

At Hollywood High School a debate was held Friday evennig in contest for a debating cup, presented by the Hollywood Board of Trade. The occasion was in celebration of Lincoln's birthday.

The buildings of Hollywood High School are under way and are progressing rapidly.

The Principals' Club, at its last meeting, appointed a committee on professional work, Prof. Housh, chairman. This committee has formulated a list of books which they recommend for the course in reading by the club: 1, "How to Study, and, Teaching, How to Study," by F. M. McMurray; 2, "The Psychology and the Teacher" by Hugo Munsterburg of Harvard; 3, "Social Development and Education," by M. V. O'Shea of University of Wisconsin; 4, "Education for Efficiency," by Charles W. Eliot, ex-president of Harvard University.

The Los Angeles Teachers' Club is arranging to bring out from the East the well-known Shakesperean reader, Mr. Darrach. Tickets will be sold which will enable some outside the club to hear the great reader, and which will, incidentally, help to create a fund for running expenses of the club. There are now about 600 members in the club. The nominating committee will be chosen on February 16, and election of officers will be held on April 5.

THE FLORENTINE

Dande

EVERYBODY CAN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR NOW, and they don't have to wait weeks and months for results either. You will notice marked improvement after the very first application.

Danderine is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the scalp and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. It is pleasant and easy to use—simply apply it to the scalp and hair once a day until the hair begins to grow, then two or three times a week till desired results are obtained.

A lady from California writes in substance as follows:
I have been using your wonderful hair tonic for several months and at last I am now blessed with a wonderful suit of hair that measures over 60 inches in length; the braid is over 5 inches around.

Another from New Jersey:
After using sixth bottle I am happy to say that I have as nice a head of hair as anyone in New Jersey.

This Great Hair-Growing Remedy can now be had at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Dander

EVERYBODY CAN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR NOW, and they don't have to wait weeks and months for results either. You will notice marked improvement after the very first application.

Danderine is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the scalp and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities. It is pleasant and easy to use—simply apply it to the scalp and hair once a day until the hair begins to grow, then two or three times a week till desired results are obtained.

A lady from California writes in substance as follows:
I have been using your wonderful hair tonic for several months and at last I am now blessed with a wonderful suit of hair that measures over 48 inches in length; the braid is over 8 inches around.

Another from New Jersey:
After using sixth bottle I am happy to say that I have as nice a head of hair as anyone in New Jersey.

This Great Hair-Growing Remedy can now be had at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Free To show how quickly Danderine acts, we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this free coupon to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10c in silver or stamps to pay postage.

Judge John J. Crutchfield of Richmond, Va., has a sensible idea of the duty of the court. Moved by the pathos of a boy brought be-fore him charged with having stolen a loaf of bread, which the youngster said he wanted to take to his mother, who was starving, the judge ordered a collection taken up in court for the boy and his mother. Passing around the hat, the bailiff obtained from those present in court the sum of $15, the judge having dropped in a crisp $5 note. The case against Ingram was dismissed.

Years ago Donald Kirk purchased a few acres of land in Oregon adjoining that owned by a hermit. His property did not turn out well, but his neighbor's did. Kirk did him many favors, but finally drifted to California, where he has worked as a woodchopper. In the meantime the old miser died, and, having no living relatives, he deeded his property to Kirk, sending him the deed by letter. After following him around the country and lying in the dead letter office for a period, the deed finally reached Kirk last week at Stockton, a few minutes after he had remove a stump from a piece of land he was clearing.

ar Girls: I know how busy you getting ready for the George Washon benefit entertainment, for I've ld of the lovely decorations you preparing, of the artists who are ake the evening glad with music song; of the old-time Virginia reel the lads and lasses who are less a hundred years old. You are ing with a vim and a zest that acterizes the Each and All spirit, ling so that you may help a little w to help herself and her three ren.

am sure she will appreciate your stance, which is so needed at the ent time. It is a great work to a mother for her children instead tanding off watching the uneven ggle and then later to find homes the children. Especially is the effort worth while when the mother is ely struggling against odds to ide for her fatherless ones, when a little help at this time would e her in a position that would enher to pay her own expenses and the wolf from the door.

had hoped to tell you today that had half the amount raised, but I ot just yet, and there will still be her $100 to gather from the generones.

ltune" tells me that we must have menced the fund in the wrong time he moon, or it would have been ed by this time. If she would only just when the right time would o ask for the finishing touches, I'd lad, for in reading Mme. Canada's I am deeply impressed with the that we should make haste. veral new members have been comed lately into the Each and All iety. For the benefit of the new nbers and some of the former mems who have failed to learn the purse of our work—the key note of ch is our pledge—"to encourage h other," we will state, that the k of encouragement is carried on ough various chapters as well as individuals. The Authors Chapter now arranged for an evening ting the fourth Saturday of each th at Music Hall No. 232 S. Hill et, at which the chairman, Marrite Winnifred, will preside. These tings have many interesting feaes. Any girl under ninety years be a member of this chapter, by sessing a membership card of the ch and All Society.

or the girls who wish to make ry there is the mysterious Order of gy Wugg." A chapter meeting is once in three weeks. The duty of hostess on this occasion is to pree a meal for all who come for the n of twenty-five cents! Talk about enuity; do any of the Each and All girls need a lecture on economical living. Laugh and grow fat! I have noticed the regular attendants at the meetings of the funny chapter are our bravest, youngest and jolliest workers, and yet some of them have silver threads in their tresses.

Our chairman of the Animal Aid Chapter, is ever ready to distribute literature, give talks to societies and schools on any subject connected with humane education. The health chapter has a number of members who are receiving priceless information through correspondence. The chapter for the Study of the Bible is getting ready to resume work again. The Esoteric Study Chapter will soon be in evidence. The Domestic Science Chapter is ready for work through correspondence. The Emergency Chapter, to which all applications for assistance are sent, is one of the best aids to our society.

Any girl may join the Each and All Society by adopting our pledge. Send in your name, address and phone number, to the president, Each and All Society, care of the recording secretary, Mrs. L. Mitchell, No. 345 Clay street, Los Angeles. All contributions should be sent to Mrs. Emily Daniels, treasurer, address the envelope to the president above.

All members of the society are requested to send in helpful letters for this department. Those who are regular contributors may send directly to the editor of the Each and All page. Other letters must be sent to the president.

If each of our members will do her best to encourage the work of the Each and All Society she will never regret it, for we each build our own character by that which we give to society, not by that we receive. This work is just what each of us wishes it to be; what we give to it of time and talents for the encouragement of each member, we give gladly and lovingly. If you are a member of the Each and All Society, one of those who are starting "songs and not complainings," you do not need to be reminded of these beautiful truths, but, if, on the other side, you are reaping no particular benefit from your membership, stop and ask yourself if you are one who sits down and expects "your own to come" to you. What are you giving any way, for your membership? Are you encouraging any one? Are you writing letters for the page or interested in the chapter work? Are you a member of any chapter? Do you attend the "at homes" of the society? Do you tell the president what you could do to help along any live endeavor that would further the interests of our work? Our year is half gone and we have not accomplished all that we set out to do. Will you help now? Lovingly,

ARIEL.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another."

Monthly Meeting.

A goodly number of members were present at the general meeting of Each and All Society held Wednesday afternoon in Mammoth Hall, with President Ariel in the chair. Reports from chairmen of the several chapters were read, and these were followed by a discussion of matters of interest pertaining to the work of the society.

It was announced at the meeting that a George Washington benefit performance, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Mme. Canada fund, will be given Friday evening, February 18, at 8 p.m., in Symphony Hall. The evening's entertainment will close with an old time Virginia Reel, in which the audience will be invited to participate. Several well-known artists have volunteered their services for the benefit. The meeting closed with the "Penny March" and the recitation of mottoes and appropriate quotations.

Mrs. M. J. P. has become interested in the case of Mme. Canada, and sends a contribution toward the fund, she writes:

"Accept inclosed order as an offering to Mme. Canada fund. If it comes too late to join the other dollars for passage fare, it may be useful to her upon her arrival here. I am heart and soul with you in a purpose to keep together a good mother and her children. I hope the day is near when this brave sister with her little daughters may dwell among us, here in our beloved city. No doubt the little girls will have the same conclusions about our abiding place as did a little girl of my acquaintance who lived here a year. She was not anxious to leave Los Angeles, and I wanting to know a child's reason to wish to remain here asked her. With marked decision she replied—'Why I could live here forever, because I can play out of doors all the time.' This then was the greatest tribute a child could pay to Los Angeles.

"I am not a member of the Each and All Society, but have followed with interest its progress through its printed page in Sunday issues of The Times since its call into existence some four years ago in an eastern city, thus I hardly feel a stranger to you all. Its name, Each and All, attracted me, being so widely applicable in its meaning. You, me, thou, the universe, called to band together into a unit of helpfulness to better answer the question of long ago of 'where is thy brother?' than it was answered by, 'am I my brother's keeper?'"

ABOUT SONG-WRITING.

Advice to Each and All Girls by One Who Has Had Success as a Writer of Songs.

In the introductory remarks to a series of lessons on song writing, which is being prepared for the Each and All writer girls of the Saturday Evening Chapter, Mrs. Sarah Haggard Payne, the author of a score of published songs, who is writing these lessons, gives the following words of advice and inspiration to aspiring song writers, as well as a few words of admonition, which are reproduced on the Each and All page in the hope that a wide interest in song writing may be aroused among the literary members of the society. Mrs. Payne writes:

"To begin, we will quote Davy Crockett: 'Be sure you're right and then go ahead.' Composers are born. Ask your Creator to let you know yourself, and if He tells you that you are a song writer do your best to perfect yourself.

"Not all singers are composers. Many singers delude themselves in thinking that they can compose songs. It is sinful for parents to encourage children to follow music as a vocation if they have not a God-given gift for it. They listen to the flattery of their friends, and lo, a ruined life. Woe unto the ones who try to travel the road of song writing, who do not belong there. To them it will be full of thorns and tears, and finally they will fail, broken-hearted. A rose is made to be a rose; to try to change it to another flower would mean disaster. It is easy for a rose to grow to perfection, but it is impossible for it to grow into a lily. If this word prevent any from making a sad mistake, it is well.

"Song writing is a beautiful journey to those who belong to that road. If we can start any true artist on his way, we shall be glad. Born composers will find thorns and tears along the road, but they will ride over them. The sharpest thorn they will encounter will be jealousy, but this need not trouble them. It is a sure sign of real genius. Many will condemn a writer's songs who cannot sing a song, much less compose one. Ignore such.

"Many who discourage one are geniuses who are Christless. They keep company with the green-eyed demon, Jealousy. If one takes one's songs to these and asks their judgment, merit will not count with them if they see a hope of discouraging one, for it means their keeping ahead in the race.

"One of these fine critics will coldly request you to sing your songs, and you sit down to the instrument with your heart chilled by their manner, and try to sing. Rising, when through, you struggle to look brave. They open the door with a cruel look of "Next." You swallow your fright and gasp, 'How did you like them? Will they do?'

"They answer, 'Our time is limited for such things.'

"You whisper, 'Oh, please tell us.'

"'Oh, they will do for amateurs. No tone. No finish. You need instruction. Have you ever studied harmony?'

"The last critic that inquired of us the name of our instructor in harmony, heard this: 'My first and best teacher, madam, is the creator of all harmony—God.'

"She gasped, 'Well.'

"We knew we had a right to travel on this road, so turned neither to the left or right. We saw the vision.

"Though you think the approval of critics determine your success, you do yourself an injustice to go to them. Truth, greatness, will rise in spite of downfalls.

"We, who have gone through the mill, say: 'Fear not. They are only big scarecrows, and perfectly harmless ones—these critics. Can other roses hinder any rose from being a rose. We have not gone far on this enchanted road, but still we have composed, published and sold many songs, and of the many discouragements which we have encountered, we say, they are merely ghostly shadows.

"Get good teachers to train you, but do not ask them to tell you if you are a genius—ask God that question. If you are a genius in this line, discouragements will prove stimulants to push you on. If you have seen the vision of your song, nothing can discourage you. If you doubt the vision, ask Fanny Crosby, and others. The blind are truly visionary."

. . . .

"We stood and looked at the sun setting in the ocean one day, and it made a golden path across the waters, and we exclaimed, 'A golden road to a golden prize.' This is the pathway of music.

"Yet, all roads leading the soul upward are golden roads. They may not show the golden gleam, nevertheless the gold is there, so one should be satisfied whatever may be the road on which life has placed one to travel.

"Music is a silver boat with oars studded with diamonds, fringed with sunbeams. The pearl oars keep time to the joy within the soul. Gladly one submits to the will of the boat as it bounds over the waves or rocks one to sleep in its arms. Whether it brings laughter or tears, one is satisfied. On and on one sails up this golden path, fanned by the breezes of hope. Sometimes the boat is tossed by storms, but no matter—the golden prize is ahead. On and on, until one hears the white-winged angels singing one's glad songs as they welcome one home to the life that is an eternal and infinite song.

"Rock away, rock away,
In my silver boat;
Be it sunshine, be it shade,
Let it toss or float;
Still my heart, in joyous rhyme,
Beats to heaven's mystic time,
Golden every note.
Rock away,
Rock away."

SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

Echo from the February Meeting of Los Angeles Branch—A Sunshine Scholarship Endowed.

State headquarters with the president of the Los Angeles branch, and the State organizer, Mrs. William Wallace McLeod, No. 403 South Garfield avenue, Alhambra. Los Angeles headquarters for donations, with Mrs. H. B. McKinney, No. 2203 Budlong avenue. Monthly meetings on the first Thursday at 2:30 p.m., with Mrs. Grace Geldreich, No. 438 Westlake avenue. Motto:

"Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on!
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on!
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
'Til in heaven the deed appears,
Pass it on!

The last meeting of the Los Angeles branch of the International Sunshine Society was a very important one, as several fine things were accomplished, and reports of the chairmen of committees were most encouraging.

The Year Book chairman, Miss Jessie M. Flint, turned in to the treasurer, $559 from the sale of the Sunshine Year Book. She reported that the new edition of 10,000 was being rushed by the printers, as hundreds of orders are on file from the bookstores, whose proprietors have been most kind in helping the sale of the little books. It is hoped that the Easter sale of the books will equal the Christmas sale.

The chairman of the Investigating Committee reported that thirty-two cases had been investigated since December 2, and of these, twenty-one had been given the aid required, while the others had been turned over to charitable organizations of the city, under whose jurisdiction they properly came; as "Sunshine" means to do the work that no other society is doing. The society voted $20 to a deserving widow—with three little children, two of whom have been very ill for weeks, with pneumonia. The money went for her house rent for two months.

The Visiting Committee's chairman gave a full report, showing that the "good cheer" calls have been faithfully made.

The chairman of the Maternity Home Sunshine Room, gave an excellent report of the work. Material for night gowns was purchased and turned over to the new chairman of the Sewing Committee, Mrs. Meyner, whose committee composed of the following ladies, will make it up: Mmes. G. H. MacGinnis, Emma Gillingham, E. B. Crowder, Crooker, E. M. Deardorff, Ida B. Preston, E. F. Tucker, Thomas Pascoe, B. Fry, Wilson, Burdick, E. L. Eno, Pickney, Reed, Moselle, A. E. Wallace Leonard, Edwin MacGinnis, and Misses Virginia Johns and W. Auld.

The chairman of the Wheel-chair Committee reported the purchase of five new wheel-chairs, and after hearing of the needs of the "shut-ins," the branch voted her money to buy another chair, making twenty-nine, owned by the Los Angeles branch. Three baby carriages are also on hand, to be loaned to mothers needing them. An offer of baby clothes from the "Bona Fide Club" was gratefully accepted.

Mrs. Florence Collins Porter, had written the Sunshine Society two letters in regard to a Sunshine scholarship in the McKinley Boys' Home. After discussion, it was moved, seconded and carried that the Los Angeles branch endow such a scholarship, to be paid for quarterly, and the treasurer was instructed to send a check to Mrs. Porter in payment of the first quarter. This was very satisfactory to the many Sunshiners who are especially interested in little children. To brighten the lives of children means to give strength and courage to the men and women of the future.

The executive board meeting of the Los Angeles branch, will meet hereafter on the third Wednesday morning of each month, instead of the third Friday, with Mrs. James Fox, No. 2801 La Salle. Members will please bear in mind the change of date.

The chairman of the Hospitality Committee, Mrs. G. M. MacGinnis, assisted by her committee and Miss Kizzie Lewis, gave two delightful Whist parties Thursday evening and Friday afternoon of last week, at the Hotel Trenton. Between games, Sunshine matters were discussed and some new members gained for the work. The treasury was also enriched.

The "Sunshine Glee Club," composed of members of the Golden Poppy branch, and the Alhambra Happiness Branch, met for practice yesterday afternoon at the home of the director, Mrs. Cleone D. Bergren, No. 417 South First street, Alhambra. The Flower and Visiting committee of the two branches, have been doing excellent work, the past two weeks. Many kindnesses have been shown the stranger, the sick, and the "shut-in."

A letter from Gardena has been received by the organizer, asking aid in the forming a Sunshine branch among the young girls of the Sunday-school class there. Such letters are most encouraging for Sunshine work among the young, means "Sunshine" all along life's highway, for the habit of love and helpfulness once established, grows with the passing of the years, and sweetens all the experiences of life, not only for "Sunshiners," but for all with whom they come in contact. After all, it is so easy to smile and be helpful, if we only think of the need of Sunshine.

"I know that love is never wasted,
Nor truth, nor the breath of a prayer,
And the thought that goes forth as a blessing,
Must live as a joy in the air."

The Placeless Girl.

Would it not be wise for mothers raising young daughters to place some responsibility upon them so that the girls would not be called—as the following article names them—"The Placeless Girl?" with nothing more serious to do than to fritter away their precious youth, and yet, as the writer says: She seems to be occupying a large amount of space and even more attention when she comes home in a beribboned crowd from a football game between her school and a rival school. With flushed cheeks and laughing lips, she catches and holds the eyes of mothers, who pass and smile; of fathers, who inflate with pride at her prettiness; of old men who grow reminiscent, recalling other roses and other wind-tossed tresses, and of old women who look regretfully at what they have lost or revel tenderly in the young, gay life.

She is a bit noisy, a trifle pert, perhaps; yet she is young and fresh and happy. But is she not largely scant in her value? Away down in the corner of her heart does she not realize that she has no definite place, no real responsibility in the social scheme? She knows her clothes are made for her by her mother or under her mother's direction; she knows that her presence in the kitchen is required only when the uninteresting dish-washing needs to be done. She realizes that at school she is accessory, rather than the essential interest; she remembers that the principal made a long speech day before yesterday about the duty of the whole school, particularly the girls, to attend the ball games and so encourage athletics. So she has come gladly, bringing her shrill young voice and several yards of ribbon to assist at the triumph. She has decorated a victory which was not particularly meanful to her, and if she stops to think she sees herself again just a side issue, a non-essential. Perhaps she has accepted the condition because it is so usual as not to be remarkable, and has satisfied herself partially with the so-called frivolous interests that girls of her age take up for very lack of something else to do.

It is not entirely her fault that she spends a lot of time dreaming about how large she can wear her hair ribbons without being ridiculous or how long she can induce her mother to make her next dress.

She has tried to learn to buy her

CHARLIE'S VALENTINE.

ECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

At one end of a crowded suburban ain headed for Los Angeles sat an kward boy of 17. He had light hair d clear blue eyes, which at the prest moment were searching a small rd. Yes, there it was, "Mrs. James Wood, No. 1142 Western ave., Los ngeles," and turning the card over read, "Miss Mabel Hamell, No. 1904 . Andrews Place." He slipped it ck into his pocket with a little gh, and a feeling of great satisfacon.

Charlie Wood was a very ordinary dividual, a citizen of a small town, zusa; he was on his way to his nt's, his uncle having been called t of town on an unexpected busiss trip, and, not wishing to leave s wife alone, had sent for his phew.

It was with great anticipation that gazed out of the window, and as e telegraph poles went whizzing , and the hazy, smoky city loomed in the distance, the blood rushed rough his veins, and a feeling that was really going to see a part of is great world made his head swim. hen, too, the thought that perhaps might see Mabel once more set his eart thumping against his shirt boom, until it sounded to him like the eat of a bass drum. Mabel was old- , yes, but that didn't matter. She d her mother had spent two whole mmers in Azusa. That was when ey were summer boarders at the Woods," and during that time Charlie d learned to know Mabel in a very timate way, and sometimes she sent m postals, beautiful views of the city ward which he was now going. nce she sent a letter. This was the ide of his life. It was placed in the ack of his Bible, and almost considred sacred.

Today was the thirteenth of February, and tomorrow would be St. alentine's Day. "Why not send her valentine?" But just at this critical oment the train stopped with a rk and the conductor called out Los Angeles."

Charlie came back to earth with a ounce, and before he realized it, he as being carried along with the hrong of people who all seemed to be n a mad rush—somewhere. It was in he air, and he, too, soon caught the ever, and was pushing and hurryng along with the rest.

He had once read in a magazine bout a boy who sent violets to his best girl" on Valentine's Day, and he idea appealed to him strongly. Why not sent Mabel violets tomorow?" As he turned the corner in earch of a florist's, a very attractive shop window drew his attention. He topped a moment to look at the fasinating Japanese curios. There a little lace handkerchief caught his ye. "The very thing"—he would just lip that in with the violets; it would make his gift a little more substanial, he thought, so he stepped in and urchased it.

Next to the handkerchiefs were the coveted violets. The shop was in the center of a large block, so he decided to cross, and was just half way over when the "honk, honk" of a large touring car sounded just behind him. It startled him so, that it was all he could do to scramble back to the curbing, and in his confusion his hat had fallen off and was sailing up the street. He tore after it, dodging motorcycles and autos, and finally rescued it, just as it was about to drop into a sewer. He was blushing to the roots of his hair, and it seemed to him that the eyes of the whole world were turned upon him. He placed his rather dilapidated looking hat firmly on his head, and started out once more. This time, he waited at the corner until the road was clear, and thus made a successful crossing.

As he entered the florist's, a charming girl came up to him. Her rosy cheeks and sparkling eyes so dazzled him that when she said, in a very bewitching manner, "Is there anything I can do for you, sir?" poor Charlie almost forgot what he wanted, but he managed to stammer out clumsily: "Do you—er keep—er violets, ma'am?" "Yes, I think so," and taking a large tray from the window, she laid them on the counter before him. "How many bunches would you like?" she asked, smiling up at him. "Well—er, I don't exactly know; how many do they usually get—it's for a Valentine, you see," he said, a little bashfully.

"Oh, six bunches would make a lovely box, and I'll put some maidenhair ferns in, too. Now, when do you want these sent—and the name and address, please," she said, taking out her order book. Charlie handed her the precious card and she wrote down, "To Mrs. James P. Wood, No. 1142 Western ave.," and then handed it back with a "Two dollars, please." Charlie had not expected it to be quite so much, but he brought forth from the depths of his pocket the even change, and lifting his hat, he left the store.

Once outside he pulled out the address, and with it came a little package, the handkerchief. Of course, he had forgotten it, as clear as a whistle. Back into the store he plunged, and in his haste, he just escaped knocking over a large palm which stood on a pedestal near the door, but fortunately for Charlie, the little sales girl rescued it, and turning to him said, in the same composed manner: "Did you forget something, sir?" Charlie, more confused than ever, handed her the package. "Can you put that in with those violets, please?" "Certainly, but aren't you going to leave any name?"

"Oh, no, she'll know who they're from," he hesitated, and besides, its a valentine. Then, backing out of the door before she had time to answer him, he disappeared in the crowd and was soon on his way to No. 1142 Western avenue.

The next morning Charlie got up early, and after he had dressed, stepped out on the little porch adjoining the room which he occupied. He was wondering when Mabel would get the violets and what she would think, and most of all, wishing that he breakfast. Charlie and his aunt were still steated at the breakfast table when the doorbell rang, and presently the maid placed a large lavender box in front of Mrs. Wood, who looked very much surprised. She carefully untied the box and lifted the cover; the sweet odor of the flowers scented the room. "Violets," she cried in dismay. "How perfectly lovely, and this beautiful handkerchief, too. Oh, you dear, sweet boy, it was just like you to think of your aunt, and it's Valentine's Day."

Poor Charlie's heart sank to the very soles of his shoes. What could he do but make the best of it. Then it all flashed across his mind. "That card. She had read the wrong side!"

These Beautiful Children Will Represent Prominent Characters in the forthcoming Passion Play. The little girl will play the part of the First Angel, while Ronald will have the character of Isaac.

BROTHER AND SISTER.

Miriam and Ronald Woodward, Who Will Take Part in the "Passion Play" Next Month.

Miriam Woodward of this city is really a very wonderful little girl. She is remarkable in appearance and disposition. Because of her great beauty she has been chosen to represent the first angel in the "Passion Play," which will be given at the Auditorium about the middle of next month.

Although Miriam is only a mite of a girl, who has just passed her twelfth birthday, she is a great student. She is of a very serious disposition and only the deep, serious things of life interest her. The little girl has made a careful study of the New Testament, and is now writing a play which will be a story of the life of Christ. Many people think Miriam bears a striking likeness to Hofmann's picture of the boy Christ, as He stood in the midst of the doctors teaching seven acts, the little girl says, and will portray all the great scenes in the life of the Master. She is anxious to play the leading part. As first angel Miriam will first appear as she delivers the prayer. She will next appear in the Garden of Paradise, then in the Garden of Olives, where she offers the chalice, at the sepulcher, and later at the Ascension.

Miriam says she is very much interested in Ibsen, her favorite of his plays being the "Doll's House." She is a great favorite with Nazimova, the noted actress who appeared here last year in the Ibsen plays. Mme. Nazimova was attracted to the little girl on the streets, and they became fast friends. Miriam was the guest of Madame on several occasions during her engagement here.

Miriam says that one of the reasons why she likes Ibsen is because the plays, she thinks, favor woman's suffrage. The little lady is really wise for her years, for she says she does not only want the privilege. They do not like to be told they cannot do this or that. She thinks they will not bother to vote at all when the right is once granted them, for she added: "I think it would be an awful bore to be obliged to vote," and this little lady is decidedly in favor of woman's suffrage.

Miriam has never been to school, all of her studies having been pursued at home. She already speaks French and German, and plays the piano very well.

Ronald Woodward is the little seven-year-old brother of Miriam. He is a dear, delightful boy, a born comedian; none of the serious problems for Ronald; he is fairly bubbling over with merriment. He and his sister, although different in temperament, are very close friends. They plan their own games and stage little original plays of their own at home.

The two children will be remembered as having started a prayer campaign during the last Presidential election. They were on opposite sides of the fence. Miriam got all her friends to pray for her candidate and Ronald enlisted his friends to do the same. Ronald will also have a part in the "Passion Play." He will represent Isaac, who is offered in sacrifice. These clever children are the son and daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Sherman Woodward. Their father is in charge of the electrical engineering department at the University of Iowa. Mrs. Woodward is wintering in the city, her home while here being at No. West Forty-sixth street.

MOTHER COYOTE'S TALES.

Story of the Bows and Arrows—Why Coyotes Never Sleep While the Stars Shine.

BY MARGARET ADELAIDE WILSON.

In the beginning, said Mother Coyote, man and the animals all lived and talked together as one family. Then most of the earth was water, but there was a round island in the middle where all but the fishes had their dwelling.

Owl and Gopher were the first to fall out.

The next to fall out were Coyote and Bear. Coyote, our very great grandfather, was the cleverest of all the animals. In those days he walked on two legs like a man, or on four like the animals, just as it pleased him. And he was the friend of man, talking with him and giving him wise advice when he needed it. But Bear, though he was big and strong, was very stupid, and it made him angry when Coyote teased him and laughed at him. Then he would revenge himself by stealing the manzanita berries Coyote had gathered for himself.

So it went with the others too. Man was the only one who did not quarrel. He walked always on two legs and went his own way and did what pleased him.

The Old Man Who Sits Above in the Chair of Stars looked down on the world, and was sad when he saw how these creatures were quarreling.

"What can I do?" he said to himself. "They are getting to hate each other more and more. Each one wants to be first."

Miss Constance Hoyt.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Another American hostess will be added to the diplomatic circle in Washington by the marriage of Miss Constance Hoyt, daughter of Henry M. Hoyt, counsellor of the Department of State, and Mrs. Hoyt, and F. von Stumm, third secretary of the German embassy. The engagement of Miss Hoyt and Mr. Von Stumm has just been announced. No date has been set for the wedding, but it probably will be in the spring.

Through the marriage of Miss Hoyt Mr. Von Stumm's family will welcome an American bride for the third time in as many generations. Mr. Von Stumm's mother was Miss Pauline von Hoffman of New York, who was known for her beauty, and his grandmother was a Miss Grimes of Staten Island. He has been attached to the German embassy staff several years and is one of the most popular young men in the corps. He rides with the Chevy Chase hunt.

He stipulates in return that the city erect to his memory a monument with a suitable inscription acclaiming him the originator of municipal life insurance.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

DR. KARL KUMM of Germany has just accomplished a remarkable missionary journey across Africa, traveling over a thousand miles through a section of the country never before visited by a white man through hostile tribes having a bad reputation for cannibalism. Some of these tribes he describes as very powerful. For instance, the Mooqui tribe, which numbers from 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 persons. He traveled absolutely unarmed, and was unmolested during the journey.

George Compere of Sacramento has started for China as the agent of the State Horticultural Department, to gather insect enemies of some of the fruit pests. He takes with him a large amount of these pests, so that experiments may be conducted in China. This is Compere's second trip to that country for the State. Several million of the bugs he brought back with him a few weeks ago are now being acclimated in the State insectory before being turned into the fruit regions.

Prof. Herschel C. Parker of Columbia University has announced his intention of ascending Mt. McKinley, in Alaska, during the month of April. He will be accompanied by Belmore H. Browne of Seattle. They will attempt the peak from the northern angle. One theory he wishes to settle is whether the temperature at the summit of Mt. He brings back with him 4000 specimens for the museum's Filipino collection, among which are the 1000 specimens gathered by Dr. William Jones, who was murdered by the head hunters last April. The only injury he suffered during this trip was to his health, which is reported much weakened by his experiences among the savages. When his specimens are arranged the Field Museum will have the largest Filipino collection in the world.

PRODIGIES, PECULIARS.

SIDNEY COHEN, four-year-old child of Max and Fanny Cohen of New York, plays on the piano practically any tune he hears. He has never taken any music lessons, but with his fondness for music has apparently "absorbed" the piano. He first displayed his musical genius about a year ago, and recently his fondness for the piano has become so great that frequently his parents are awakened in the night by the piano and find the boy, eyes closed, playing an air he has heard at a musical comedy. The majority of the pieces which the youngster plays are Yiddish airs, because he has gone mostly to the Yiddish theaters, but recently in the parlor of his home he climbed up on the piano stool and, with his feet dangling about eighteen inches above the pedals, he played "Rings on Her Fingers," "The Merry Widow" waltz, and several other American and ragtime airs.

Edward P. Weston, the pedestrian, is reported to spend much of his time in a New York broker's office when not on one of his walking tours. By making practical use of his Wall street knowledge he has been more than ordinarily successful in his speculative ventures.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

BRIG.-GEN. JAMES ALLEN has been reëlected chief signal officer of the army.

Capt. Thomas F. Lyons, Marine Corps, stationed in the Philippines, and Capt. Frederick M. Estlick, Marine Corps, on recruiting duty at St. Paul, have both been ordered before a retiring board at Washington. Capt. Lyons has heart trouble, and Capt. Estlick did not comply with requirements of the physical test order.

Capt. Herman W. Schull, Coast Artillery Corps, who is serving his second detail in the ordnance department, has been appointed to fill the vacancy in the grade of major in that department by the retirement of Lieut.-Col. Ormand M. Lissak. The vacancy in the grade of captain in the ordnance department made by the advance of Capt. Schull will not be filled till July 1.

Capt. Joseph C. Castner, quartermaster, has been ordered to assume charge of construction work in Honolulu, and of the army transport service at that port, relieving Capt. Moor N. Falls, quartermaster.

Health and Beauty Aic

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Mrs. Ruth O.: There can be no possible excuse for a woman of your age neglecting her complexion. It is a duty you owe yourself to look as youthful and charming as possible. I would not encourage you to use face powder; it rubs off too easily, shows too readily and does no permanent good. The use of a good lotion made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in half a pint of hot water and adding two teaspoonfuls of glycerine will take away that coarse, sallow, oily look to your skin and make it soft, pink and youthful. This lotion is an excellent beautifier and whitener and will last longer than powder. It is splendid for cold sores, freckles, pimples and preventing chapping in the winds.

M. L. T.: Your case is by no means a hopeless one. Many people, like yourself, are troubled with dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair, due to a germ disease of the scalp. This can easily be corrected by using a quinine hair tonic made from one ounce quinzoin dissolved in one-half pint alcohol, then adding one-half pint cold water. Brush your hair thoroughly and rub this tonic twice a week into your scalp and it will do wonders for you. It will promote a vigorous growth of hair and keep it glossy and from becoming coarse and the ends splitting. Do not scratch the scalp with the finger nails. Use a brush to remove the loose dandruff.

Jennie W.: To hold your own in society or business, you must feel right as well as look right. If you get rid of the languor or "always tired out" feeling you complain of, you are almost certain at the same time to be freed from the pimples, blotches and sallow complexion. A clear, smooth and soft skin is impossible when the blood is impure or deficient, the digestion faulty or the liver inactive. A good general system tonic is made as follows: Get from your druggist one ounce of kardene and one-half pint of alcohol. Dissolve the kardene and a half teacupful of sugar in the alcohol and add enough boiling water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful before each meal and on retiring. This tonic acts beneficially upon the stomach and liver, helps to assimilate your food and throw off the impurities in the system, thus striking at the very roots of a sickly, pimply complexion.

Constance: Right now is the best time of the year to get rid of those facial blemishes, such as freckles, tan, skin pimples, etc., which come to us during the summer time. But you should not use soap on the face very often, as the skin dry and hard. I recom use of a good greaseless face which can be made by dissolv ounce of almozin (get it at an gist's) in one-half pint cold wa add two teaspoonfuls glycerin and let stand an hour or so. It pensive and you will find its use will improve your skin won It keeps the skin soft and satiny, and moist. Almozin cream jelly and soothing cleanser and will blackheads, premature wrinkles a used as a massage cream will color to dark, sallow skin.

Mrs. E. S.: You will not need your glasses constantly if you w your eyes with a good, strengthe tonic. Dissolve an ounce of cry pint of water and drop one or t in each eye daily. This tonic strengthening to tired, weak and eyes, and will make your eyes c sparkling. It is fine for granula lids and does not smart the ey will find it very soothing.

Mrs. P. B. E.: It is very ea seen that you are entirely too st your height, and your superfluo must be a great worry to you. though you have tried so many ducing remedies that did no good you to try this formula. It has great many and is harmless. Bu drug store four ounces parnotis solve it in a pint of hot water. tablespoonful before each meal fo weeks, and I am sure you will be with the results.

A. F. L.: Soap should never on the hair. It does more har good. It causes light streaks in brittleness, and leaves the scalp h dry. If you wish to have your h bright and healthy, let soap and ready-prepared shampoos alone. shampoo costs no more than a p The most reliable shampoo I ha used is made by dissolving a tea of canthrox in a cup of hot wate shampoo cleanses the hair and sca oughly, and leaves the scalp fre tic and free from any irritation. I the hair soft and lustrous. C makes a particularly fine shampo the winter month, as it dries You can buy canthrox from you gist or get a canthrox shampo most any first-class hairdresser's.

REDERICK NIETZSCHE.

ce at the General Ideas at the tem of This Philosopher's Writings.

IL less than a dozen years ago edrick Nietzsche, German philoso- her, was little more than a name rica—a name mysterious and and wedded, somehow, to con- f anarchy, indecency, egomania, re beer-drinking and other im- ings. Jokers used it to scare professors; by the lady critics literary monthlies it was never ned; even professional Ibsenites g loudly for the repeal of the ommandments,) fought shy of 1 the few hardy immoralists, tually wrote it down augmented arthly flavor by spelling it more ically every time, going from and Neitzy to Nitsche, Neitshe, , Nittse, Nizttsche, Neatsshe, and Neiextzschel.

The Nietzsche raphies, now as long as yard tell the story of his rise very cally. Before 1895 but half a books referring to the new phil- were published in all Europe, actically all of these were writ- personal friends. But toward the the 90's, eulogies in octavo and iations in quarto began to ap- n all sides, and ever since then ietzsche literature, in France ermany, has been growing like vast scholastic fungus. The in which Nietzsche died, at Wie- ow shelters, indeed, a very re- ble library of commentaries.

for sometime after the philoso- death, those persons who had e language, and that our noble h tongue, continued to grope mainly, for the Nietzsche litera- n English, compared to that in n and French, not to say in n, Spanish, Italian and Danish, ed as a wart to Ossa. Back in e Macmillans, true enough, had to print a translation of Nietz- books, but it languished after volumes were issued, and those did not give a connected no- f his ideas. The translations lumsy; there were no satisfac- otes; the gaps in the series d like fathomless abysses.

901 the same publishers offered ing better. It was a brief but—a university founded with the deliberate purpose of combatting academic inertia and always faithful to that mission. Miss Dolson's little book won her a doctorate and helped lift the fog from Nietzsche, but it was addressed chiefly to serious students, and so it made no impression upon the lady critics, the Chautauqua lecturers and the woman's clubs. Upon its heels, however, came other books, less scholarly, but of wider appeal, and soon they formed a one-foot shelf. Most commendable among these was Henry L. Mencken's, "Philosophy of Frederick Nietzsche," published by John W. Luce and Company, Boston. Written in a vigorous, fearless manner, this book I recommend as an introductory study to any one about to read Nietzsche. Now, after long waiting, comes a complete and satisfying translation of Nietzsche's own writings, well edited, well printed and low in price.

The publisher is T. N. Foulis of Edinburgh and the editor is Dr. Oscar Levy. The translations have been framed out to half a dozen assiduous Nietzscheans—Helen Zimmern, J. M. Kennedy, Anthony M. Ludovici, Thomas Common and Dr. W. A. Haussmann among them—and each volume has an illuminating introduction, sometimes by other experts. The series, when it is completed, will make eighteen volumes, and will include two or three volumes of postumous notes and the philosophers's startling autobiography, "Ecce Homo." So far, eight volumes have been issued. Five more will follow this spring, and the remaining five in the autumn.

Well, then, what has Nietzsche got to say for himself? What ideas in his books separate him from all other philosophers and make him worth reading? What did he give to the world that the world didn't have before? Why is it worth while to write about him so copiously, in all civilized tongues, and why do folks take the trouble to translate him into the English vulgate, in eighteen volumes quarto?

The answer to all of these questions may be found in the fact that Nietzsche was, by long odds, the most violent, resourceful and effective critic of Christianity, and all its attendant ideals, traditions and aspirations, that the world has yet seen. He set himself the herculean task of demolishing the idea of peace on earth; he attacked Christian humility, as the worst of all possible errors; he denied the value of charity, self-sacrifice and love; he denounced the brotherhood of man. And in place of all these things he put forward a new paganism—a paganism abolishing heaven and the heavenly host, and making human progress, on the earth below, its sole goal. His ideal was not holiness, but health; his dream was not salvation, but efficiency.

It is plain, of course, that Nietzsche was by no means the first critic of Christianity to make a noise in the world. The war upon Christian supernaturalism, indeed, began in Christ's own lifetime, with that high priest who "rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy." (Mark xiv, 63-64.) In the Middle Ages this war sank to feebleness, but with the Renaissance it was revived, and toward the end of the eighteenth century it broke into flame. By 1850 nine-tenths of all educated men were enlisted. In England the very bishops began to explain away the biblical miracles; in America there was a great growth of unitarianism and other naturalistic movements; and even in the Roman Catholic countries "modernism" began to show itself. Before long, all theology became, in the main, an effort to apologize for Genesis.

But if Christian demonology and supernaturalism were dying, Christian morality was actually making gains. That is to say, men discovered that they could reject Genesis, and even the incarnation and the resurrection, and still give their allegiance and reverence to the Sermon on the Mount. Right or wrong, they argued, it was yet apparent that Christianity could make the world better. Some of the most bitter foes of supernaturalism took that position, Huxley among them. It was not true, said Huxley, that Christ was the Son of God; but it was true that He was godly and that His teachings lifted up the human race.

It was against this concession that Nietzsche aimed his thunderous artillery. Like Huxley, he rejected all miracles, as unproved and unthinkable, but going further than Huxley, he also rejected all those ethical ideas which the miracles were designed to expound and enforce. Instead of making men better, he argued, Christianity made them worse. He called it the most dangerous of all enemies to tendency, he maintained, was to degrade the healthy and efficient man to the level of the weak and helpless man. In its exaltation of humility he saw only dangerous opposition to those stern qualities which make for human progress.

The Christian scheme of morality, he said, was the scheme of downtrodden and despairing people—to-wit, the post-exodus Jew. These Jews were a weak race surrounded by powerful foes, and in consequence, it was impossible for them to achieve their desires by force. Their well-being demanded, indeed, not only that they make no attacks upon their masters, but also that they prevent their masters from making attacks upon them. To attain to that immunity they practiced humility, a quality which masters always like to see in slaves, and to salve their self-respect they erected that humility into a virtue, per se, and their priests urged them to cling to it, as a thing ordered by their God.

Nietzsche admitted that this exaltation of humility, with its sub-virtues of charity, brotherhood and self-sacrifice, was a wise expedient for the Jews of that time, for it obviously saved them from hopeless conflicts with stronger peoples, but he argued that this proved nothing as to its value for other peoples. The Jews themselves, in their earlier and more powerful days, were far from humble, as any one may discover who studies the ethical ideals of the Pentatuch: and the strong nations surrounding them, early and late, regarded humility as a disgusting vice. Among the Greeks and Romans, for example, "good" meant "powerful," "daring," "pitiless" the very qualities denounced by Christ as sinful.; And by the same token, "bad" meant "weak" or "self-effacing," the very qualities raised, in the Beautitudes, to the topmost rung of virtues.

The idea Nietzsche was trying to make plain here was this, that virtues change as the conditions of existence change. What is "good" for one race may be "bad" for another, or for the same race at some other time. From this it follows that goodness and badness are to be tested by the standard of immediate value, and by that standard only. In other words, no conceivable human action is good or bad in itself. Its virtue or lack of virtue lies in the effect it produces. In consequence, it is necessary for a race to revise its moral concepts as the conditions of its existence change, for the act that may help it to survive at one time, may bring it to decay at another.

But Christianity opposes that notion. It borrowed bodily the ethical ideals held by the Jews at the time of Christ, and by giving them the authority of divine commands it has succeeded in protecting them, for 1900 years, against all attempts at revision. That is to say, it insists, that the people of America in the twentieth century obey, in every detail, the rules of life found beneficial for the people of Palestine in the first century. Upon all who rebel against this command it pronounces appalling curses, dooming them to ostracism during life and to torment for all eternity.

And now we come to some understanding of Nietzsche's objection to Christianity. He held, not that it was essentially untrue, but that it was untrue for most men of his time. He saw very plainly the immense value of the Christian scheme of things, with its soothing resignationism and its promise of a reward beyond the grave, for the helpless and hopeless man; but he maintained that it offered nothing to the resourceful and efficient man. Suppose Columbus had been "poor in spirit?" Suppose the men who won the West had been "mild?"

So much for the general ideas at the bottom of Nietzsche's crusade. It is possible to give them here only in rough outline, and with many gaps. They are developed, in his books, in great detail. He seldom makes a statement without offering a host of examples in point. He was a man of enormous learning, an avid student of history and literature, a master of the principal ancient and modern languages, a brilliant writer, a pundit with imagination.

His war upon Christianity was but one part of his life-work. He gave almost equal attention to the origin and history of art. His speculations have colored the whole thought of Europe, and even those who oppose him most violently admit that he was a man of genius. Among the persons of my acquaintance who have studied his writings most carefully are two Catholic priests. Both men remain firm Christians, but each acknowledges a debt to Nietzsche. He stimulates to thought. He was violent and bitter, and at times, no doubt, he was wrong, but only those who have never read him presume to wave him away as a mere sacrilegious madman.

LITERARY SMALL TALK.

In the past Winston Churchill has been largely identified with the historical novel; it is, therefore, interesting to note that in his new book, "A Modern Chronicle," he has turned his talent to modern affairs and modern society. In these days, when so many conflicting views are being expressed on the conventionalities of the times by our leading novelists, it will be interesting to note just what attitude Mr. Churchill will assume.

The point of timeliness is well considered in the publication of "The Passion Play of Oberammergau," translated and with an introduction by Montrose J. Moses. Mr. Moses's book appeared at about the time when the principal characters in the Passion Play began to let their hair grow last November in readiness for rehearsals. The reproduction at Oberammergau, in June and July of this year, is said to have aroused more interest than ever, so much so that all accommodations from American ports to Naples and Genoa, the points nearest to Oberammergau, have been fully engaged for some months since. The Passion Play is performed only every ten years, and for this year, in order to reduce the excess of sightseers, tickets are to be sold to foreigners only on condition that they board and lodge two nights in the village.

Readers of Spanish in this country gas, the poet and novelist, whose writings cover a wide range. To bring this neglected author to the attention of American students, Herbert A. Kenyon, instructor in the University of Michigan, has prepared a vocabulary edition of "La Mariposa Blanca," one of Seiga's short novels. This edition is the second in the new series of Spanish texts announced for publication by Messrs. Henry Holt and Company, under the general editorship of Prof. J. D. M. Ford of Harvard University. It will appear about the end of the month.

The sixth volume of William J. Courthope's monumental "History of English Poetry" is published by the Macmillan Company this week. The five previous volumes have dealt with The Middle Ages, Renaissance and Reformation, The Intellectual Conflict of the Seventeenth Century, Development and Decline of the Poetic Dream, and the Constitutional Compromise of the Eighteenth Century. The present volume carries the history well through the romantic movement and the great names of the nineteenth century.

Messrs. Henry Holt and Company have arranged with Robert Rives La Monte, a New York editor, and Henry Louis Mencken, a Baltimore editor, to publish, probably in February, a volume consisting of actual letters that passed between them regarding socialism, and entitled, "Men vs. the Man," in which Mr. Mencken gives the individualist's view and Mr. La Monte the socialist's.

Several of the important influences on our national character which are noted in A. Maurice Low's psychological history, "The American People," have never been commented on before. One of them is the spirit in which the original colonists came here. "The American has always been a rebel," says Mr. Low. "He is a living protest . . . The American has always fought against Nature, against man, against government, when that government sought to oppress him." This characteristic has been reproduced from generation to generation and plays an important part in the modern American.

One of the papers which aroused animated discussion at the recent meeting of the American Philosophical Association at New Haven urged that the supreme need of American philosophy today is the bold reinterpretation and rebuilding of systems in the light of modern research. In so doing, the author maintained, philosophers will perforce come to recognize their kinship with the artist and the literary essayist. An interesting commentary upon this is the current appearance of a poetic interpretation of philosophical "Humanism" by a member of the association, Prof. Hartley Alexander of the University of Nebraska. His "Odes on the Generations of Man" is the outcome of a sincere conviction that that philosophy is valueless which cannot arouse an intense imaginative consciousness of its meaning—that if, philosophy is, as said Montaigne, une poesie sophistique, it can only be kept sane and solid by putting it to the test of the unsophisticated imagination. As put by Prof. Alexander in a recent article, "There is an uncompensated loss in the fact that our expositors of imaginative thinking, both psychologists and aestheticians, give so little heed to the testing of their own powers of imaginative production. An invaluable sanative for the mind perverted by logic (and some degree of perversion is the usual result of devotion to the abstractions of logical truth) is practice in some form of concretifying imagination."

Some of the frost of the North Pole seems to attach itself to every one associated with polar exploration. First it was Peary, then Cook, and now Prof. William Lyon Phelps is the victim. At a recent meeting of the Lousiana Yale Alumni Association the following resolution was adopted with a shout:

"Whereas, one William Lyin' Phelps has announced to a gullible world that he has made "A Dash at the Pole," and, whereas, it looks like a Cooked-up story; and, whereas, the pole with which said William Lyin' is most familiar is the Ledyard flagstaff; and, whereas, the book is not bound in Yale blue, and, whereas, we can prove all we say be it

"Resolved, that the Louisiana Yale Alumni Association repudiate William Lyin' Phelps, and hereby demand the return of all the medals which it has awarded him in the past."

D. Appleton & Co. announce for March 1 a new uniform edition of the works of Herbert Spencer in eighteen volumes; the volumes embodying the "Synthetic Philosophy," and eight volumes of essays and miscellaneous writings. Heretofore the writings of Spencer have not been accessible, in a uniform style, except in expensive subscription or library editions in special bindings.

This is an authoritative and authorized edition, brought out as it is by Spencer's original publishers, and by special arrangement with the executors of his estate the publishers are enabled to offer for sale this complete, definitive edition, in sets only, at a price within the means of every one.

MONDAY MORNING AND OTHER POEMS. By James Oppenheim. Sturgis & Walton Co., New York. (Price $1.)

THE ROUGH RIDER AND OTHER POEMS. By Bliss Carman. Mitchell Kennerley, New York. (Price $1.)

AT THE SHRINE OF SONG. Herbert Bashford. The Whitaker & Ray Co., New York. (Price $1.25.)

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE is a moral esthete. He has borrowed the fleshly devilishness of the French and passed it out to Americans tied up in tissue paper and pale pink ribbons. He is always measuring off lingerie with one hand, and, with the other, preparing a poison with which to kill the naughty lovers who bedeck themselves in his lace. His poetry has always had the same embroidered linen and perfume cast as his prose. But in "New Poems" he shows the first symptoms of robustness he has ever manifested. Still, he has not lost his relentless and incurable conscience. "The Ballad of the Sinful Lover" is the most atrocious kind of bathos without even the lingeries and violet-water appeals. . . . I wish the maudlin tributes to Oscar Wilde would cease. Dick Chemise informs us in this volume that Oscar "loved life Virile is the poem "War," but it is fused with a sickly East Aurora sentimentalism. I suppose, however, it is too much to expect anything altogether masculine from Richard of the Pale Perfumes.

James Oppenheim is democratic and optimistic—which is a polite way of saying that he is superficial and sentimental. In "Monday Morning and Other Poems" we have a book of rhymed and unrhymed verses about ice cream parlors, tenement rooms, the nickel theaters, excursoin boats, Coney Island, machinery, trolley cars, poor people and many more of life's utilities and necessities. He dotes on clerks and peddlers and foremen and grocers. He finds in them great poetic potentialities. (I imply this from the fact that he has rhymed about them all.) But such metricized sentiment is not poetry. It is essentially the loose, inexpensive newspaper verse that is immediately recognized by its total lack of form, grammar, thought and intelligence.

The rough rider in Bliss Carman's new volume of poems, "The Rough Rider and Other Poems," is T. R. the famous African hunter. Mr. Roosevelt is here apotheocized in many thin stanzas of eight lines each. The other poems are mostly on American themes and were apparently written for "occasions." They embody all of Carman's later faults (being thoughtless, ad libitum affairs,) and have none of his early merits.

The sole excuse for the book lies in the exquisite manner in which the volume is gotten up.

Herbert Bashford is very much exercised over the capitalist. He denounces the "modern pagan" in excoriating verse, very fervid, and very foolish. The sonnet of anathema dedicated to the modern superman sounds like a socialist's stump speech done into rhyme. These modern magazine poets are a queer lot. Superficial philosophers and still more superficial rhymsters, they invade the market places with their versified sermons. The cry against monetary desire and power is puerile. Such a desire is both logical and legitimate, quite as legitimate as Mr. Bashford's desire for poetry and democracy. Commercialism is a modern power, and as such it is to be respected; for power of any kind is romantic. The romance of our commercial life today is quite as brilliant and as interesting as the romance of Don Quixote or the adventures of Tartarin de Tarascon. To the statement that commercialism is driving the finer things out of life, I submit this answer: It has a right to drive them out if it can. It is power, and if the finer things (poetry and sonatas and water colors, I believe,) cannot survive the other human tendencies, the finer things will have to go. Nothing has the right of existence that cannot survive.

NEWS AND NOTES OF BOOKS AND AUTHORS.

D. Appleton & Co. will publish this spring "White Magic," a novel, by David Graham Phillips. The book will be illustrated by A. B. Wenzell. I have it from Appakunny (who is reading the book as it appears in a weekly) that it is quite the best thing Mr. Phillips has yet done. I won't believe this until I read it myself, for "The Hungry Heart" tickled me mightily.

Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. announce their removal on February 1 to new premises at Nos. 443-449 Fourth avenue, corner of Thirtieth street, New York, to which address all correspondence intended for this firm should be sent.

A volume on "China and the Far East" is announced by Thomas Y. Crowell & Co., for early publication. It is not the product of one man's pen, but is the result of a series of lectures before Clark University, by the most prominent officials and scholars who have lived in the East, or made special study of the subject. The volume is edited by Prof. George H. Blakeslee.

The Century Company is issuing Nannette B. Paul's "Parliamentary Law" (with diagram of motions,) an elementary presentation of a much neglected science, intended for every member of any organization and for students in school and college. The author is instructor of parliamentary law in the Washington College of Law, and the book puts into simple and helpful form the harvest of her years of experience in teaching both young students and well-educated men and women.

"Towers of Ivory" is announced as the title of Gertrude Atherton's lately completed novel, which will appear early in the coming spring.

When "The Bride of the Mistletoe," the first book from James Lane Allen in six years, appeared last spring, another work by him was promised for the near future. This promise is now fulfilled by the announcement for spring publication of "A Brood of the Eagle." As in the others of Mr. Allen's stories, the scene is rural Kentucky.

Gen. Morris Schaff's account of "The Battle of the Wilderness," which is now appearing in the Atlantic Monthly, will be published in book form later in the year.

Two new novels to appear during the late winter are "The Heart of Desire," by Elizabeth Dejeans, whose first novel, "The Winning Chance," created so much discussion last year; and "Raleigh," a romantic novel founded on the play now being produced with great success in London by Lewis Waller, the English romantic actor.

G. K. Chesterton is engaged upon a work which he proposes to call "What is Wrong." The title is suggestive, and will arouse keen interest in his large circle of admirers.

Maurice Hewlett's new novel, "Rest Harrow," now running in Scribner's Magazine, tells more about the life history of Senhouse, the painter and vagabond, who is Mr. Hewlett's most successful character, and the Harrow" will be published in book form.

There is to be a new novel spring by David Gray, author of two "Gallops" books; and that ular writer of short stories, Will win, has written a novel, which appear in March.

Katherine Cecil Thurston, author "The Masquerader," has completed new novel called "Max." "Max" running, as "The Masquerader" as a serial in Harper's Bazar, will later appear in book form.

Muhlbach!

—18 VOLUMES—

Best Edition de Luxe of the famous Muhlbach Library of Great Historical Romances, in Three-Quarter Leather Binding. Thousands of sets of these fascinating and valuable books have been sold at high prices through agents and by extensive magazine advertising. The magazine editions are greatly inferior to the genuine de Luxe edition which we offer here.

This edition de luxe is carefully printed on superfine white wove paper and includes full page photogravure illustrations, from historical paintings, printed on Japan paper.

The Three-Quarter Levant Grain Leather (red) binding is very handsome and durable. Marbled sides and inside linings, silk headbands, gold tops, uncut edges. Formerly published by D. Appleton & Co., this edition issued for subscribers by The Chesterfield Society. Size of volumes 5¾ x 8¼—about 9000 pages in the set. 18 volumes.

Sub. Price, $72.00. Sale Price,* $19.28.

Oscar Wilde!

—10 VOLUMES—

A great Poet, Playwright, Novelist and Essayist. Literature presents few more remarkable careers than that of Oscar Wilde. While yet a student at Oxford his poems were compared with those of Tennyson. In 1882, when only twenty-six years old, his lecture tour of America netted him over $50,000. He was undoubtedly the greatest playwright of his time.

This only complete authorized edition de luxe is now for the first time made accessible for American readers by special arrangement with Wilde's literary executor Mr. Robert Ross, and with the London publishers, Methuen & Co. The plates of this edition which were imported from England are the same as those of the rare English edition issued by Methuen & Co., of which only a few sets found their way to America to be quickly bought up by bibliophiles at $75 and upward per set.

Space here permits mention of only a few more important titles, such as The Duchess of Padua (first complete edition), Intentions and other Essays complete, Poems, Ravenna, The Sphinx, Ballad of Reading Gaol, the Harlot's House, and all poems complete, including many never before published, Lady Windermere's Fan, A Woman of no Importance, Florentine Tragedies, Vera, The Nihilists, Salome, and all other plays complete; The Picture of Dorian Grey, A House of Pomegranates, The Happy Prince, Lord Arthur Saville's Crime, and all other tales and novels complete. Reviews and Miscellanies newly collected and published for the first time. 10 volumes.

The type of these English plates is extra large and handsome, printed on superfine white wove paper with the Aldus de luxe watermark. The illustrations in photogravure and half tone are from original drawings. Cloth binding, vellum labels, gold tops, uncut edges.

Sub. Price, $35.00. Sale Price,* $8.38.

Three-Quarter Leather Binding, extra levant grain leather, marbled sides and linings, wide leather corners, silk headbands, gold tops, gold backs, uncut edges.

Plato!

—3 VOLUMES—

PLATO

It is indeed true that though written 2,300 years ago the works of Plato discuss the very same problems that we discuss today and still rank among the greatest productions of the human mind, teaching the great truths of life with convincing logic and fascinating simplicity. Plato is as necessary to a library as a foundation to a house.

This Edition de Luxe in three volumes contains the best translations with introductions and notes, including 1. The Dialogues. 2. The Republic. 3. Trial and Death of Socrates.

The type is large and clear printed on superfine white wove paper. The illustrations include photogravures and duotones (in two colors) on India plate paper.

Three-Quarter Leather Binding, gold tops, marbled sides and linings, silk headbands, Japan vellum titles.

Sub. Price, $15.00. Sale Price,* $4.08.

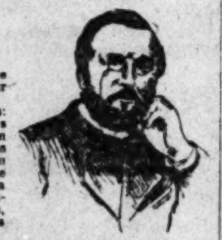
Taine!

—4 VOLUMES—



TAINE

The History of English Literature Illustrated Edition de Luxe in four handsome volumes.

Pres. Butler of Columbia writes: "Taine stands head and shoulders above the authors of other works on English Literature. His estimates are just, his style charming. You cannot get too much of Taine." The entire field is covered by Taine from earliest to modern times with illustrative excerpts from great writers, with an excellent index, making this an excellent reference work.

Large type, extra white wove paper, handsomely illustrated with duotones on India plate paper and photogravure on Japan paper.

Three-Quarter Leather Binding, marbled sides and linings, Japan vellum title pages, gold tops.

Sub. Price, $21.00. Sale Price,* $4.75.

Plutarch!

—5 VOLUMES—

PLUTARCH

Plutarch's Lives include brilliant biographies of the chief personages of Greek and Roman history, embracing the six hundred eventful years, 500 B.C. to 100 A.D. Shakespeare himself drew ideas and characters from Plutarch, and so have countless other writers. Emerson says "cannot be spared from the smallest library,—his lives are as entertaining as a French novel."

Edition de Luxe, five volumes, limited and numbered, large type, good paper, illustrated, durably bound in beautiful style. ¾ genuine leather.

Sub. Price, $25.00. Sale Price,* $6.28.

Gibbon's Rome!

—6 VOLUMES—

EDWARD GIBBON

The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire covering the period from the death of Julius Caesar and the down fall of the Republic, through thirteen centuries, to the fall of Constantinople. "Whatever else is read, Gibbon must be read, too."

New Edition de Luxe, the only large type set in six volumes, (it must not be confounded with the cheap broken type sets in five volumes.) Notes by Milman, Guizot, and Dr. William Smith. Elegantly illustrated and bound in ¾ genuine leather.

Sub. Price, $33.00. Sale Price,* $8.59.

Rawlinson!

—5 VOLUMES—

GEORGE RAWLINSON

New Complete Edition de Luxe of The History of Ancient Egypt and the Seven Great Monarchies.

This famous standard work tells in readable style the history of the great monarchies of the ancient Eastern world—Egypt, Chaldea, Assyria, Babylon, Media, Persia, Parthia, and Sassanian or New Persian Empire. The narrative is embellished with hundreds of illustrations throughout the text and there are very copious notes and indexes making this the best as it is the handsomest edition of the work ever issued in America.

Large type, excellent white wove paper.

Three-Quarter Leather Binding, (dark red) marbled sides and linings, gold tops, Japan paper titles in colors. Five volumes.

Sub. Price, $25.00. Sale Price,* $6.85.

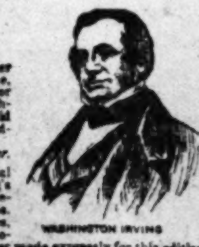
Irving!

—10 VOLUMES—



WASHINGTON IRVING

"The books of Irving, The Founder of American Literature, are wholesome, full of sweetness and charm, of humor without any sting, of amusement without any stain; and their more solid qualities are marred by neither pedantry nor pretension."

—Charles Dudley Warner.

This de Luxe edition deserves special attention, as it contains all of Irving's writings, with the author's latest revisions and several valuable maps. Complete in 10 handsome volumes, illustrated with many half tones, photogravure portraits and maps. The Paper made expressly for this edition is a very fine white wove and the presswork is of the best quality. The type is large and clear. Longfellow!

—10 VOLUMES—

LONGFELLOW

New and exquisitely illustrated Edition de Luxe of Prose and Poetical Works, including his translation of Dante's Divine Comedy. In ten beautiful volumes, nearly 5000 pages.

The type. It is the only large type edition of Longfellow, and is carefully printed from new plates. The paper is a pure white wove of extra quality.

The illustrations include 33 beautiful full page reproductions in photogravure and duotone (two-colors) from original paintings of distinguished modern artists.

The notes. In addition to the author's own notes there are numerous notes by the well-known critic and author, Mr. Charles Welsh.

It should be stated here that there is no absolutely complete set of Longfellow. The most important poem omitted from the present edition because of certain copyright restrictions is "The Hanging of the Crane," which however, is sold in various cheap editions. On the other hand this new edition contains, besides the original editorial matter referred to, a great deal of Longfellow's prose and poetical writings not obtainable in any other edition. For example, we have here for the first time in book form "The Bald Eagle" and "The Indian Summer," two brilliant stories written in the author's best style. Therefore it may be safely stated that this is by far the most satisfactory set of Longfellow ever published.

Pepys' Diary!

—4 VOLUMES—

PEPYS

New Edition de Luxe.

Printed from new large type, with 100 full page reproductions in half tone and photogravure.

This entirely new edition should not be confounded with sets sold at a similar or higher price but which are printed from old worn out broken type plates.

For the first time a limited number of booklovers may enjoy at a trifling outlay the same pleasure as the wealthy bibliophile who has spent years, and perhaps thousands of dollars in collecting engravings for his beloved Pepys.

The type is new, large and clear, and the text is that of the famous Lord Braybrooke edition.

The paper is a soft white, antique white wove stock, with title pages printed on Japanese vellum in two colors.

The illustrations are printed on plate paper with protecting tissues on which the titles and sources of the illustration are given.

The binding is a luxurious Three-Quarter Persian Leather of a rich dark shade, hand tooled, with full gold backs and gold tops, with marbled sides and linings. This set is complete in four volumes.

Sub. Price, $25.00. Sale Price,* $6.79.

Shakespeare!

20 Volumes.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEA

Incomparably the best Shakespeare in the world. The first printing from new plates. Complete in 20 volumes. Size of volumes 5¼ x 8¼ inches.

This truly magnificent new edition de luxe of Shakespeare, immeasurably superior to all others, was published by the well-known New York subscription publishers, Bigelow, Smith & Co., who were engaged in its preparation for nearly three years expending over $20,000 before the work was ready for the press.

During recent years in America probably the three most exten advertised and most widely sold editions of Shakespeare have bee Booklovers, the Morris and The Temple, in all of which the note at the end of each play with no references to notes in the text the Booklovers and the Morris Editions there are two sets of n the back which force the reader to turn to the back of the vo to hunt until the desired note is found, if it ever is found. Co is unnecessary upon this vexatious impractical arrangement of n

In Bigelow, Smith & Co.'s new edition, through enormous exp of typesetting, the notes appear properly at the bottom of each where they belong for the obvious convenience of the reader, and over every one of the thousands of notes bear the initials of the mentator so that one may know the exact authority for each expl tory statement. General readers as well as students will appre this commonsense aid in reading Shakespeare.

Most Completely Annotated Edition Ever Issued.

The notes and critical comments accompanying each play are by Dowden, Lloyd, Hazlitt, Ulrici, Dyce, Coleridge, White, Mrs. Jameson and all the world's Shakespearean scholars. A brief synopsis, written expressly for this edition, each play. At the end of each play are study questions modeled upon a Shakespearean course, affording the fullest help to the student or casual reader ing for information.

The illustrations of this 20-volume Edition de Luxe include 170 full page tions in photogravure and mezzogravure of celebrated Shakespearean paintings by artists. These brilliant pictures are unrivaled for beauty and artistic merit. The is a beautiful new Scotch face, large, Pica or 12 point size.

Mrs. Judson Harmon.

fe of the Former Attorney-General and Present Chief Executive of Ohio Visits Washington.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

SHINGTON, Feb. 5.—"There is ng more delicious than to revisit and familiar scenes after a cerlapse of time," remarked Mrs. n Harmon, wife of the Governor hio, and familiar to Washington of a decade and a half ago, as of the most gracious official hostof the second Cleveland regime. as enchanted with the new White e and with the reception to which ident and Mrs. Taft graciously all the Governors and their wives. ve followed Washington in all hanges from afar, but things seen mightier than things heard or I realize in the amenities which ended during my visit how great nation has grown and how the rican capital is now among the ored cities of the world, and its talities to be counted with those e more ancient civilizations. I ot conceive anything more repretive than the White House reons as they are conducted by my rious fellow citizens of the great of Ohio, President and Mrs. The dignity, yet the cordial, inurse, the sweeping away of baryet the sense of the presence of mighty ones of the country, the absence of formal restrictions, the feeling which impels the welll not to obtrude too obviously on natural reserve which hedges rulthen the good fellowship involved e serving of refreshments and in ing, all make up one of the most htful pictures which my memcan contain. I was prepared for y changes, but the evolution from formal impersonal aspect which official levees of fifteen years ago ne sociable function of today ed impossible. I say this with utmost loyalty to those who ed the amenities during my resce in Washington. The gracious e of Mrs. Cleveland must, of e, come before the mind, for she indelibly associated with all my of hospitality at the White e.

my era, almost all the interest ving at the capital was contained eeting the representative men of ic life, the official world, and its nine half. I yield that nothing be more fascinating than to meet people who are on the top of the e, so to speak, and those who are mplishing results in national his- But the delightful diversity h marks life in Washington now riking. Not only the mighty men he nation, but many of those of nations are among the throng n one may get to know familiar- Then the number of men after gaining wealth or desire rest from their lawho make Washington their , is now, I find, quite large. In ord, the loyal American need not e to go to London or Paris before lies. He may find ample material he capital of his country.

n my present home, Columbus, our ence is in miniature what it is he greater capital. Notwithstandthe criticism of our British sis- American women take a keen est in politics and are a power hem, though I acknowledge in a rent way from which the British present celebrated. I belong to the old-fashioned school who adhere to the principle that the men can manage public affairs and that women are infinitely useful in the ancient avocations of homekeeping and rearing their children. To every rule one may bring the shining exception, but in my experience I note that the most successful men not only in public life, but in private enterprises, are those with helpful wives and with happy homes. I have always observed that a woman can accomplish excellent results for her husband's ambitions by graciousness and tact in the social relations, and I deplore the decline of the social virtues in favor of more masculine qualities. There are men, great men, who conquer all difficulties in spite of all obstacles, but the average man needs the support which comes from happy home environments. A woman can find intellectual pleasure and reward in studying politics from their social end and in shaping her life accordingly. What has proven the pitfall for one may aid the onlooker in avoiding.

Mrs. Judson Harmon.

"I may exaggerate the intuition of the women of my home State, but I think that Ohio has produced as many women who have been successful home politicians as it has men who have become eminent in national affairs. Ohio women seem to breathe politics in the air and they love to discuss them and to follow all national issues as well as local ones. But they are content, with few exceptions, to act in an advisory capacity and not to ask active participation. Therein has lain their strength. Every one of the women who have presided over the White House in the list of Presidents from Ohio have been noted for home accomplishments, and in several instances for such keen political acumen that their husbands gladly acknowledge them as potent factors for success. In less exalted places wives of Ohio politicians have achieved national fame not for power of influence in obtaining patronage, or for turning the tide in high public stream, but for the queenly way in which they presided over their homes and the friends they gained for their husbands by their tact and intelligent grasp of opportunities. A well-cooked and daintily-served dinner will get more votes than ten stump speeches.

A delightful woman in all that constitutes charm in the gentler sex is the wife of the Governor of Ohio. During her residence in Washington as wife of Cleveland's Attorney-General, she was one of the popular Cabinet hostesses, and this was attested during her recent visit to Washington. She was submerged with attention and she could have expended the energy of a month in one day receiving callers. She resided in the Cleveland days in a pretty home in K street, near Thirteenth, where she was a neighbor and close friend of the late Mrs. John Sherman and her daughter, Mrs. McCallum. Gov. and Mrs. Harmon have three daughters, all happily married. Of these, the eldest, Mrs. Edward L. Wright, was married before her parents came to Washington, and she made but brief visits during their residence. Of others, Elizabeth Harmon, now Mrs. George Lemon Cassatt and Marjorie Harmon, Mrs. Alfred Cassatt, were belles during that era of famous belles, in which the youthful mistress of the White House was central figure. Four small grandchildren now add to the family circle of the Governor and are among the happiest incidents of Mrs. Harmon's life.

To her own personal charm Mrs. armon just now adds the spice of ing destined for higher honors by those who follow the tenets of Thomas Jefferson. She takes this suggestion with the philosophy which is characteristic, but without any danger of having the possibility take any pleas from the present. She has filled ny high positions in her own State and at the capital, and she is well posed and well equipped for any position, even the one now held by another distinguished woman from Cincinnati.

"I take life day by day," said Mrs. Harmon, "enjoying the present and not permitting future hopes or aspirations to make the day unduly crowded or restless. Of late years I have become a confirmed newspaper reader. No novel proves as fascinating to me as the record of the world's news and the chronicles of things in which I am vitally concerned. I have never lost zest for reading about what goes on in Washington and about men who are forging to the front in the public estimation, and the reasons for which they are becoming famous and all those things which the observing and careful readers of good journals can discern in the briefest dispatches or comments. Outside of this absorbing interest in politics, I can own to no fads. I practice the old-fashioned virtue of keeping house and looking after the ways of my own roof tree. In Columbus our special duties keep the time pleasantly filled, and then when there are four little grandchildren to think about in odd moments I never have a dull moment.

"I have never sympathized in the least with the growing inclination towards godlessness and the fashion of not going to church. I always feel uneasy about the future and solicitous about my own dear ones when I read these alarming accounts of the American nation drifting more and more towards the new isms and avowed lack of fixed beliefs. I believe strictly in being orthodox according to some organized plan. I go to the Methodist church and so does Mr. Harmon. Church going is the most excellent habit which I think a person can cultivate. Even if there come no great spiritual exaltation, or any great interest in proceedings, the habit of obeying the Divine law is reward enough for the hardship endured. I should be glad to see more women engaged in religious revivals, that is, in bending their energies towards arousing interest in church affairs. I know that women in the main do their part here, as they do in civic improvement, in educational matters or in aiding charitable projects, but they seem not to give the stimulation to church enterprises as in past years. I should be grieved to know that this country should be rated among the atheistic nations with any measure of truth in the accusation. If women take up this issue with the same zeal they have other propagandas, it could soon be numbered among the church-going countries of the world, and where the spiritual law as well as the civic law is loved and obeyed."

Mrs. Harmon has borne the passing years with consummate grace. To those who knew her fifteen years ago she seems unchanged except that her hair is now almost white, and she has added not unbecomingly to her graceful figure. A wholesome, earnest woman in every phase of life, Mrs. Harmon is typical of the best traditions of the woman of an older generation. It is a type which, happily for the nation, is not without its emulators even in the present mad pursuit of public careers.

BITS OF VERSE.

The Flowers of Night.

The flowers of night, whose beauty exceeds
By far the violet, rose—heartsease.
They thrive up in heaven, they never die,
For they are the bright stars set up in the sky.

What is more brilliant than the flowers of night!
Ne'er set in a crown, ne'er plucked by small mite,
For the troop of a million could not bring them down;
God alone keeps them and saves them from harm.

Be thankful to Him who has given these flowers
For you to study and make the night bright;
For the rose may be sweet and the pansy be fragrant,
But none can compare with the flowers of night.
—[Edna Pearl Blank, in Brooklyn Eagle.

If You've Anything Good to Say.

If you've anything good to say of a man,
Don't wait till he's laid to rest,
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken
Is an empty thing at best.
Ah! the blighted flower now drooping lonely
Would perfume the mountainside,
If the sun's glad ray had but shone today
And the pretty bud espied.
—[National Magazine.

A Song of Rest.

O weary hands! that, all the day,
Were set to labor hard and long,
Now softly fall the shadows gray,
The bells are rung for even song.
An hour ago the golden sun
Sank slowly down into the West;
Poor, weary hands, your toil is done;
'Tis time for rest!—'tis time for rest!

O weary feet! that many a mile
Have trudged along a stony way,
At last ye reach the trysting stile;
No longer fear to go astray.
The gently bending, rustling trees
Rock the young birds within the nest,
And softly sings the quiet breeze:
"'Tis time for rest!—'tis time for rest!"

O weary eyes! from which the tears
Fell many a time like thunder rain—
O weary heart! that through the years
Beat with such bitter, restless pain,
Tonight forget the stormy strife,
And know what heaven shall send is best;
Lay down the tangled web of life;
'Tis time for rest!—'tis time for rest!
—[Florence Tylee, in Chambers's Journal.

Don't Worry.

If little things are vexing you,
As down life's journey you pursue,
Don't worry.
Don't be down-hearted, blue nor glum,
Just take your trials as they come—
E'en then you'll find you're taking some,
Don't worry.

Don't hunt for trouble, high nor low,
'Twill follow you where'er you go,
Don't worry.
If you take simply what's your due,
And let the rest go up the flue,
You'll have enough to worry you,
Don't worry.
—[Boston Herald.

Mother Night.

Eternities before the first-born day,
Or ere the first sun fledged his wings of flame,
Calm night, the everlasting and the same,
A brooding mother over chaos lay.
And whirling suns shall blaze and then decay,
Shall run their fiery courses and then claim
The haven of the darkness whence they came;
Back to Nirvanic peace shall grope their way.
So when my feeble sun of life burns out
And sounded is the hour for my long sleep,
I shall, full weary of the feverish light,
Welcome the darkness without fear or doubt,
And, heavy lidded, I shall softly creep
Into the quiet bosom of the night.
—[James W. Johnson, in the Century.

A Fancy.

A baby slept—
The mother kept
Love watch, in pondering lost;
For at her side,
With arms flung wide,
The wee form marked a cross.

She thought, perchance, with anguish keen,
Might Mary so her babe have seen—
By fearful intuition, then,
Fore-glimpsed His fate who died for men.

The small arms fall—
From sun-lit wall
The golden beams creep down,
And ring with light
The soft curls bright—
And lo! He wears a crown!

The prayer of all earth's motherhood
Was in her heart as rapt she stood:
"Dear God, on us look down, look down;
Grant me the cross and him the crown."
—[Valance Patriarche, in Putnam's.

Floyd Crews, the eleven-year-old son of F. B. Crews of Tuxedo, Md., a proofreader at the Library of Congress, has the distinction of being the youngest boy who has ever entered the high schools of Washington. He entered the kindergarten department when he was five years old, but in some of the schools he has attended he has taken several of the courses in one year. If he is promoted each year during his high-school course he will be but fifteen years of age when he graduates, and will then hold the honor of being the youngest graduate of any high school in the district.

THE LAW AND THE PEOPLE.

two institutions found among civilized both considered of human origin by some, divine by others. They are human in their direct or intermediate.

that the state is man-created, by a long The church is of man, but here the orthodox teaches that it comes of inspiration. This of opinion should keep these institutions equals in their spheres of activity, yet few history have caused more confusion and trouble the attempt of the state to control the church, church to enter the domain of the state.

by those of old time that the ruler of a be their shepherd and their priest, and so old-time king making laws and enforcing the same time as a father watching and offering intercession for them powers thought to rule over human this conception of government might experience taught men otherwise, and the governmental functions became separate from the sacerdotal. The paternal relations of the people became less emphasized as time and in a way for the only time in the in the United States of America conception of the relations of the government people in their business affairs and in beliefs and practices came to light. planned our government were impressed philosophy of the French thinkers just pre revolutions in this country and in France. and not priests, and while recognizing forces of the universe they con their duties related only to temporal af way. Human society consists in the surrender of certain "natural rights" by each individual for the purpose of building up an institution known as the state for the purpose of seeing that justice prevails between man and man, as the only foundation on which society could find a stable footing. The government was the creation of the people and all rights not surrendered by the individual to the state were reserved to the people in their individual capacity. As to the religion of the people, that was reserved to the individual to worship as he saw fit and to hold what doctrines his mind conceived reasonable. He was the sole judge of these things, and he might exercise these rights with only the limit that he was to do nothing as a religious duty that in any way might interfere with any right of another, natural or legal.

The American form of government was to let the business of the people as severely alone as their religion. Each man might worship according to the dictates of his conscience, and each might enjoy life and liberty and pursue happiness according to the guidance of his own judgment.

The right to levy taxes was one of the most important powers the people as individuals conferred upon their government as the representatives of the aggregate interests of all the people. The importance of this power appears when it is realized that the unrestricted right to tax means the power to create or destroy business for each person affected. If the taxing power were without restraint the government might bring to bankruptcy any enterprise, or it might build up any. So the American statesmen put limits to the power of taxation. In the first place it is provided that all taxes shall be equal on all citizens in the same line of business in the same way, but in proportion to the capital invested or the revenue derived. This last clause must be profoundly considered. Only in certain cases is it justly competent for the government to levy a tax on a sliding scale. The equitable principle is that the tax be at the same rate on the valuation, whether that have in mind the capital invested or the revenue derived.

Another fundamental principle in our system of government is that the primary object of taxation be for the support of the government. To sustain the government erected by the people and to enforce the scanctions of the laws there must be funds. The right to tax the people equally for such purposes is obvious, equally meaning in proportion to what the citizen has to be safeguarded. The millionaire has a million times more at stake than the man with a dollar, and should pay accordingly.

There are certain enterprises possible only under government supervision. Harbors and navigable streams are handed over to the government because their uses are for all, and if the government may control them so it must improve them.

As the sacerdotal functions were taken from our governing powers and left to the churches, so the charities of society were not entrusted to the government, but reserved to the individuals who make up the nation to be exercised by them as individuals or as associated in church or other organizations. Loosely the people in their sympathy for those in distress have permitted their governments to usurp a small portion of this work of charity. The temporal powers we allow to establish poorhouses and maintain hospitals for the care of the abjectly indigent. Coming as most of us have done from countries where the old conceptions of the paternal functions of government prevail, we are not nicely curious as to the extent to which this public charity is carried. But withal it is generally left to church organizations or to benevolent societies to do this work. In this way charity has a moral quality of which humanity would be robbed under the state system of maintaining charities. If the government may tax property-holders for the care of all in need, the same right (if conceded as such) would make it proper for the state to tax all property so that yearly there would be a perfect equalization of all wealth. Such an extreme position would destroy all industry and wreck society.

Egyptian Farming Tools.

"One of the curious sights in the Egyptian harvest season is a modern threshing machine noisily working in a field adjoining that in which a native thresher is treading out the grain," said Horace F. Coler of Chicago, who has made a tour of the world in the interests of American farming implements.

"The brown-skinned tiller of the soil, clad in his flowing robes of white or the favored dull blue and yellow combination sitting on the high seat of the crude thresher, which is dragged over the fields by a yoke of patient camels or perhaps a camel and a donkey or a couple of buffalo cows, appears to the stranger who sees this for the first time like the principal actor in a scene worked out by an ingenious mind for stage effect.

"The native plow in Egypt is simply the forked portion of a tree or two pieces joined together and smoothed off, a primitive contrivance which may still be seen in use by Cuban farmers. The thresher is a sledge-like affair fitted with round crushers of wood or iron and weighted down from the top. The grain is crushed into the ground and when gathered up it is mixed with lumps of mud, but it is said that never a kernel of it is lost or wasted.

"American farming machinery may be found in the remotest parts of the world and where least expected. In what manner it gets there I could not ascertain. The natives could not enlighten me.—[Washington Herald.

What Do You Build

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

Now, if any man build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones, hay, stubble;
Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is.—[First Corinthians, iii, 12-13.

You build them well, and you build them high—
These marble and granite piles;
Your pointed towers salute the sky
With turrets and gleaming tiles.
Your arches leap till they meet in space,
And leap till they meet again,
You build with power and build with grace—
But where are you building men?

Your halls and temples are proudly raised,
And firmly and nobly planned;
What wonder, then, that we stand amazed?
You build with a lavish hand,
You build completely, with art sublime—
A theme for a subtler pen
To bound and balance in coming time—
But where are you building men?

You dig your trenches and build your walls
And rear to your lasting fame
The massive pillars and stately halls,
And carve on the gates your name.
All groined and windowed and roofed and eaved
With all in the builder's ken,
A splendid thing you have thus achieved—
But where are you building men?

You build the structure to house your pride,
The girder and post you raise,
You make them high and you make them wide—
But what of the coming days?
Who builds the courage of mind and heart
And soul, that will help us then?
You build with cunning in every part—
But where are you building men?

City Mission Work Among Children.

Here is work which one Church City mission (the Philadelphia one) is doing for children:

It offers help to every child in trouble and uses the same institutions in so doing as are used by the Children's Aid Society. It makes no distinction as to race, color, or creed, "because it is a Christian institution, doing the work of Jesus Christ on earth, whose command is: "Do good to all men."

It looks after the homeless and neglected children who come under its notice, and it has been quite successful in securing homes for them in private families.

All persons, whether adults or children, who come under its care receive individual supervision.

It strongly discourages the indenturing or binding out of children, and refuses to coöperate with any home or institution practicing such system.

It makes a specialty of securing positions for destitute women with children through an employment bureau, and always refuses to separate the mother and child.

It stands prepared at all times to coöperate with the juvenile court in helping to place boys in positions where they are able to support themselves under its direction.

Origin of Matinees.

Mr. J. N. Maskelyne believes he is correct in stating that he was the first London entertainer to give performances twice daily. Frequently he was able to advertise: "The only entertainment in London this afternoon." The late Sir Henry Irving, who, by the way, few people are probably aware, was something of a conjurer himself, was at the time very much interested in magic, and frequently went to see Mr. Maskelyne at the Egyptian Hall. "You seem to get very good audiences," he said at the end of one afternoon's performance. "Yes," Mr. Maskelyne replied, "on the whole I think we do decidedly better in the afternoon than in the evening." Whether or not these casual words gave birth to the idea, Mr. Maskelyne cannot say, but shortly afterward Henry Irving started giving regular matinées himself.—[Strand Magazine.

Booming Asiatic Cities. By Frank G. Carpenter.

JOHN BULL ON THE PACIFIC.

HOW BRITISH HOLD THE COMMERCIAL GATEWAY OF CHINA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HONGKONG.—The booming cities of the world are now on this side of the Pacific. The awakening of Asia is bringing in capital from Europe and the United States, and the whole continent seems to have sprung into life. Yokohama has doubled since I last saw it. Tokio is now bigger than Chicago; Osaka will rank with Philadelphia, and Shanghai is ahead of Boston or St. Louis. Hongkong, away down here at the southern end of China, has now a population of 400,000, and it promises to be one of the greatest cities of the world. It belongs to the British. It had only 2000 Chinese fishermen in it when they took hold of it seventy years ago. It is now one of the great ports of the world and the people here claim that it has more tonnage than Liverpool or London.

Within the past year a railroad has been started at the suburb of Kowloon on the mainland. This is being built to Canton, and it will give Hongkong rail connections with that city and all interior China. The road is known as the Canton-Kowloon Railway. At Canton it joins the trunk line running north to Hankow, the concession for which was given to the Americans, but sold back to China. The Chinese are now building that road, and when it is completed there will be a through freight and passenger service from Peking to Hongkong and the whole of the empire will be tributary to this port. Canton itself has a population of over 2,000,000, Hankow and its sister cities are still larger, and that trunk road will tap a population fully as great as that of the United States. Several other railroad systems now building will connect with it, and this city will then be the southern gateway to China by rail, as well as by sea.

Sir Frederick D Lugard Governor of Hongkong

The Hongkong of Today.

It is a question whether Hongkong will not soon surpass the other ports of the world in the amount of its shipping. It now handles about $300,000,000 worth of freight a year, and more than 11,000,000 tons of goods come in and go out of its harbor every twelve months. This freight is carried upon about 50,000 different vessels. The most of them are Chinese, but there are also great steamers from Europe and the United States. There are five different lines which connect Hongkong with America, and more than that which go to Japan. You can get a ship here any day for Europe by way of the Suez Canal, and there are regular services to the Philippines, Australia, the Dutch East Indies, and almost every point in the Pacific and Indian oceans. The port is free and an enormous amount of freight is transhipped to the other countries and islands near by.

The passenger service by way of Hongkong is also important. By changing boats you can reach almost any point from this place. There are vessels which leave nightly for Canton and almost every day for Shanghai. The fare to Canton is $8 and to Shanghai $60. It costs $70 to Singapore, and the time is five days. A like amount will take you to Bangkok, and for $75 you may go to Saigon in Cochin-China. It is only two days and $60 to Manila, while one may have a passage to Melbourne, Australia, for $170. There are steamers once or twice a week for the American continent. The time is less than a month, and the cost is $225 in gold. The distance to San Francisco is over 6000 miles, and to Singapore about 1500. It is 800 miles from here to Shanghai, 1400 to Kobe, less than 1600 to Yokohama, and about 100 miles more to Vladivostok, at the eastern end of the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

Hongkong is a crown colony. It was ceded to Great Britain by China in 1841. It has grown steadily since then, and it is now a military and naval station of first-class importance. It is the headquarters of the China squadron, comprising about sixty vessels in all, and it has an imperial garrison of 3500 troops. It is ruled by a governor, appointed by the King of England, and the man now in charge is Sir Frederick D. Lugard, who made himself famous as Governor of Nigeria. Sir Frederick receives a salary of $30,000 a year, and has a cabinet and a legislative council to help him, two of whom are Chinese.

How Hongkong Looks.

But let us take a look at the human side of the island. This little block of land is surrounded by water. It is only a hill of basalt, schist and granite washed by the sea. If a giant could stand it on end it might be whirled around like a top. Its base is so small that a railroad train could run around it in less than an hour, and it ends in a peak 1800 feet high. The island lies close to the mainland, and with the peninsula of Kowloon it has a harbor of ten square miles, filled with shipping craft of all kinds. The boat populatin numbers 45,000, and you come to the island through a swarm of sampans, worked by women, who stand up and skull their boats much like the gondoliers of Venice. Some of them have babies fastened to their backs; and the little ones bob up and down as their mothers bend to their oars. The babies are held on by squares of cloth tied on by straps around the waists and necks of the mothers. The bare legs of the little ones stick out in front.

Coming into Hongkong the mountainous island towers high above you, the upward slopes covered with green. The shores are lined with buildings five or six stories high, with galleries running along their fronts story above story. These galleries are divided into sections, and the shores seem to be walled with white pigeonholes rising from the edge of the water. At the foot are the warehouses and exporting establishments, which take care of the shipping. Above them are the offices and mercantile parts of the city, and still farther back, climbing the hill, the many white, cream and rose-colored pigeonholed structures which form the residences. The buildings extend from the sea up the mountain for a distance of a thousand feet or more at an angle of almost 45 degrees. Streets have been cut out around the hill, making the whole a series of terraces, and these are bisected at right angles by other highways and by a cog railroad which leads to the hotels on the peak.

The business parts of Hongkong would be fine anywhere. The Hongkong Club cost $350,000, and the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank has as fine offices as any financial institution of the United States. A new postoffice is now going up, and there are great buildings rising on that part of the harbor which has been reclaimed from the sea. which climb up the hills. Last night everything [illegible] The great buildings were as dark as a [illegible] and the pigeonhole balconies appeared to be [illegible] in the rays of the electric lamps. A gloom [illegible] the mountains back of the town, the green [illegible] turning to blue in the darkness and the house [illegible] shining like stars below the clouds which enveloped the peak.

I walked along Queen's Road to the Clock Tower and stopped there under the electric light to watch the night [illegible] as it passed. It was a cosmopolitan one such as you will see nowhere except in Hongkong. There were [illegible], black-bearded Sikh policemen guarding the traffic, British soldiers in uniform who belong to the garrison, and sailors in the different dress of a half-dozen nations. The navies of the world come to Hongkong and their cadets and marines may be seen any [illegible] on the streets. There were many East Indians clad in their calicoes, brown-skinned Malays from the Philippines and Borneo, Japanese just off the vessels, and Europeans from all parts of the west. Sampan women in wide calico trousers and cotton chemises moved along here and there on bare feet, and rich Chinese merchants took up the greater part of the sidewalk with their silk gowns and cloth boots. The mid-streets were filled with coolies, and over the roadway passed an endless procession of rickshas and chairs. One long line of the latter was filled with English young men and women going to a dance of the Centipede Club. This club has fifty members, and hence 100 legs, all of which delight to trip along in the barn dance and waltzes. Then there were also Parsee girls with white shawls over their faces, riding about with their lovers, and black-skinned Klings half-clad in white cotton.

By and by it began to rain, and the water came down in sheets. It drenched the sampan girls, so that their chemises clung to their skins, outlining their persons. The sailors ran for shelter, and the policemen put on [illegible] coats and caps over their turbans. The ricksha men and chair bearers dragged out coats of palm leaves and covered their heads with hats of rattan as big as umbrellas. The latter were painted bright blue, the palm leaves looked like feathers, and as they trotted along inside the shafts they seemed to be yellow-legged [illegible] with blue topknots harnessed to the chairs and [illegible]

Shopping in Hongkong.

This is a good place to shop. The travel is so great that curio dealers and other merchants from all over the East have opened stores here, and they offer the most beautiful goods of the Orient. There are many East Indians who sell embroideries, silver and carpets, and Chinese who display all the wealth of Canton. The silverware is beautiful and cheap. It is made of coin silver and is decorated with dragons and other exquisite carvings. I bought a solid tea set the other day the tray of which alone weighed $50, that number of coins being placed in one bowl of the scales, while the pitcher, sugar bowl and teapot were on the other. The price of the set was $100 in silver, the extra $50 representing the workmanship. Fifty dollars in silver is less than $25 gold and out of that came the profit of the dealer and the wages of the artist who had spent a month or more in carving. The same tea set would sell for twice as much in the United States.

Among the other beautiful things sold here are black-wood furniture, richly carved; ladies' dresses of grass cloth decorated with the most exquisite embroidery; chairs and sofas of wicker work covered with linen, as well as rare porcelains and bamboo ware. Ta[illegible] are especially cheap, and embroidered center-pieces and doilies of grass cloth are not at all costly. [illegible] jewelry is sold, including some set with pearls and precious stones. Articles in jade are a specialty here, and the best of them bring high prices. All [illegible] jewelry is made twenty-two or more carats fine. It is so soft that it wears away easily, but it is always worth its weight in gold.

Furs of Peking.

Embroidered coats, like those used for opera cloaks at home, are sold here; but the best place to buy such things is in Peking, and that from the palaces. The [illegible] furnished free to the imperial family and court [illegible], and the eunuchs sell the surplus to merchants and peddlers; so that one has a chance now and then to buy for a song a cloak which has been worn by princesses. Such garments are brought in bales to the foreign hotels of Peking and displayed there for sale. Some of the coats may be a bit soiled, but many are new, and there are chances for big bargains. The same is true of furs of all kinds, from sables to squirrels, the prices in most cases being far below those of the United States. This is especially true at the present time, on account of the deaths in the imperial family, by which the officials have had to dispense with the wearing of all furs not of the white or mourning [illegible] Sports.

I happened to be here at the time of the races. The stores and business offices are all closed, and the banks have not been opened for three days. There is no way to get money on saints' days, race days or other holidays. When there is a cricket or football match, every financial institution shuts its doors, and the clerks go out to play or look on. These Britishers of the Far East are fond of amusements, and they believe in the college boy's motto:

"When fun and duty clash, let duty go to smash."

They have their clubs at every port. I found them in the leading Japanese cities, and also in Tientsin, and at the other places in China where foreigners live. Shanghai is a city of clubs, and its British [illegible] clubhouses are among the finest of the Far East. The races of that place are national events which draw crowds from the country about. They are participated in by gentlemen jockeys who train their own [illegible] vies with Shanghai as a club center. It has a dozen or more of such institutions. The Hongkong clubhouse is situated down by the sea. It is a magnificent building, which compares well with similar houses in New York and Chicago. The Germans have a club here. The Portuguese meet together in Shelley street, and the Japanese Club has a building on the Icehouse Road. There are a number of recreation clubs. One is made up of the government clerks, another is the Ladies' Tennis Club and others are devoted to cricket, football and golf. There are chess clubs, polo clubs, and yacht clubs, the latter holding regattas every December. The jockey clubs have their biggest races in February, and in addition to these there are annual athletic meets between the residents and the soldiers of the garrison, as well as swimming matches and boat races. Hongkong has a philharmonic society and an amateur dramatic club. It has also large Chinese theaters which are open day and night.

An Intellectual Center

Hongkong is psychically alive. It has English and Chinese dailies and weeklies. It has colleges and schools and churches galore. There is an Episcopal cathedral which was built in 1842, a church known as St. Peter's, erected long ago for the seamen at West Point, and Protestant and Roman Catholic churches and chapels. The Catholics have also a cathedral. The Jews have a synagogue, the Mohammedans have two mosques, and the Sikhs a temple, where they worship their gods. There are also convents, orphanages and foundling asylums, as well as hospitals and other charitable institutions of various kinds. Altogether the town is alive.

WEASEL AND ERMINE.

HABITS AND APPEARANCE OF TWO STRANGE LITTLE ANIMALS.

[Fur News:] The weasel is about six inches in length from tip to tip, which seems very great compared with the height of the animal, which is not above an inch and a half. The wolf is not above one and a half times as long as he is high, while the weasel is nearly five times as long, an amazing misproportion. The tail, also, which is bushy, is generally two inches long and adds to the apparent length of the body.

The color of the weasel is a light brown on the back and sides, but white under the throat and belly. The eyes are little and black. The ears are short, broad and roundish and have a fold at the lower part, which makes them look as if they were double. Beneath the corners of the mouth on each jaw is a spot of brown.

This animal, though diminutive in appearance, is nevertheless a very formidable enemy to quadrupeds a hundred times its own size. When kept in a cage, it will not touch its food while anybody looks on. It keeps in a continual agitation and seems frightened so much at the sight of mankind that it will die if not permitted to hide itself.

For this purpose it must be provided in its cage with a sufficient quantity of wool or hay in which it may conceal itself and where it may carry whatever it has to eat. In this State it is seen to pass three parts of the day in sleeping and reserves the night for its exercise and eating.

In its wild state the night is likewise the time during which it may be said to live. At the approach of evening, it is seen stealing from its hole and creeping about the farmer's yard for its prey. If it enters the place where poultry is kept, it never attacks the cocks or the old hens, but immediately goes after the young ones. Generally it merely sucks the blood of the victim.

It is remarkably active, and in a confined place scarce any animal can escape it. It will run up the sides of the walls with such facility that no place is secure from it. Its body is so small that there is scarce any hole but that it can wind through. During the summer its excursions are extensive; but in the winter it chiefly confines itself in barns and farmyards, where it remains till spring and where it brings forth its young.

All this season, it makes war upon rats and mice with still greater success than the cat, for being more active and slender, it pursues them into their holes and after a short resistance destroys them. It creeps also into pigeon holes, destroys the young, catches sparrows and all kinds of young birds, and if it has brought forth its young, hunts with still greater boldness and avidity. In summer it ventures further from the house, and particularly goes into those places where the rat, its chief prey, goes before it.

The female takes every precaution to make an easy bed for her little ones, and lines the bottom of her hole with grass, hay, leaves and moss, and generally brings forth three to five to a litter. The weasel, like others of its kind, does not run on equably, but moves by bounding, and when it climbs a tree by a single spring it gets a good way from the ground. It jumps in the same manner upon its prey and, having an extremely limber body, evades the attempts of much stronger animals to seize it.

Next to the weasel in size and perfection alike in figure is the ermine. The difference between this and the former animal is so small that some writers give but one description of both. Some believe that the two kinds are distinct. The stoat, or ermine, differs from the weasel in size, being about nine inches long, whereas the former is not much above six.

The tail of the ermine is always tipped with black and is longer in proportion to the body and furnished with hair. The edges of the ears and the end of the toes of this animal are of a yellowish white, and although it is of the same color as the weasel, being of a lightish brown, and though both this animal as well as the weasel in the most northern part of the different countries changes color in winter and becomes white, yet even then the weasel may be easily distinguished from the ermine by the tip of the tail, which in the latter is always black.

A Notable Singer.

THE MUSICAL MOCKING-BIRD OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

From a Special Correspondent.

HERE is song indeed, for it flows in sweetest numbers from a mocking-bird. Not one in a cage, but a free songster out among the flowers and trees of its native land.

In Southern California the bird begins to sing in earnest, i. e., more frequently, about the first of February. From then to August one may enjoy his lovely solos and imagine the delights of a musical paradise. Such beautiful arias, such abandon to song life; such appropriation and enjoyment of bush, fence, pole, high-strung wires, chimneys or lofty treetops! Anything will do on which he can perch and sing, not for five or ten minutes, but for a half-hour at a time. His wonderful throat seems tireless, his musical ability always at its best.

To hear a neighborhood mocking-bird from day to day is to learn to love it and appreciate it as a talented friend, who never tires of charming one away from petty cares and worryments.

Just before the first dawn, a liquid note is heard, followed by a whistle or a long trill; next a chirp, a few sharp notes and then a perfect rapture of full-throated song, changing wonderfully every second or two. The dear bird seems so delighted to be alive that it cannot suppress its glad tunefulness, and often for thirty minutes, without stopping for more than a few seconds at a time, it will pour out such rich and different notes that a bird lover wonders how the tiny throat can possibly produce the exquisite harmony. The mocker seems to be overflowing with happiness all the time. It will sing at the top of its voice while flying from one high point to another, and often may be heard on one side of a house one instant and on the opposite the next.

Several years ago in Whittier, as fine a singer as I ever heard made its headquarters in the chimney of a vacant house, and for five months its music could be heard day and night, for it often sang an hour or two between midnight and dawn. Last summer a mocker in San Diego sang at intervals all night. I was restless one night during the month of July, so quietly took a sheet and comfort and went to a cosy summer-house about 11 o'clock p.m. The bird was in full song. I dozed off and on until daylight, but most of the time was wide awake, enjoying the novelty of sweet fragrances, the occasional rustling of leaves, the starry procession overhead, and the sense of all outdoors in the sacred stillness of the night. Stillness? That blessed mocking-bird stirred the air. He would seem to call and laugh and whine and whistle, after which a little silence would ensue; then, as if from a nap, he would utter only a few notes, very slowly and sleepily; but presently he fully awoke again and then it was laughable to hear how he tried to make up for lost time. I never enjoyed anything more in my life, and for days afterward I was still telling of my wonderful feathery night singer. When I left the summer-house at daylight he was singing loudly, all sleep banished for at least twelve hours to come.

These birds have a strange habit of flying a yard or so above their perch every few minutes while they are singing. They never swerve to right or left, but fly straight up from wherever they happen to be and appear almost to turn a somersault in coming down, as if in play.

It is a mistake to think that these birds really mock others. All their notes are absolutely their own. I have heard very young ones trying their voices for the first time, and they went over all the many notes an older bird would, only not so perfectly. The meadow lark, which often sings song for song near a mocker, is never imitated. The mocker has none of the lark's notes, nor the linnet's or those of many other birds who are its near neighbors constantly. It does not need to mock, it has enough music for a dozen birds.

One day as I was walking along a San Diego street I noticed two mocking-birds acting very strangely. They were in a garden, one on each side of a low bush and as one went to the right side the other went to the left and then each reversed its position, but every little while both stood still until one began to dance as well as a bird can. The other kept perfectly still while the frisky one moved exactly as if its feet were on something too hot for them. Up and down it put them many times. Then the other went to the opposite side of the bush and the dancing stopped and the hide-and-seek was resumed. I watched them for twenty minutes, and during all their performance not a sound, not even a chirp was uttered by either bird. It was ridiculous, yet somewhat uncanny as well.

Neither in Florida nor in California are mocking-birds allowed to be shot or caught and caged. How could any one with a feeling heart imprison such a bird after seeing and hearing its delight in freedom and the Creator's great outdoors!

Paris's Gigantic Plans.*

TO SPEND $179,000,000 IN PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

By a Special Contributor.

PARIS is about to embark on the most gigantic scheme for municipal improvement and adornment ever attempted in Europe at a single move. The French Chamber of Deputies has authorized the city to borrow nearly 900,000,000 francs—$179,000,000—every penny of which is to be spent on public works in the next eighteen or twenty years.

The city which sprang from a settlement in a tiny island in the Seine, founded before Christ, has never entirely lost its medieval aspect. Under Napoleon III, Baron Haussmann effected a transformation on a scale of magnificence up to that time unparalleled. Dense groups of houses and numbers of tortuous streets were replaced by broad boulevards, spacious squares and palatial edifices.

But Haussmann's work was never finished. The Franco-Prussian war and the Commune intervened to pile up an enormous municipal debt and direct the attention of the people to subjects more sordid than that of the city's beautification. And the present plans contemplate much more than was projected years ago. Paris, more than ever, is to justify its name, "The City Beautiful," but it is to be made an up-to-date city, as well. Part of the new scheme was included in Haussman's plans, yet Haussmann never even dreamed of the city which will rise in the next score of years.

For a new Paris is to come into being. Many more narrow, winding streets are to give way to broad thoroughfares and many crumbling old buildings, of value only because of the historical memories they inspire, are to be replaced by edifices of twentieth-century achitecture. Paris is determined to rest no longer on the laurels won generations ago. It is to be in all respects a city of today.

It is only truth to say that Berlin's rapid accumulation of parks and boulevards and show places and its growing popularity as a mecca for tourists have been watched with jealous solicitude by Parisians—solicitude for the preëminence of their own city. The Kaiser's declared intention of making the Prussian metropolis the capital of Europe has at last aroused this city which claimed by inheritance Rome's place as "Mistress of the World," but which has done little in recent years in defense of the claim.

So in earnest are the legislators and the architects in advancing the present project that they already are boasting proudly that in future New York itself will have to look to Paris for lessons in the furthering of ambitious civic schemes.

Walls to Be Replaced by Boulevard.

Perhaps most notable of all the improvements to be effected will be the razing of the old fortifications and the encircling of the city with a magnificent boulevard, twenty-one miles in length. At intervals of approximately two miles circular playgrounds, with facilities for all sorts of open-air sports, are to be placed, these playgrounds numbering ten. This boulevard will be reached by nearly all of the twelve great avenues which radiate from the Arch of Triumph, at the Place d'Etoile, as well as extensions of the Grand and Outer boulevards, so-called as they exist at present. Also it will penetrate both the Bois de Boulogne, the most magnificent of the Paris parks, the Bois de Vincennes and the Parc de Montsouris.

One of Baron Haussmann's unfinished works is the boulevard which bears his name. This was constructed from the Arch of Triumph nearly two miles to a point a few blocks beyond the Opera, where it ends abruptly in the Rue Taitbout. A path is to be cut through no fewer than four city blocks in one of the busiest and most important sections of the city in order to give direct connection with the Grand boulevards. Where the Boulevard Haussmann, the Boulevard Montmartre and the Boulevard des Italiens meet, space will be afforded for one of the many new "breathing spots" which the new plans contemplate. The widening of streets, extension of avenues and construction of new boulevards, necessary to the harmony of the "picture" which the artist of "the Paris Beautiful" has drawn, will entail an outlay of $88,000,000.

Public Buildings Improved.

For the reconstruction and restoration of public buildings $5,000,000 will be set aside. Enormous sums have already been spent in repairing damage done by the Commune, but many buildings which were destroyed have never been replaced. A magnificent structure was erected on the site of the City Hall, which had been burned by the revolutionists, but the plan for rebuilding the Tuileries, for centuries a palace of kings, was discarded as impracticable. Portions of the Louvre Museum, the Hotel de la Cour des Comptes, the Council of State, the Ministry of Finance, and the Palace of the Legion of Honor, all of which were damaged, have been restored, not to mention the Palais Royal, the Gobelins and nearly 250 other public and private buildings. By a strange coincidence, the damage resulting from the Commune amounted to within one or two million francs of the sum now to be expended for general public improvement.

Among the municipal buildings which will be restored, enlarged or entirely replaced, in furtherance of the present project, are a large number of "town halls" of "mairies" of wards or "arrondissements" as the political divisions in Paris are called. The great Chateau d'Eau barracks, on the Place de la Republique, which has played an important role in more than one revolutionary uprising, is to be [illegible] the accommodation of the Republican [illegible] racks in the Rue de Rivoli is to be [illegible] various municipal departments, which [illegible] ning to outgrow the spacious Hotel de [illegible]

An annex [illegible] structed to the Labor Exchange, in which [illegible] lodges its trades-union organizations. The [illegible] Dogs' Home is to be torn down and [illegible] convenient location.

Fifteen Million Francs for Beauty [illegible]

Fifteen million francs ($3,000,000) is to be [illegible] gardens, promenades and parkways, in [illegible] boulevards already described. New [illegible] Paris is perhaps the richest city in the [illegible] regard, already—are to be created in all [illegible] many squares at present in course of [illegible] be finished. A Talk With a Dead One.

ST. VALENTINE GIVES AND TAKES A FEW COGENT FACTS.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

AS might be expected of a reporter going into a strange neighborhood for the first time, I got twisted and went to the wrong address. After I had explained my business to the Saint who answered the doorbell, he told me, speaking with a German accent, that I'd made a mistake in the house.

"Yes, I know," he went on when I pointed to the plate on the door, "the name is the same in both cases, but I happened to be merely the Saint Valentine who choked to death on a fish bone in the second century. The Saint Valentine you want to see is the one who was stoned and beheaded and everything. He lives two doors further down on this side of the street."

So I followed his directions and went two doors further down and I found the regular Saint Valentine at home. He received me very cordially. It had been a long time since he was interviewed for the press, and he was glad, he said, that the public still took an interest in one who had been living such a retired existence since 210 A. D., or thereabouts. At once I was struck by the fact that Saint Valentine conversed in a modern way. This seemed strange to me, seeing that he had been dead ever since the early Claudian era, which I take it, without knowing exactly, was quite a good ways back. I remarked on this, but he explained that since the great development in patent medicines and American railway disasters, and the wide growth of various outdoor sports, such as rocking-the-boat and blowing-down-the-muzzle, the country had filled up so fast with persons who dated from a comparatively recent period, that the earliest settlers had discarded practically all their ancient idioms and mainly used the same language that is talked in the United States.

I began the interview proper by asking how the Fourteenth of February came to bear his name and to be known for certain customs, saying there were a number of conflicting reports abroad and that the city editor of the paper had sent me to secure the correct facts from headquarters.

"Well," said St. Valentine, "that's a thing I never knew exactly myself. I must say that personally I never could see why these customs should have been ascribed particularly to me. I have been gratified, and at the same time mystified by it.

"From what I've read, I could readily understand why Saint Lawrence might suit your football players as a patron saint, because he's nearly always shown dying on a gridiron; and I can also see why Saint Sebastian, another of my contemporaries, might do for mental healers, as all his pictures represent him as going around shot so full of arrows that he looks sort of pincushiony and yet not suffering any pain or feeling the least bit inconvenienced or put out about it. But with me, now, it was different. There wasn't much time or opportunity for us pioneer bishops of the faith to be promoting romances among the young in those iron days when the reigning Roman tyrant was having his early Christian martyrs served to order in any style for breakfast every morning. I know I didn't. I have heard since that some of the best authorities say the habit among the young of exchanging love messages on my day is a survival of the pagan Lupercalia, which occurred in February and was a sort of annual benefit performance for the heathen vaudeville sketch team of Juno and Pan, refined knockabout artists and musical entertainers. I can't help you to clear up that matter, either. I've made some inquiry among my neighbors, but on that point, as on many other points in history, I find that the parties who were present and on the spot are rarely as certain and positive about a thing as a lot of people that were born ten or twelve centuries later.

"But be that as it may," continued Saint Valentine, "I've always taken great pride and comfort in the thought that so many beautiful and sentimental customs were coupled with my name and my memory. Lately, I'll confess I haven't kept very closely in touch with them, but I have no doubt they are kept up practically as they used to be."

I could see then that Saint Valentine was due for a jolt among his sensibilities, but I didn't say anything.

"I suppose," he went on, beaming genially, "that the birds still mate on February 14?"

I could tell by his face that the shock was severe when I told him that in the climate I came from, the only birds much in evidence on the 14th of February were canvas-back ducks at $4 apiece, in the refrigerating department of the restaurants; and English sparrows; and that the ducks were rarely seen in pairs owing to the price and the cold-storage perfumery which they seemed to disseminate upon being heated over a stove; while the sparrows mainly spent their time abusing the United States and making a living off it, the same as most of our other visitors from England, particularly the English actors.

"But the song birds," said the surprised saint, "the robins and the larks and the cardinals?"

I explained to him that in our active civilization mere song birds were not encouraged in our cities, except in millinery stores where, owing to their being stuffed with sawdust and kept in showcases, the opportunities for mating were so scarce as really not to count. I was going to say that the only song birds that really found favor with us nowadays were those that could earn their keep, such as ostriches and Brown Leghorn hens and turkeys at 42 cents a pound, but he broke in:

"But the young and romantically-inclined exchange tokens and messages of affection and plight their troth, do they not? How the love letters used to fly on Saint Valentine's Day!"

As gently as I could, I told him if we disliked any one, or wanted to wound the feelings of some sensitive maiden lady or some peculiar old gentleman with a hobby, we sent her or him a printed atrocity in a plain envelope on February 14, it being just as satisfactory as anonymous letter, and not nearly so dangerous.

"And you call these things comics?" he said musingly. "What a peculiar use of a word which I always conceived to be expressive of gaiety and good humor. Yet love letters must still be sent, and treasured by their recipients, even as minted gold?"

"Oh, yes," I said, glad to be able to prove to him that romance among us had not entirely died out. "If a young and sappy millionaire writes love letters to a young lady connected with the drama, she certainly does treasure them. Wild horses couldn't tear them away from her, and if she is smart enough to get a lawyer who can read them to the jury with proper emphasis on the most sentimental and mushy passages they are liable to be worth quite a good deal of the minted gold to her. Some of the best laughs we get out of our courthouses are provided by the way members of our younger millionairing set are accustcmed to spell words of more than two syllables. In your time, sir, and for some time subsequently, I believe all the world loved a lover. Now, all the world loves to laugh at one. About the only persons we have left who can make love successfully in public are Messrs. Hackett and Faversham, who do so best at a Saturday matinée in a town where there's a girls' finishing school. For evening performances, problem dramas and Ibsen mainly have the call."

"You astonish me," said Saint Valentine, "and distress me as well. But possibly the old Lupercalian custom of putting the names of persons of the opposite sexes in a box and permitting them to draw new choices from it is still kept up in some form or another."

"Yes," I said, "we do that. Reno, Nev., is a favorite place for that sport, and Sioux Falls, S. D., used to be, but isn't any more. But it isn't confined to the 14th of February. It's usually done on the first day of court term when the presiding judge calls the divorce calendar. Many of our leading society people follow the custom of drawing new choices as a regular thing. With some of them it amounts to an annual custom."

For a while the good saint sat in thougnt, nursing his knee. I was going to ask him what he thought of our skyscrapers and the superior beauty of our women as compared with the beauty of the women in other countries, because it is customary among the best reporters to ask those questions of all foreign visitors as early in the interview as possible; but I remembered that probably Saint Valentine hadn't been to New York yet and I caught myself. Presently he said, more to himself than to me:

"Well, I'm sorry—I'm very sorry to hear it. But it's what one gets for not reading the newspapers regularly and keeping abreast of the times. Here I've been mooning along all these ages, believing that the intertwined hearts and the cooing pigeon and the cupid's darts and all those things were still popular institutions among you. And now, I gather, when you mortals aim something at a sentimental and romantic heart, you mainly choose an arrow that will rankle and leave a sting. I suppose my neighbor, Epictetus, who lives just around the corner and belongs to the same bowling club I do, was right the other night when he called me a back number. I was speaking of the love affair of Abelard and Heloise, a case in which I took a deep personal interest at the time, when Epictetus spoke up and said a party named Pinney Earle and a lady friend of his had tried the Abelard and Heloise business some time ago, and the populace threw eggs at them. Epictetus said that with eggs at their present price, a person would have to hate you very much before he'd actually throw one at you."

Then a gleam of faint hope seemed to come into the Saint's dulled eye, and he chirked up and said:

"Surely the art of letter writing, even in an age of aggravated progress, cannot have entirely degenerated into business correspondence done on a typewriter and exhibits in breach-of-promise suits? My young friend, do me a favor—please search your memory and tell me whether there isn't somewhere, some class of people who write to the objects of their fancy with fervor and meaning, and who follow up the written expression with actual deeds?"

"Yes," I said, "there is—the Black Hand."

Asphalt Lumber.

The term "lumber" formerly was applied only to wood, but it has now been combined with the word asphalt to form a term so new as to be capable of copyright.

It means a board-like product which, while composed of layers of a special long fiber felt saturated with a composition of asphalt, says Cassier's Magazine, can be cut, worked, joined and nailed like wood. This material, originally designed for roofing, and absolutely water and weather-proof, is manufactured in a stock size, 36 inches wide and 6, 8, 10 or 12 feet long. The boards are made with a one-inch rabbet, running the full length on either side, enabling the material to be matched up readily and quickly, while a special asphaltic cement applied along the rabbeted joint makes the joints practically a part of the solid board.

Such a material naturally has many wider applications than those merely of roofing construction, and it is available in all building operations demanding a water-proof structure, capable of resisting heat or cold, and unaffected by the action of acids, gases, fumes, etc. The material is compressed in the course of manufacture to such a solid consistence that it may be classed as a fire retardent, while it may be surfaced with sand, gravel or mastic, as may be ordered.

In the manufacture of asphalt board there are used four layers of saturated felt, three of parchmentized cellulose and six of cementing composition to which are added two weather coats applied to the outside.

The Roosevelt Collection.

SOME OF THE LIVE ANIMALS SENT HOME BY THE EX-PRESIDENT.

By a Special Contributor.

THERE has arrived in Washington an aggregation of live things of the jungle from the Roosevelt-Smithsonian expedition in Africa. A score of strange creatures have been received and placed in the National Zoölogical Park, where all the world may see. So has the expedition gone beyond its original expectations and sent home live things in cages where it intended getting only their skins pickled in brine. The result is that Americans will gaze upon creatures they never saw before, for some of these are very rare. Further, they are back from Elba, and in that fact alone is contained much of interest.

When Col. Roosevelt and his party reached Nairobi, in the heart of the East African wilds, where game is as plentiful as cows in the meadows of Iowa, they came to the great ranch of W. N. McMillan an American hailing from Detroit, Mich., and indulged in a rest interspersed with just enough hunting to maintain interest. The attachés of the McMillan ranch were accustomed to stumbling over rhinoceros when they went out to milk the cow, tying tin cans to the tails of lions to keep them away from the chicken roosts, and getting confused between the barber-shop signs and the zebras that wandered about the streets of Nairobi. Among the great number of these things of the wild that hung about, a ranch hand now and then would take a fancy to some individual and convert it into a pet. This practice had gone so far that Mr. McMillan had found a full-sized menagerie quartered upon him, and this he proffered gratis to the Smithsonian Institution through the Roosevelt party.

It was accepted and the institution forthwith dispatched A. B. Baker, assistant superintendent of the National Zoo, to Africa for the new collection. He undertook the trip which led through the Suez Canal, halfway down the east coast of Africa, 250 miles by rail and twenty-five miles by wagon to the ranch. There he boxed the zoo and single-handed undertook the return trip. He found, however, that he was burdened with a considerable amount of impedimenta.

There was, to begin with, the lophiomys, the greatest curiosity of the whole collection. This is the first lophiomys that was ever captured. White man never looked upon one before, and scientists knew not of its existence. It has been so little heard of that it had never, before starting for America, acquired a popular name. The seamen came to call it "Loafy" for short, and, because of its tendency to do nothing but sleep by day, although it was sufficiently active by night to make amends. Loafy is a nocturnal tree rodent about the size of a cat. It makes its home in the dense forests that flank Mount Kenia and to which few white men have ever penetrated. The Winderobo hunters, famous for their prowess and activities in the region around Lake Victoria, recently told the British game wardens of the existence of this strange creature. The wardens offered a reward for the capture of one of them alive, and a party of natives came to camp the day before the Smithsonian consignment was to start for America, and displayed the strange creature, which was then seen for the first time by white man. Upon the question of its classification there is threatening a war in the ranks of scientists who do this sort of thing. Some hold that it is a member of the rat family, others that it belongs to the squirrel family, and yet others that it casts its lot in with the skunks. The result of the controversy is as yet too uncertain for the hazard of a guess at the result. So little was known of the creature that the question of its tastes in matters of food and manner of life were puzzling, and its care as a consequence was full of problems.

There were five lions in the collection, regarded by authorities who have seen them as being the finest group now in captivity. These had been captured young at the McMillan ranch and had been given the heavy feeding treatment. The lion of the wilds is known to go hungry for great periods of time at certain seasons, and is often thin and emaciated from starvation. His growth is stunted from this lack of nourishment. The men of the McMillan ranch, however, made a practice of shooting a zebra or a wildebeeste every day for their pets, and kept them abundantly supplied. They waxed fat and grew wondrous large for their ages. The two-year-old males are as large as most mature lions. The females are sleek and fat, even after their long trip, and are excellent specimens. All are of the light color of the lions of Central Africa, contrasting strongly with the dark gold of the beasts from further north, the variety most often captured.

There are likewise five antelopes. The elands are the biggest of these, and, in fact, the largest antelopes that the world knows. Some of them are six feet six inches in height at the withers. They are as big as cows and there is a movement on foot to domesticate them and raise them industrially for profit from their meat and for their service as drawers of loads. They are the tamest of all antelopes and lend themselves readily to this sort of scheme. There are two hartebestes which also belong to the antelope family, although they differ greatly from the elands. The hartebestes are awkward and uncouth creatures, narrow-headed, unintelligent. They are rare in captivity, and this pair is thought to be the only ones of their kind in America, and the records show none in European zoos. The hartebeeste is the "kanguni" of the African natives, and is widely distributed.

There is a single water buck in the collection, also not known to exist in America in captivity or otherwise, but the possibility of starting a race of this creature was prevented by the death of its mate in course of transportation. There is a single Thomson's gazelle in the aggregation, the most delicate, the frailest and the prettiest of all the animals of the Dark Continent. Grant's gazelles are not so rare, and have been seen in circuses in America, but this species has hitherto proven too delicate for transplanting. The present specimen has acquired the name of Alphonse in the course of the recent journey, despite the fact that is of the female persuasion. It also received a broken leg before leaving Africa, but has recovered. The gazelle is of the antelope family, despite its contrast to other members in size and strength.

The wart hog is the most uncanny of all the collection. Its chief feature is its teeth. The creature has been named Teddy, also in transportation, by the sailors, and without so much as a "by your leave." The wart hog is now rare in captivity, although there were a number of specimens some years ago. It is not covered with warts, as the name would imply, but gets its name from certain protuberances on the sides of its head that are not warts at all.

There is a peculiar, long-legged leopard in the collection that is known as a cheetah among the natives. This leopard is tamed and trained to hunt by the natives of South Africa, and becomes very skillful in its work for its masters. It is said that this is the individual leopard which said to the lion when the strenuous colonel entered the jungle: "You beat it, I am spotted already." There is a young baboon that was brought to America because of its apparent great intelligence, which is to be studied scientifically, educated, and which may possibly at some time break into society. There is a zebra which is of no particular significance, a Bateleur eagle, noted for its coloring, a crested eagle of great size, an African hawk and one or two other members of the feathered world.

This collection is no mean amount of baggage for one man to undertake to convey single-handed half-way around the world. Yet the task was accomplished and all the accompanying difficulties were successfully met. The trip from the McMillan ranch to Nairobi, twenty-five miles away, was made by South African trolley, as ox-team travel is styled, and consumed two days. It might have been made more quickly by mule team, and the McMillan ranch boasts an excellent one, but when lions roar, mules are prone to scamper away across the plain, and this might have proven disastrous to the menagerie. There were eighteen oxen in tho team used, and there was no danger of inability to move the load.

In Nairobi Mr. Baker met Col. Roosevelt and several members of his party who had come in for a touch of civilization and were staying at the McMillan town house. The former President reported that he was having the time of his life, was as brown as a berry, as hard as iron, somewhat frayed as to hunting suit, and considerably reduced as to weight. Kermet was still full of the same brand of Roosevelt enthusiasm, and seemed to be standing the life admirably. He has acquired the title of being the best marksman of the party. TELLS HOW BIG BILL ENCOUNTERED DIMINUTIVE STRANGER.

By a Special Contributor.

BIG BILL had been drinking a little too much for his ordinarily amiable disposition. As he lounged about the little depot platform at Las Cruces waiting the arrival of No. 9 from Albuquerque—the regular morning diversion of Las Cruces' leisure class—the desire of his nomadic nature for some new entertainment seemed to well up with sudden insistence. The roar of the approaching train relieved his pent spirit temporarily, and as the long, dust-laden Overland came to a grinding halt Big Bill watched the alighting passengers with speculative interest. Suddenly he straightened his long legs and crowded forward, a malicious light in his bloodshot eyes. A little man clad in a black suit and derby hat, with both hands incumbered with bundles, came toiling along the platform. Big Bill's lowered shoulder caught the little man squarely in the back. The black derby rolled across the platform and one of the bundles slipped from the man's grasp.

"Oh, excuse me!" apologized Big Bill with exaggerated urbanity.

The diminutive stranger deliberately deposited his baggage and surveyed his tormentor coolly, a whimsical light in his steel-gray eyes. If he suffered any mental fluster, it did not appear on the surface.

"Pick up the hat!" he said quietly.

The jeer on Big Bill's lips died in sudden amazement. The unruffled dignity of the little man's demeanor had been sufficient occasion for surprise, but the unmistakable menace in the few incisive words cut through Big Bill's armor of blustering hauteur with baffling effectiveness. Big Bill had been bluffed at his own game. He stooped awkwardly and restored the derby to its owner.

The little man, having regained his belongings, trudged leisurely along the platform to the 'bus of the Don Fernando Hotel, where, Big Bill observed later, he registered as J. Simmons of New York.

"A tourist—probably shy on lung tissue," was the succinct comment of M. Friedberg, the proprietor, in reply to Bill's inquiry as to the stranger's business.

"More Rain in Estancia Valley—Shake-up in Santa Fé—Fred Orndoff Fires Two Deputy Mounted Police——" The hotel man continued to read the headlines from his Albuquerque Citizen, but Big Bill was not listening. He strolled into the street and along the pillared portico of the quaint adobe hotel. His attention was attracted by Pinto, his cow pony, tethered to a post across the street. He had forgotten Pinto. He hesitated a moment, then walked slowly across the sandy street and mounted the pony.

An hour later in the Central Saloon a dust-begrimed ranchman came upon a half-dozen of his friends.

"I see Big Bill heading for the range again," he remarked. The others exchanged significant glances.

"How many have you missed?" asked one of the group.

"I figure ten calves," the speaker paused to allow his hearers to weigh his words, "and five cows that I found with bullet holes in them." The others crowded forward excitedly.

"The —— is killing our cows so the calves he brands won't follow them and give him away!" The speaker nodded.

"Of course nobody knows Big Bill's got anything to do with this," cautioned one of the group.

"No, that's the trouble! There was a bunch of yearlings with his brand shipped from Dona Ana last week, but you can't prove anything by that. Whoever it is does his work when he knows we are at a safe distance."

"We might extend Big Bill a private invitation to leave the country and see if this 'rustling' stops," suggested one.

"You can't do that any more," objected another. "This is a day of 'law and order,' you know. You have to catch a man with the goods."

Ten miles out on the Organ trail, Big Bill turned to the right across the trackless mesa. From behind a boulder in an arroyo he extracted a short-armed branding iron and concealed it in his saddle bags. Then he rode steadily mile after mile up the gently-sloping mesa until the foothills of the Organs gave him a commanding view of the Mesilla Valley. Here and there on the far slopes little groups of dark spots stood out against the faint green of the range. Big Bill made a careful mental note of these and rode rapidly away down one of the steep-walled cañadas.

The problem of heating a branding iron without a tell-tale column of smoke Big Bill had solved by carrying a quantity of charcoal in his feed bags. It would be a shrewd plainsman who could follow his devious wanderings among the rolling hills unobserved, and he had little fear of detection. He did his work methodically and in three days had added a dozen calves to his brand. In several instances he thought it advisable to sacrifice the cows.

Late on the third day he roped a calf near a water hole in a narrow ravine. Leaving the animal struggling on the long lariat, he rode rapidly to the top of the adjacent hill and scrutinized the surrounding country. No evidence of life save the herd of cattle grazing below appeared in any direction. The country was more broken than that in which he usually operated, but emboldened by success, he decided to take the risk. Returning rapidly, he kindled the charcoal fire and heated the iron. As the searing metal sank into the calf's flank, Big Bill's pony which he had left to graze near by, reared with a snort and shied into the greasewood. Big Bill reached for his six-shooter instinctively, but he was too late.

"Drop it!" came a sharp command behind him. Facing about, Big Bill encountered his captor. Twenty yards away, a diminutive horseman in a grotesquely-fashioned "tenderfoot" riding garb covered him with a Winchester. Big Bill stared for a moment in speechless surprise, then a sheepish grin spread across his face.

"You sure give me a start—I guess you are good and even for my little joke the other day. Get down, and let's eat. I was just branding one of my calves."

The stranger smiled amiably, but he did not stir.

"That was a mean joke you played on me," he answered thoughtfully, "especially when I came down here to get you, and had this thing under my coat." He edged his coat backward with his elbow, still keeping Bill covered with the Winchester.

"New Mexico Mounted Police," spelled Big Bill slowly. "You! Well, I'll be damned!"

The little man's smiling demeanor had vanished, save for the whimsical glint in the steel-gray eyes.

"Rather a bad joke, eh? Come, now, get a move on!"

BLOTTING PAPER.

ITS ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY LED TO THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A GREAT INDUSTRY.

[T. P.'s Weekly:] Blotting paper was discovered purely by accident. Some ordinary paper was being made one day at a mill in Berkshire when a careless workman forgot to put in the sizing material. It may be imagined what angry scenes would take place in that mill, as the whole of the paper made was regarded as being quite useless. The proprietor of the mill desired to write a note shortly afterward, and he took a piece of waste paper, thinking it was good enough for the purpose. To his intense annoyance the ink spread all over the paper. All of a sudden there flashed over his mind the thought that this paper would do instead of sand for drying ink, and he at once advertised his waste paper as "blotting." There was such a big demand that the mill ceased to make ordinary paper, and was soon occupied in making blotting only, the use of which spread to all countries. The result now is that the descendant of the discoverer owns the largest mills in the world for the manufacture of this special kind of paper. The reason the paper is of use in drying ink is that really it is a mass of hair-like tubes which suck up liquid by capillary attraction. If a very fine glass tube is put into the water the liquid will rise in it owing to capillary attraction. The art of manufacturing blotting paper has been carried to such a degree that the product has wonderful absorbent qualities.

All blotting paper is made from rags. The original blotting paper was of a pink color, due to the fact that red rags were used—rags which could not be used for making the ordinary paper, as the color could not be removed. Here was a method for using the apparently useless matter, and so for a long time pink was the predominant color. It is a matter for surprise what curious preferences are shown by various people with regard to the color of the blotting paper they use. Business men greatly prefer that of a buff color. This is preferred to white from the fact that it is more easily distinguished from the letters that are handled, while at the same time it is not sufficiently striking to seem out of place in an office. It is only in this country that buff-colored blotting paper is the favorite. Countries which possesses hot climates prefer green, and this preference can readily be understood when it is remembered that green is such a restful color to the eyes. The people on the continent have quite a different taste from our own with regard to the color of the paper; they prefer vivid colors, showing especial preference for deep pink. Ladies of all lands prefer more dainty colors, chiefly mauve. This colored blotting paper, by the way, was also accidentally produced in the first place; in this case some blue and red rags became mixed together, and so this color was produced.

There is an opinion which seems to be fairly prevalent that colored papers do not blot as well as white. As a matter of fact, the color makes no difference at all to the absorbent quality of the paper, the particular tint depending purely upon the blending of the rags. Quite the newest tint is black. This is preferred by persons who do not wish anybody to see what has been written. If an ordinary piece of blotting paper, say white has been used, it is quite easy to read what has been blotted simply by holding the paper up to a mirror. The black paper, however, absorbs the ink marks without showing them. In the case of the sovereign any piece which has blotted His Majesty's signature is at once destroyed. As a matter of fact, King Edward VII always uses an extra thick white sheet of blotting, known technically as "Ford's 80-pound white," though until recently very thin pink paper was that preferred for official use.

Signatures.

I rambled through a graveyard old,
Unknown to care or fame,
Above each grave there stood a stone,
And on each stone a name.

And as I read, it seemed to me
Like to a guest-book, where Stray pilgrims set their signatures
On pages white and bare.

Since, but for this half-faded sign,
No mortal eyes might see
That they had traveled through this world
Unto eternity.

Gen. Wood the Virile.

STORY OF THE ARMY'S NEW CHIEF OF STAFF.

By a Special Contributor.

VERY shortly Leonard Wood, the man who abandoned the art of dispensing pills of physic and prophylactic powders for the art of dispensing pills of lead and smokeless powder, will become the army's chief of staff. This honor will come to him while he is still in his forties, and he will be the youngest man to command the army of the United States for a generation, or since the days of Grant and Sherman.

No officer of the army, with the exception of Grant himself, has been the recipient of such bitter calumnies and such unstinted encomiums as those which have been heaped upon his head.

If we were limited to one adjective in which to condense all of the others that correctly define Leonard Wood, that word would be "virile." It was he who inspired the most radical of the Roosevelt doctrines aimed at the elimination of pursiness and paunchiness from our body militant. And Leonard Wood has ever been able to accomplish what his chum and boon companion never could effect, by way of example to all military men—the preservation of his own waist line. But Theodore Roosevelt's struggle for physical vigor was an uphill fight against the handicap of a puny boyhood. Wood had the advantage of a Spartan boyhood.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood

Dr. Wood before the war

A Spartan Boyhood.

His gymnasium was the salubrious shore of Cape Cod, where every breeze is tonic and every gale a stimulant. Hither his father, a country doctor, who had fought in the Civil War, moved from the old home—Leonard Wood's birthplace—in New Hampshire. The boy gunned among the sand dunes, rode bareback over the beaches, sailed his boat over the sapphire sea and, baring his whole hide to the elements, breasted the tides and battled with the breakers. All of this was good for Scotch-Irish-English blood, which had come down from Mayflower and revolutionary stock. Indeed, he was a direct descendant of Peregrine White, the first colonial Puritan born on American soil, and of Gen. Nixon, who fought at Lexington, Bunker Hill and Saratoga.

Leonard Wood was then a tow-headed, gray-eyed, slender boy, who could enjoy these diversions only between chores. But throughout his school days at the county school and an academy in town he kept up his interest in athletics, even to the extent of gaining fame as a cross-country runner. All the while he hoped and prayed to be a soldier, but his father, who had had his taste of war, was obdurate. So the young man won enough scholarships to keep him in the Harvard Medical School for a couple of years. He also made extra money by tutoring the younger boys, and in his third year won a competitive examination for service in a Boston hospital. All of this while, however, he had been poring over military text-books, and this study he continued even after becoming a private practitioner in Boston. So when at the age of 25 he had a chance to take the examination for assistant army surgeons he went to New York eagerly enough. He passed second in a large number of competitors, and pending a vacancy in the regular establishment gladly accepted a temporary assignment as contract surgeon at $100 per month.

The prevalent notion that Leonard Wood's jump from the Medical Corps to the fighting line of the army was the result of afterthought or accident is erroneous. It was the result of deep-laid design. Arriving at his post, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., he met Capt. (afterward Gen.) Lawton and at once confided to him his ambitions to fight his way to the line at once. He had taken the Arizona assignment because it was the only one in that year, 1886, which offered any chance of a fight. Geronimo and his Apaches had long been on the rampage—had killed 800 victims. Gen. Miles and Capt. Lawton were there to stamp out the rebellion.

A Wonderful Walker.

Wood and Lawton together trailed the hostile Apaches for 2000 miles through desert and cactus, across mountain and mesquite thicket, under a terrible sun which felled both men and horses. Finally the infantry lost its last officer and the commander had to select one of his staff to fill the gap. It was now that the young contract surgeon was to be amply repaid for all of those hours devoted to military science while studying and practicing medicine. He was put in command of the infantry, serving now both as line officer and surgeon—practicing at one and the same time both the science of taking and the science of saving life. By forced marches they arrived at the Mexican frontier, but Lawton had to have orders from Washington before he could cross and the nearest telegraph office lay far across a hostile country. Wood, although he had marched twenty-five miles on foot that day, volunteered to make the trip in the night. Taking one companion, who dropped out after trying to keep up with him for twenty miles, the young surgeon covered seventy-three miles that night and returned to camp in time for breakfast. After breakfast he walked thirty-four miles at the head of the infantry, which made a total of 152 miles in thirty-six hours—fifty-nine miles on foot and seventy-three miles in the saddle. He was said to be the only man in the little band who could outmarch an Apache.

After Geronimo's capture Lawton referred to him in his report as "the only officer who has been with me through the whole campaign." And to Gen. Miles Lawton wrote of Wood: "He sought the most difficult and dangerous work and by his determination and courage rendered a successful issue of the campaign possible." The young surgeon got his commission as assistant surgeon of regulars just before Geronimo's surrender. And afterward he was awarded a Congressional medal of honor for "specially courageous and able services involving extreme peril and display of most conspicuous gallantry."

Always an Athlete.

Having thus distinguished himself in this campaign against the Apaches—which Gen. Miles described as "one of the most laborious, persistent and heroic campaigns in which men were ever engaged"—Wood commanded an expedition sent out to capture Indian prisoners who had escaped into Mexico. And his next duty was against "Apache Kid" in 1887-8; then he commanded a heliographic survey for a couple of years, had charge of the military hospitals at Fort McDowell, Ariz., on the edge of the great American desert; at the Presidio, San Francisco, and at Fort McPherson, Ga. All of this time he kept up his athletic training. He was a star on the post football teams, and at the Presidio he made a record for a track run of seventeen and a half miles in two hours and a quarter, in street clothing.

In 1890 he married Miss Louise A. Condit Smith of Washington, whose sister was one of the refugees in the American legation during the Boxer uprising at Peking, and in 1891 he was promoted to the rank of captain and assistant surgeon. Then, in 1895, he was ordered to Washington to attend the families of army officers. And soon after President McKinley's inauguration he became attending physician at the White House.

A Winter Walk.

Getting a Glimpse of Nature After Her Housecleaning.

By a Special Contributor.

I had ventured out to see my favorite range of hills in their January mood, to ask a few questions of the early grass blades and lay my fingers on the pulse of spring to find if I might estimate the number of days I must wait for the coming of the wild flowers. It was one of those surprising mornings which had left a film of ice over the tub of rainwater in many a city back yard, and the stir in the air was from an east—a snowy—direction.

The world was marvelously clean that morning, with a fresh look about everything which indicates a recent bath—sort of rosy about the rims of the ears and pleasantly damp at the edge of the hair. The young eucalyptus trees had lost their soft dusty blue color and were bravely red at every leaf in the early sunlight. The older trees wore a well-groomed look unusual in the easy-going eucalypt, all their stray tags of bark stripped off by the wind and their coats washed in rainwater until they shone with the glossy blackness of Sunday broadcloth. Even the soil under foot had the chocolate washed-and-rinsed effect of a scrubbed baby. Everything in fact was clear and clean except the water which had done the washing, and it, wherever I glimpsed it close at hand, was brown and muddy, as if it had removed a great deal of dirt. I wonder if we in California do not get so used to a certain amount of dimness of landscape that it must always come as a delightful surprise to go out and find once in a year or so that Nature has been hard at work with a copious rain, digging out the corners of the cañons and washing every separate thing with her own hands instead of turning the task over to the careless housemaid winds, who are prone to whip the dust from one place only to let it fly somewhere else? Are we not a bit spoiling ourselves in this gentle climate where a day of dust more or less makes but small difference. Do we not need the moral stimulus of vigorous bracing weather, to put vim into our indolent veins and a crisp note into our languid laughter? I felt my blood responding to the challenge of the morning as it dared me to get off the car and show what I was made of if I loved the outdoors as much as I said I did, so I demonstrated the sincerity of my claim by boldly plunging into the heart of the wild handicapped though I was with rubbers and extra wraps.

The landscape seemed remarkably quiescent that cold, gray day. My valley lay spread before me, as I viewed it from the steep slope I had been at some pains to climb, owing to the slipperiness of the wet ground, ruddy brown and soft where the plowshares had been busy getting ready for the seed time. In patches was the yellow-green of vegetable-garden growth, in other places orchards of bare gray fruit trees with fingers a-touch looking up at the blue sky waiting for a shower of leaves and bloom. Beyond them were the undulating hills of emerald with beautiful blue lights in their hollows, and farther on, the sky was met by the piled-up height of the Sierra Madre Mountains, the lovely range of such steadfast dependable beauty that its charm is wholly superior to atmospheric change. The snowy robes these had lately worn, however, were already in holes, until they appeared more like lacy mantles than furry storm cloaks, though the San Bernardino peaks to the east of them were still clothed in smooth, heavy cloaks of white. Just at my feet crept the gray river, but little darker than the sand of its banks, so sparsely sheltered now by the willows, which were almost bare of leaves. But such color as ran through those long lines of willows!—saffrons and scarlets, like hints of flame. It cast a pale light along the entire edge of the valley and seemed to kindle into a delicate warmth the air coming from the distant snow fields.

When I turned a certain point of hill beneath an oak I hoped to follow my familiar path along the bed of an abandoned watercourse, but its wetness daunted my overshoes, and I reluctantly chose instead the path along the brow of the hill above. Here plowed land met wilderness at the margin of path, and I had to pick my way carefully on rugs of brown dead grass to avoid sinking into the soft loam of the one side or slipping on the glassiness of wet adobe of the other. The day was so still that the rustling of small winged things among the branches of the oak trees was plainly heard, though the birds uttered no voice. Great clusters of brown leaves were hanging in places from the trees, and no new leaves or tassels had yet appeared. Perhaps these valley trees are not so brisk in donning spring finery as their relatives of more northern station. Tiny mustard leaves pierced the ground in many places and alfilerilla mingled with the young grass, but there was no other color than green. Farther on where the mustard stalks of last year stood naked and gray in masses against the dark hillside, they held the light in such fashion as to give a hint of lavender or amethyst, after the strange way of the dead of that peculiar gray-brown hue. There is something weird and fascinating about this illusion of color in dead things. It is like a spirit hovering over the material form it has once inhabited, a ghost of the blossom that is loth to relinquish its original habitation. It is as ethereal as a circle of light about the moon—and as unsubstantial, as lacking in definite form.

At the end I reached my oak—My Oak. The ascent to it was by a sharp slant balustrated by the chaparral, and its reception-room proved to be swept and garnished against the coming of guests. Many dead brown leaves lay about to break the jar of one's tread, and the grass met the tender green leaves at the tips of the long branches which touched the floor on all sides. Underneath and close to the trunk it was growing, too, the brave young grass which comes out in all weathers to answer to the summons of the first winter rainfall. The vistas of the valley from between the drooping branches were lovely with a promise of more loveliness to come, but the tree itself was the same noble, hospitable, inspiring friend that an oak tree is at all seasons of the year, and to all who may seek its shelter. It is Cowper who says:

> "It seems idolatry with some excuse
> When our forefather Druids in their oaks
> Imagined sanctity."

This oak of mine must surely have been a temple in some elder day, for I find it more than easy to worship beneath it now—more than easy in that there is almost a compulsion of the soul when under its influence to look up and beyond to the God who created oaks and made them a type of faithfulness for fickle man.

In the hollow beyond the oak was a tangle of wild blackberry vines rich garnet in hue, ruddy as the very embers of autumn. Then began the long climb which led to the highest and most easterly point of my hills, below which spreads a panorama of valley and foothill and mountain the habitants of Olympus itself might envy as an outlook. The silt had so washed from this precipitous trail that broken ledges of clay appeared like a white staircase between the crowding bushes of mountain chaparral. Here glowed great clumps of ruby holly berries, larger, redder, more abundant than any fruit of the milder winters, and nodding opposite that other holly-like plant bearing clusters of fine pink tassels just now about to break into waxen bloom. The sage, too, was putting forth vigorous green foliage on the dried old stalks, while damp spots along the way were turfed with rich moss with a pile like plush which could be brushed this way and that in its softness. In many places this mossy ground was elastic under foot, with thé springy quality one associates with close-cut ancient lawns. The moss was a compact mass of tiny fronds interspersed with an infinitesimal fungus growth which showed white amid the velvety green, and I suppose that there are even more infinitesimal animalculae to whom those fairy tufts appear forests of stately trees—"for there's never a leaf nor a blade too mean to be some happy creature's palace." Thus are the comparative values of all things daily illustrated. My house is a stately tree to him who dwells in a sheep cot; it is a blade of grass to the tenant of the "moted grange," while to me it is simply home.

The summit, when after many breathing spells it had been reached, was plentifully green with shining, crinkly scrub oak with leaves like English holly, and red with more of the bright native holly, across whose warm color the distant views revealed themselves. And the air where nothing hindered the clear sweep of icy breath from the opposite heights carried a tonic to the blood with each inspiration.

> " . . . Through the blue serene,
> For sight too fine, the ethereal nitre flies—
> Killing infectious damps, and the spent air
> Storing with elemental life."

But though the aromatic mountain growths were all about, there was no hint of fragrance in this keen, pure air. Down below there had been a pensive sweetness coming from the mouldering leaves beneath the willows and an occasional pleasantly-acrid whiff of eucalyptus smoke, but both those odors were from decomposition. Up here where life was in the full tide of upward flow, everything had been washed so clean that no scent was left in anything. Even the lusty sage gave out none of its accustomed pungency until broken and crushed between the fingers. It seemed that the "ethereal nitre" had left no place for sweetnesses intended for mere pleasures to the senses, so intent was it upon filling the vast aërial spaces with tonic qualities to be drawn upon later when the stimulating frosts had perforce given way to softer balms. There are times in life when every nerve and fiber is so employed with the generating of energy that there is no place left in the physical activity for deliberate enjoyments. Every instant is a time of high tension, of a storing of vitality while the atoms are ready to be stored, that when the leisure time comes a little later with its letting-down of both effort and desire for effort, the sober, beneficial results may continue unnoted while the senses luxuriate in the more voluptuous joys of sight and sound and outward movement.

The scene from this hill was an old and familiar one to me—the strangely-marked slopes of the northern mountains, like a marvelous backbone with a complex attachment of ribs, the grayish, snowy ones beyond, and the loftier eastern group of patriarchs which guard the gateway of the desert; but my companion likened the promontory on which we stood to the cliffs of Devon, imagining the valley below to be the sea. Again the foothills opposite were compared in contour to those of Natal. But I, knowing neither England nor South Africa, but only this one lovely valley in a close, familiar way, reflected that Richard Jefferies had gained his wealth of nature knowledge from thirty years' intercourse with one small range of hills, his study being, like western irrigation, intensive instead of extensive. And I extracted considerable comfort from the thought. There is after all much of truth in this bit of philosophy of Alphonse Karr's:

"The seasons as they pass away are climates which travel round the globe and come to seek me. Make you the tour of the world—for me, I will make the tour of my garden."

So I will continue to tour the hills overlooking my valley, and in them find the changing months bringing me a variety of delight and wisdom which though I circled the earth, I might still fail to discover. Let me cultivate the virtues of the seeing eye and the listening heart, that none of these sweet mysteries may pass me unremarked.

We followed the trail from here toward the westering sun, along paths as delicately marked against the short, fine grass as a tracery of frost on a window pane in those places where the chaparral had given way to wide, meadowy sweeps of green. Again we found oak trees, but look as we would, no poison oak appeared above ground—the only time in the round year when this mine enemy failed to dispute the way with me at one point or another. I wonder if he is more timid of the early month than I am. If so, I have for once proved my superiority to him. Then the clay formations reappeared on the downward slopes, with fresh bushes of green and here and there a white mountain sage with thick furry gray leaves. At last a dash of bright color caught our eyes, a scarlet penstemon with pendulous bells, the only wild flower, apparently, that had come up with the new year. Once before, I found a lone scarlet blossom, a paint brush, abloom on this wild hillside, the sole bit of warmth in a wilderness of green and gray. Perhaps this slope is a sort of signal hill where a floral torch flashes messages in a code which only the birds and the bushes understand. In that case I may, without intention, be responsible for an occasional delay in the mariposa crop, for I plucked up the signal both times.

Farther down came the broad green slopes again, and here we gathered mushrooms which at times were scarcely to be told from the little clayey rocks beside the path. The slanting light brought a changing color tone to both the far and the near landscapes, the clear light green of the sward close at hand deepening into the dusky jade of the chaparral and relieved by patches of the lavender dead weeds and stretches of prickly pear. On a little, brown shadows crept over the green, and out in the far open lay wide flat lands where flashing pools, the overflow from the recent freshet, caught the opalescent lights of evening. Beyond, where the sun hung poised above the horizon, a long line of indigo sea appeared, while a bit of beach where white breakers were rolling in showed through a gap in the sand dunes. Such color—such green and amber light in the sky above the hills which stood against the west! It shone with the pure brilliance of precious stones. And an infinitude of space was emphasized by three rose-hued bits of cloud gleaming in the lake of topaz about the sun. It takes always a small thing to help us gauge a great one, and nothing, not even the stars in their bewilderment of number and radiance, ever gives me quite the sense of space I gain from a small red cloud swimming in the sunset, like an island in a shoreless sea of light.

Turning toward the east, there shone the whitened peaks but faintly pink in this clear luminance, not richly stained as when the radiance in the sky is held and reflected by masses of cloud. The blue mountains below almost burned in the intensity of their purple beauty. The green foothills stood just under them, and then came the fertile brown fields. All were taking on now rare violet hues, until emerald and heliotrope seemed the prevailing tints in the entire range of vision, so pure, so soft, so unobscured by a wrath of mist or smoke in the eager winter air. With the descent to still lower levels we found the soft and more slipping soil until again the fallen oak leaves and long dried grass alone made safe footing. From the open road of the valley the red glow was seen still burning behind the intervening hills, and against it the trees made poster effects of striking character. The round, close oak became a huge rose with a heavy stem. The skeleton sycamore with its clean veinings was an age-thin hand reaching tenuously into the sky. And the black eucalyptus, drooping, strong and always picturesque, moved across the skyline like a gaunt giant with a cloak thrown over his arm.

Although Venus was glowing like a pale flame above the sunset and the deeper vaults of sky had become inlaid the usual patines of bright gold, it fast grew cold and dark now that the sun was gone, and pools of water in the road had to be avoided with care. January, the "churl son of Janus," was asserting himself as he had not quite dared in the daylight. But the air!—Clear draughts of ozone pure as the snow peaks whence it came—peaks out of vision for the darkness now, but obvious to the occult senses as a strange, strong presence—the air was the very essence of January, by day belied by the grass and the song birds, but now in the blue-blackness of night the edge of that keen knife called Winter.

Capitol's Power Plant.

LEGISLATIVE BURROWS UNDERMINING CAPITOL HILL.

FOR HEATING AND LIGHTING PURPOSES—NEW SENATE WING, JUST FINISHED, THE HANDSOMEST OFFICE BUILDING IN THE WORLD—HOUSEKEEPING FOR CONGRESSMEN ON A GIGANTIC SCALE.

By a Special Contributor.

BY next month, the wonderful new power plant established by Congress, four blocks south of the Capitol, will be started up, supplying with light and heat not only the Capitol itself, but also the two great office buildings of House and Senate, and the National Library. It is a very interesting engineering enterprise, the whole of Capitol Hill having been been literally undermined with burrows to carry the pipes and wires for the purpose.

Henceforward there will be no separate outfit for heating or illumination in any of the above-mentioned buildings, all of which will depend for light and warmth upon the power plant in question. The latter is connected by a cement-lined conduit, big enough for a man to walk through, with the system of tunnels, newly constructed, which joins the Library of Congress to the Capitol and the two huge white-marble Annexes. All of the system described is subterranean, not a sign of it appearing above ground.

The starting up of the power plant is practically coincident with the completion of the Senate Annex, which, about a year behind the House Annex in its construction, has only just received its finishing touches. It stands today, however, beyond comparison the handsomest and most magnificently equipped office building in the world. To all intents and purposes, it is an immense hotel, and is conducted on that basis, save only for the fact that it contains no bedrooms. It is for daytime use only, and nobody sleeps in it.

There are 110 suites of rooms. All of them are beautifully furnished, and they differ in point of desirableness only through the fact that some of them comprise three rooms, while others have but two. Each Senator has a suite for his own exclusive occupancy, and in every instance the apartment is connected with the meeting-room of a committee over which the Senator himself presides as chairman. These committee-rooms, by the way, are superbly fitted up, the great table around which the members sit on leather-covered chairs being of massive mahogany.

The House office building, which in plan and external aspect resembles that of the Senate, is quadrangular in shape. But the Senate Annex, though of the same dimensions, has no fourth side. Thus ($2,500,000 having been originally appropriated for each of the two buildings,) it has been found practicable to make the newly-finished Senate wing far more beautiful and luxurious inside than that of the House of Representatives. The money saved by omitting the fourth, or east, side has been put into interior improvements.

Now, there is a good deal about this new Senatorial palace that is out of the ordinary. For one thing, there are no charwomen. All of the cleaning and dusting, etc., is done by the "night men," who, fifteen in number, come on duty at midnight and go off at 8 o'clock in the morning. Thus the Senator, when he comes to his rooms, finds them in perfect shape. He is not bothered by intrusions for cleaning purposes, and never even sees the person who does the work.

When a Senator wants anything, he tells his clerk (paid by the government) to telephone to the hotel office—that is to say, to the office of the building, which is on the first floor, just inside the main entrance. There are twelve messengers and laborers always on duty in the daytime, and they are at the service of the occupants of the legislative flats. No women are employed in the building, save only three, of colored persuasion, who have charge of retiring rooms for lady visitors.

The housekeeping of the Senatorial flats costs $40,000 a year. This, of course, does not include fuel or lights. There are thirteen elevators, which are run from 7 a.m. to 12 midnight every day while Congress is in session, Sundays included—each of them, of course, requiring an attendant. Towels, and such other toilet necessaries as brushes and combs are supplied from the office. The building is under the charge of an official "custodian"—Mr. Al Werner.

New Senate office building.

Digging tunnel connectin
Capitol with House office

Mr. Werner, who keeps the hotel for Senators, is about 40 years of age, and looks younger. He hails from Idaho, and his beginning in life was made as clerk in a drugstore, which was owned by his mother, at a salary of $3 a week. For a while he did engineering work on the Northern Pacific Railroad, in Montana, and he has also been in the real estate business. He was a member of the Idaho Legislature when that body elected Senator Borah. It was through Borah that he came to Washington and, after serving for some time as assistant to Elliott Woods, the superintendent of the Capitol, was made custodian of the Senate flats. Werner is tall, dark, slender, and much liked by everybody.

The custodian of the House flats is W. R. Woolley of Cleveland, O., who was formerly employed as a civilian expert in connection with the river and harbor work of the War Department. From this he was detached to take charge of the mason work in the building of the House Annex, and was later on appointed to manage the building—that is to say, to keep the hotel for Representatives in Congress.

It has always been regarded as a matter of course that Senators should enjoy comforts somewhat superior to those provided for mere Representatives. Thus it is not surprising to find that automobiles are furnished to carry members of the Upper House back and forth through the tunnel which connects their flats with the Capitol, whereas legislators in the popular branch of Congress have the benefit of no such conveniences. Ever since the tunnels are dug between the Capitol and the two annexes it has been a puzzle to decide what mode of transportation should be adopted through them, and the question is still unsettled. Or

The Stew!

A Lively Little Comedy of Domestic Life.

By a Special Contributor.

MR. DRISCOLL strutted into the sitting-room, sniffing suggestively. "Smell that?"

His wife nodded, remarking: "I suppose you use the granite soup kettle—be careful, don't burn it."

"Granite nothing! I'm not making soup. I'm stewing the birds—good, old-fashioned stew with gravy like mother used to make, and I'm using the iron dinner pot as she always did. Harve Higgins is coming to sample it, and if he doesn't say that stew is the best dish he ever tasted, it's because he can't get over the fact that I shot three birds and he didn't so much as turn a feather."

"Yes, dear," she assented.

He plunged back to the kitchen, and she heard him poking the already roaring range. "He'll burn his birds to cinders," she reflected, but offered no useless advice; he was firmly convinced that he possessed unusual culinary skill, and resented interference. In his college days he had been camp cook on several occcasions, and had won laurels which he had never allowed to be forgotten; he would demonstrate, now, the proper way to prepare a stew of wild birds.

Presently with a shawl over his head, his feminine counterpart, a lady of a somewhat aggressive appearance, sailed in and looked about belligerently.

"How do you do, Maria? Take the easy chair," Mrs. Driscoll said pleasantly.

Ignoring the greeting and invitation, Maria brusquely announced her errand: Charles's great-aunt 'phoned she'll be out to dinner tonight, and I've come for my spoons."

Before his wife could reply, Mr. Driscoll bounced in, shouting: "Your spoons!"

"Yes, sir—my spoons!" His sister faced him, nodding defiantly. "They're mine my half of the year."

"And they're mine, my half. It's my half yet, and you don't get them."

"Your half is out today—I've kept count—you can see. And I mean to have them for the table tonight." She produced a note-book and thrust it, open, under his nose. "See!"

Pushing it aside, he also produced a note-book and proceeded to read his account (run down to minutes and seconds) in a triumphant voice, finishing with: "There! They're my spoons until eleven, nine and a half to night, and you don't get them one second sooner."

"The idea! Your six months are out today, and I'm not going home without my spoons," she flared emphatically.

"Then you'll stay till nine minutes and thirty seconds after 11 o'clock," he retorted as emphatically.

"I'll do no such thing! Your time's out today. I have evidence when you took them. Look at that! Mary Ellen Bates was there and wrote down the minute, signing her name as witness to it."

"And look at that!" he sputtered, showing his account again. "You sneaked here last year when I was away, and got them seven hours before your time—I'm making it up."

"Sneaked!" she shrilled angrily.

"Yes, sneaked. And you thought I'd be out, and I'd play the same——"

"Wilford," his wife interrupted softly, "I think something is scorching."

As he dashed through the dining-room, Driscoll's eye fell upon the ebony box containing the two dozen solid gold spoons, descended from Great-great-grandfather Van Vleeter. He caught it up, determined to hold on to it to the last second of his time. An acrid odor pervaded the kitchen. He jerked off the pot, threw the lid and peered in anxiously. "Oh, not much, dear," he muttered. "A little darkens the gravy, makes it all the better. Mother's good gravy was always dark." He poured in more water and set the pot on the fire again; then, chuckling over the thought that had occurred to him, he carefully slid the spoons into the stew, put the box in its place on the sideboard, and returned to the fray with elation.

"Wilford," his sister began the moment he appeared, "I'm going to have the Van Vleeter gold spoons upon my table tonight if I have to call the police to make you give them up."

"You shall not have them till the last second of my time—not if you call forty police!"

"Your time is out, and it's my right to have them!" she insisted, and launched into a vigorous rehearsal of the peculiar conditions of the ancient will, known to every letter by both of them, which forbade the dismemberment of the spoons, and the arrangement by which two branches of the family were to hold equal share and have equal custody of the articles; together with a full recital of her wrongs in the matter; interrupted continually by her brother in declamatory counter-assertions and denials.

The house rang with the noise of battle. Sister Maria becoming hysterical. "I tell you, I'll have them, I'll have my spoons!" she reiterated.

In the midst of Mr. Driscoll's heated reply, Mrs. Higgins, the next-door neighbor, in shopping attire, came and looked in hesitatingly from the hall.

"Come in, Julia. It's nothing important—only the usual spoon fight," Mrs. Driscoll called cheerily.

"Nothing important!" her husband roared. "You have a German baron for a great-grandfather!"

"No, with thanks," she laughed. "One's enough in a family."

Taking advantage of the momentary distraction, Sister Maria whipped into the dining-room, seized the box and fled through the hall, clutching it tightly under her shawl. At the sitting-room door, her brother intercepted her. "Oh, ho," he mocked, "that's the game, is it?"

"Touch me, and I'll scream murder!" she threatened.

"Oh, go on. I don't mean to touch you."

Her suspicions leaped up—she suddenly realized the box was very light. With trembling fingers she tore it open, found it empty and flung the precious 200-year-old heirloom at his head. He deftly caught it, cackling triumphantly.

In a flash, blazing with anger, Maria was rummaging dining-room and china closet; extending her search to the sitting-room, and interrupting Mrs. Driscoll and Mrs. Higgins in their quiet confab over the fashion papers while she overhauled the couch. Mr. Driscoll looked on a while with amused, maddening comment, then repaired to the kitchen to stir the fire and gloat over his stew kettle which stood for triumph over both Higgins and Sister Maria. He dashed back, glaring and furious.

"Look here," he yelled, "you're carrying things too far, Maria Stanforth, when it comes to stealing outright!"

"Stealing!" she jeered. "It isn't stealing—I'm simply after my own property. You haven't the shadow of a claim my half the year. If I can find my spoons I'll take them, and you can yell 'steal' till you're hoarse!" She went on flinging about cushions, pulling out drawers.

He seized her arm, shouting: "What's the use keeping up the show? Your snickering cub stole them—you know that as well as I do! You put him up to it. I saw him sneaking around with a grin on him like a barn door. But I'll make him grin—you'll find out!" In his excitement he shook her slightly.

Sister Maria rolled up her eyes, moaning in horror: "Lay violent hands on a woman! A descendant of Baron Van Vleeter stoop to the level of drunken brutes!"

"When I deal with thieves I've got to put myself on a level with them! Bud come here," he commanded a freckled, grinning boy who peeped in at the open window, then dodged out of sight.

"Buddy, my darling, keep out of his reach! Go call the police—I won't take any more insults!"

"Come here, sir, instantly, or you'll wish you had!" Mr. Driscoll thundered.

Bud hesitated a moment, then obeyed the stronger power and slid inside, still grinning.

"What'd you do with my stew kettle? Answer me, you little thief!"

Bud squirmed and stammered. "I—I——'

"Buddy, I forbid you saying a word after that!—thief, indeed!" his mother broke in. "You've hidden my spoons, Wilford Driscoll—hidden them yourself—and now lay it——"

"Yes, Madam, I did hide them! They're mine till eleven-nine-and-a-half tonight! I put them into my kettle of stew, and your speckled monkey stole them, as you well know!"

"Now may heaven enlighten me!" exclaimed his sister piously. "Kettle of stew! What does the idiot mean, Fanny?"

Mrs. Driscoll shook her head. "Don't ask me."

"Look here, Bud, if you know when you're well off you'll put that kettle right back where you got it. Hear?" Driscoll tweaked the boy's ear.

Sister Maria snatched her son to her bosom, flew to the telephone in the hall and violently summoned the police force.

"Saved me the trouble," Driscoll laughed.

One of the Higgins children burst in, calling: "Maw, Maw! Paw's makin' the 'phone buzz hollerin' for ye."

"Come back as soon as you can, Julia—I need support in this whirlwind," Mrs. Driscoll smiled.

Mrs. Higgins nodded, and taking her staring, reluctant offspring, departed. A roar of impatience met her at the telephone. "Julia! Julia!"

"Yes," she responded.

"I find I've got to go out into the country. I expected to be back in an hour when I came down a while ago, but I won't get around till night. And say, Julia——" He stopped.

"Well, what is it?"

"I wish you'd do something for me, won't you, Ducky?" he cooed.

"Mischief!" she commented to herself. "I don't know—what is it?"

"Oh, nothing much," he explained airily. "Just go out to the shed and get the stew kettle you'll find in the tool chest, and slip over and put it on Driscoll's kitchen range, will you? There's a dear!"

"So you were the thief! You stole the stew and the gold spoons! And you want me to pull you out of the mess! Well, I guess I don't!"

"Thief? Gold spoons? What the dickens do you mean? It's just a little trick on Driscoll, he's so blamed swell-headed over his lucky shot, and so stuck on his cooking smartness! Come, run over with it, won't you?"

"Your little trick has made a dreadful row. Driscoll and his sister are fighting like cat and dog over the disappearance of the Van Vleeter spoons—called out the police, and no one knows what'll come of it. I won't have a thing to do with it!"

"Couldn't you just tell them where it——"

"Not a hint!" She rang off and went back to her friend.

Four policemen had arrived and were looking at each other in helpless bewilderment, while the air palpitated with the storm of contradictory statements bellowed and shrieked by both complainants at once.

"Here! One of you've got to hold up. We can't make head nor tail of it," one policeman finally declared.

But neither Driscoll nor his sister would give the other the advantage of a hearing, but mingled vehement accusations and demands for justice till the man of law said impatiently: "We'll arrest both of you for disturbing the peace and lock you up till you cool off."

"Hooray! hooray!" whooped Buddy.

"You unfeeling little wretch!" His mother dealt him a smack on the ear, while she broke into a tearful wail.

At this juncture a somewhat wilted man appeared, bearing a large iron dinner pot. "Here's your confounded kettle, Driscoll," he growled. "I just meant to get back at you a little for your infernal boasting and running me about my shooting."

Sister Maria pounced upon the kettle and fished out the spoons, carefully counting them. "Yes, they're all here," she announced, and slapping them into her apron, dodged out of the house.

"Oh, I say——!" Driscoll roared, then stopped, realizing that he was beaten.

"Well, there doesn't seem to be anything for us to do," one of the policemen remarked, chuckling.

"Unless Driscoll wants you to arrest me," Higgins suggested.

"Oh, go to thunder!" Driscoll exploded, vanishing with the kettle of stew.

"I guess it's on me, boys," Higgins grinned shamefacedly, tendering a bill; and, grinning broadly, the law withdrew.

"Here's a dollar for you, Buddy; they seemed to be knocking you pretty hard."

"Aw, I don't want nothin', Mr. Higgins—I've had a bully time," Buddy responded warmly. "Say, Mr. Higgins, when I seen ye sneakin' it, I knowed ye didn't want me to tell 'cause ye wunk at me; but when they got to bi'lin' so, I thought I'd better, only ever' time I opened my mouth one of 'em'd shut me up. Gee, it was great!" LOUISE JACKSON STRONG.

INDIANS KNEW THEM.

STORY OF THE RELIEF OF FORT C. F. SMITH WITH A SMALL FORCE OF MEN.

[Washington Herald:] "In the pioneer days, to reach Montana from Cheyenne, in Wyoming," said B. S. Warren of Helena, "required a roundabout journey that involved a double crossing of the Rocky Mountains, with a change of base at Salt Lake City. The United States government brought about a better condition of travel by constructing a trail through the Gallatin Valley, along the course of the Gunpowder River, reaching around the base of the mountains in a curvilinear form, which avoided the heights of the Rockies.

"To protect this route from marauding Indians three forts were built—Reno, Phil Kearney, and C. F. Smith. These were garrisoned by United States troops. In 1863 the murderous Sioux from the Yellowstone Valley pursued a sanguinary course up through the Gallatin Valley and into Montana. It was marked by rapine and plunder.

"They besieged Fort Reno and killed many of its garrison. They environed Fort Phil Kearney, and wiped from the face of the earth every human being whose walls it failed to protect. Then they surrounded Fort C. F. Smith, where 200 Union soldiers found themselves encircled by more than 1000 death-seeking Indians. Escape seemed impossible. A courier got word of this condition of affairs to Gen. Hancock, who was then stationed at St. Paul, and he sent a message to the Governor of Montana, at Bozeman, calling upon him to relive the besieged garrison. The Governor of that Territory then was Green Clay Smith. He was perplexed as to what to do, as Fort Smith was 250 miles away and the country between Bozeman and the fort was filled with Sioux Indians. He sent for Col. Howie. At that time, Col. Neil Howie was United States marshal for Montana and a typical frontiersman. To him Gov. Smith handed Gen. Hancock's despatch, doubting if there were any use in trying to relieve the garrison.

"Col. Howie thought differently, and selected Capt. McCabe as being best fitted for this undertaking. McCabe was a gentle-voiced man with blue eyes, and made little noise. He acted. He told the Governor he needed forty of the best men he could select. Gov. Smith looked at him in amazement. McCabe said that each of these forty men could shoot sixteen shots in sixteen seconds and that every ball meant a dead Indian and every dead Indian meant a scalp and every scalp meant a warrior deprived eternally of a chance of ever reaching the happy hunting ground. Indians believe that no man can go to the happy hunting ground who has been deprived of his hair.

" 'Those Indians know us, and we know them still better, said Capt. McCabe, and my men—forty of them—will walk to Fort Smith without firing a shot.' Indians watched them on every side By days their progress was signalled by circling columns of smoke, and at night by fire from the mountain tops. Not a shot was fired. When they got within sight of Fort Smith the 1000 whooping Sioux who held the garrison in siege fled and the forty frontiersmen from Bozeman marched in and escorted the 200 Union soldiers back to the Territorial capital without the loss of a life. Not a shot had been fired. Not a scalp had been lifted."

A Song of Joy.

The world is full of tenderest love,
  And full of hope and gladness;
Nature has written on every page:
  Joy is better than sadness."

Then why do we forget? Unhappy souls!
  And why give way to sorrow?
The clouds so heavy with rain today
  Give place to shine tomorrow.

HENRY ALTMEIR DISCOVERS HIS NEED OF AN ENGINEER.

By a Special Contributor.

AT her feet a brown strip of sand stretched into the river, the waters of which broke on the shore in little riffles cast up by an approaching skiff. With his back to her, a man in the boat bent to the oars, the long sweep of his arms in the stroke suggesting a great bird flying crabwise toward her. On the opposite shore of the river squatted a red brick building with a broad slate roof. From one end of it arose a heavy stone foundation, surmounted by a tall black stack, now smokeless and shiny with a new coat of graphite. The environs reeked with the débris of incompleteness; loose timbers lay about, torn and empty cement sacks, headless barrels, chips of stone.

"It's mighty nice of you to be on the lookout for me, Henry," said the girl. "I'm hoarse yet from shouting across the river the last time I came up." The man in the boat turned half-about to measure his landing-place.

"Didn't know you were coming," he said. "I came over to see if the shifting crew had put off a case of gauge glasses I've been waiting for more than a week." The girl's mouth hardened a little at the corners. "But you may go over all right," he added, leaping over the bow of the boat as it landed.

"Oh, may I?" Her enthusiasm had cooled.

"Yes, there'll be plenty of room in the skiff."

"Then it's just a matter of cargo and capacity?" she said.

He was clambering up the steep path to the railroad siding. "I'll be back in a moment with the other part of the cargo," he called.

"Part of the cargo!" She repeated the words to herself, with scorn. The empty, waiting boat caught her eye with luring significance. To get into it, back off, and then compel him to sue for a crossing—wouldn't that be a fair revenge? If Lorette Winton had been the pattern of an up-to-date novel, she would have done that very thing. But she was only an old-fashioned girl, who looked upon a man as a clean, strong animal of superior powers; a chieftain whose shortcomings should be overlooked because of his complex responsibilities in the world. She stepped into the boat, took her seat at the oars, and sat, waiting the return of Henry Altmeier.

Lugging a heavy box, he came. He placed the case in the skiff, shoved off and himself stepped into the tipsy craft.

"Please let me row," she asked.

"I want to get to the other side," he protested.

"So you shall, or drown," she replied confidently; "sit down!"

He staggered to the rear seat, and sat down so heavily that a great wave spread out from the sttern of the skiff. She headed the boat across stream, and bent to the oars. Her face flushed with the exercise, the oars wobbled a trifle on the lift of the stroke, but her spirit never faltered.

"A little more steam, Lorette," encouraged Henry, provokingly.

Too sorely in need of her breath to waste it in retorts, she held her peace of tongue.

"We'll soon get to the ocean, girl, if you don't stop drifting down stream," he insisted. She turned about to get her bearings, and saw the landing-place much closer than she had dared to hope. He offered to take the oars for her.

"No," she declared bravely, "I'm going to land the load!"

"O-o-o-o! I begin to understand," he laughed, the laugh breaking into a whistle; "wanted to pay for your passage, eh?"

"The right of way was mine," she said, deftly swinging the skiff around. "I wouldn't have come across at all if father hadn't telephoned for these blue prints. I just had to come; and when you acted like an old Charon on a strike, I decided you'd be the cargo, and not I."

The boat grounded. She swung the oars into keep, tripped over the bow, and looped the rope around a sycamore stump. Altmeier sat in the stern, making no motion to get out.

"I guess I'll have to dump out the cargo," she said, energetically laying hands on the box.

"Stop, you ninny," he cried, in alarm, "that's glass!" With the exclamation he leaped forward and caught the case of gauge glasses from her hands.

"Well," she said, resignedly, as he set the box on the rocks, "the cargo's unloaded, anyway."

They climbed the ledge, over the dusty débris, and went into the new pumping station. Within, all was nervous action; the clang of the hammer, the click-click of the automatic wrench tightening the great bolts that studded the heads of the steam cylinders; the mumbling of men down on their knees or prone on their backs, with toil-hardened hands uplifted into the bowels of the bronze and steel monsters. At one end of the room the floor was cut away, and down in the pit machinists and helpers tugged and strained, work-writhen, at the half-jointed condensers. Scattered about were the loose fragments of the machines that had not yet been mounted into place. The head machinist went about here and there examining a piece, taking sharp measurements with his rule and calipers, assuring himself that every joint, every rib of steel, every chamber and bolt and rod, would match its fellow in the steam giant—just as some gray-haired, spectacled anatomist would finger and test and try every tiny bone, every process and bump in the articulation of a human skeleton! At the other end of the house a windlass creaked and groaned, while two blocks wound up or let down a bucket into the suction well. Two heavy-shouldered, shirtless Slavs took turns loading the gravel and sand and fragments of rock dumped out of the bucket above, whence others trundled it in wheelbarrows out the door and down to the river-shore dump.

Lorette's father took the blue prints she handed to him, cleared off a turbulence of tools and waste from a greasy table, unrolled the maps, and began to ponder over them. Henry joined him in the consultation.

The girl stood, a blunder of life and beauty in that whirlpool of noise, turmoil and antagonism of hammer and tongs, and all the fierce mastery of mankind over the philosophy of wood and rock and steel and the stolid uses of breathless things! For the first time in her life, Lorette Winton comprehended, falsely or in truth, she knew not, that woman is a weak thing, that hers is a puny place in the white-hot fever of the world—the grinding of the elements, the burning of mountains, the control of the giant forces of steam and water and wind and flying currents of the bursting thunderbolts.

And these were woman's rivals now—they were her rivals!

Clawless, fangless, tongueless, sexless things that neither fell upon her in the ambush of the night to slay her for her jealousies of heart, nor stole her glory from her in the broad glare of open day with a soft cheek of velvet flesh, the rosy tingle of clean blood, the warm touch of little fingers; nor were like the rivals that might spread in her path the tangle of deceit and hypocrisy; nor were they like the rivals that might fling into the deep wells of her love the poison of flying rumor and ill-will. Nay, but they stood there before her, brunt giants of black iron and yellow brass, beaten and wrenched and forged and hammered and bored and ground into the perfection of man's creation—and man, in the sweat of his proud mastery over them, fell down and adored them! Adored them, because they did his will; because they were obedient, because they bent their backs to his yoke and passed under it, his metal slaves, faithful till destruction, unmurmuring, uncomplaining!

As despair in prayer sometimes opens the soul of the sinner to new resolutions, so this girl had her first glimpse of understanding into this strange power, her conviction bred firm and bitter by the thud of hammer and the rasp of steel; for the first time she realized the immensity of this wonder of emotion, which has made men hermits for the clutching of an intricate wheel, and burned out strong hearts in the problems of weight, measure, inertia and motion. Her mind rebelled against this injustice—was not woman, after all, the finer, the nobler machine? Had she not for generation after generation, bent to the will of man, toiled for him, borne his blows with his caresses, and then, truer than any monster of brass and iron, worn out in the service of his love, and in the propagation and perpetuation of his will, his glory, from century to century?

She turned from the huge pumps to the two men; her father she saw with her eyes, the younger man with her heart. Their shoulders were to her; Altmeier's were the broader, and one brown arm, doubled at the elbow till his muscles strained the sleeve of his shirt, rested on the table. For a moment, because she was so conscious of her littleness in these things of mighty progress and industry, she surrendered up her pride and her reserve to the admiration of this man. What would she not do for him?—this man who looked so lightly beyond her deep appeal—beyond and into the cold mysticism of plungers and valves and gaskets and gauges and bronze bushings, and elbows and air chambers and steam cylinders?

"I told you it was marked on the blue prints," her father was saying; "twenty-eight inches from center to center of cores."

"Well, it couldn't have been in the specifications, then," Henry protested.

"Why, man, these blue prints were made in our own office right off my specifications!"

"All right; it's easily remedied, if you insist," was Henry's conciliatory final. "We can get them out in five or six days."

As the young man turned from the maps, he was struck by the apparent loneliness of the girl. She seemed to him such a discard, such a drifting chip in this vortex of man and machines.

"Let's have a boat ride, Lorette," he said, with unexpected interest.

"Will you?" she cried; "nothing would suit me better—I don't like machines."

This time he rowed. She sat in the stern of the skiff, watching him, chatting, with him, woman-wise in many things not in the catalogue of pump manufacturers or hydraulic engineers, speaking twenty words to his one, and answered most of the time with boisterous laughs or hearty chuckles.

They went slowly up the river, the laurels along the shore dropping out of view as they went, like friends left behind. Once Altmeier touched the green bank, and the girl gathered a handful of ferns, one of which she pinned on his necktie. Once he ran the skiff upon the boulders in a riffle, and freed it only after getting out into the water.

"I think we'd better return to the boating stage," he said, wringing the bottoms of his trousers. They drifted back to the deep pool at the pumphouse. As they rounded a little ledge of overhanging rocks they saw Lorette's father and the workmen, who had laid up their tools for the day, crossing the river in a large flat boat, which had been constructed to ferry over the pump castings.

"What's that hole in the rock for?" asked Lorette, pointing to an arched opening at the river side.

"That's a tunnel through which the water flows from the river into the well. It's getting late, but I know you'd like to see it," he answered, heading the boat for the mouth.

"I don't know about that," she said, dubiously. As usual, he paid little attention to her scruples. The skiff glided in under the arched roof of stone laid by; Henry pushed the boat along There was a cool dampness in the place shivered.

"Are you afraid?" he asked.

"No—but——"

Something at that instant fell with a mouth of the tunnel!

Henry looked back in wonderment; were confirmed; the screen had dropped could not be raised from the inside—they ers!

Under his breath he swore an oath; face he laughed outright.

To her the pink-gray sandstone walls sumed an aspect of horror. Had he ture? Had he set the trap?

Out through the grating she could a cage, the last of the workmen, like little atons, tramping the ties, down the other side of the river. She put her mouth screen and called aloud. The effect was A hollow, thin echo bubbled back into the was swallowed up in a silence only broken ping of water.

"Shout, Henry," she urged, "before they away!"

He gained the bow of the boat, and screen with his fingers, he bellowed till the with the depth of his voice. One of the down the track, turned when a faint sound ears, but seeing nothing, trudged on,

"No use to howl any more," said Altmeier

"But what will we do?" The girl tried her voice had terror in it.

"There's always a way out of everything place," he said.

He began to push the boat back into the darkness increased as they receded from of it.

"Please don't," she pleaded; "I'm frigh

He laughed. "Not quite so bad as that; —that is if——"

They had reached the end of the tunnel was secretly pleased to find the bucket reach. He caught hold of the rope to ratchets locked in the windlass above, ing to the girl to follow his bidding, he up the rope hand-over-hand. He reached near the top, and resting on this, lifted boards that covered the well. Then he ied the bucket in the boat, placed the girl her not to let go her hold upon the climbed back to the pump-house floor.

"Hold on tight!" he called down, bumps about!"

The next instant the girl felt the bucket could hear the windlass creaking above not look up. It seemed an age till she floor overhead. She saw the bending then, and heard him warning her still while at the same time he deftly shoved boards under the bucket. With a bump tled back on these. "No—but——"

Something at that instant fell with a splash mouth of the tunnel!

Henry looked back in wonderment; his were confirmed; the screen had dropped. He could not be raised from the inside—they were ers!

Under his breath he swore an oath; into the face he laughed outright.

To her the pink-gray sandstone walls sudden sumed an aspect of horror. Had he plotted the ture? Had he set the trap?

Out through the grating she could see, as a bird a cage, the last of the workmen, like little yellow atons, tramping the ties, down the railroad other side of the river. She put her mouth close screen and called aloud. The effect was pitiably A hollow, thin echo bubbled back into the tunnel was swallowed up in a silence only broken by the ping of water.

"Shout, Henry," she urged, "before they get away!"

He gained the bow of the boat, and clutching screen with his fingers, he bellowed till the tunnel with the depth of his voice. One of the workmen down the track, turned when a faint sound reached ears, but seeing nothing, trudged on, unconvinced.

"No use to howl any more," said Altmeier.

"But what will we do?" The girl tried to be ca her voice had terror in it.

"There's always a way out of everything—and place," he said.

He began to push the boat back into the tunnel darkness increased as they receded from the of it.

"Please don't," she pleaded; "I'm frightened

He laughed. "Not quite so bad as that; in the —that is if——"

Then he returned ted the bucket in the boat, placed the girl in it, her not to let go her hold upon the iron hand climbed back to the pump-house floor.

"Hold on tight!" he called down, "no matter bumps about!"

The next instant the girl felt the bucket rising could hear the windlass creaking above her, not look up. It seemed an age till she had reached floor overhead. She saw the bending back of A then, and heard him warning her still not to while at the same time he deftly shoved some boards under the bucket. With a bump the b tled back on these. He made no denial. There were ferns in plate at the Winton home for dinner that Lorette's hands had plucked them!

After dinner, Altmeier and the girl walked the orchard that adjoined the house. "I'll show chickens," Lorette said, "and the colt."

The Winton house was built on a bluff above The remnant of a wood whose great trees had hunting call of the Tuscaroras still bristled up the home and the green ribbon of water low. "What are these things?" Lorette ventured to ask him, as he stood before a pair of smaller engines.

"Condensers," he answered briefly.

"What are they for?" she continued, with feigned interest.

"To reduce the atmospheric pressure the pumps are working against."

"What's atmospheric pressure?"

"Wind," he laughed, ending the technical elucidation.

"No wonder women are stupid," she said; "men never consider them fit pupils for anything but a sink in the kitchen, or a Bissel sweeper."

Henry gave his attention to the machines; she stood by, resenting his neglect, yet admiring him for it all the more. How she hated the monsters!—the pounding vitals that sucked up the silver blood from the river, churned it through their throbbing valves, just like a man's heart, and then forced it out through the arteries and veins of miles and miles of pipe lines, up hill and down hill, even to the capillaries of the little spigots and faucets in thousands of homes! Even as a machine, was she not more wonderful than this massive, writhing monstrosity, begotten of the cupola and the sand house and the foundry and lathe and emory wheel?

Weary of the wrack and noise, the odor of painted iron newly hot, the unflinching attention of these men to an idol unfeeling as Moloch and unsatisfactory as the Oracle of Delphi, she slipped out of the pumphouse unnoticed, stepped into the boat, rowed herself across the rivér, and a half-hour later stood before a mirror in her own chamber, wondering, cursing her beauty that it was not more perfect, picking out the flaws in her mold and color, as Henry Altmeier would have picked out the blow holes and the sand cracks in a valve seat or the bushing of a steam cylinder.

Late that same evening, she saw Henry Altmeier part with her father at the gate before his home, and weary of step, and grimy of clothes, pass down the street toward his hotel. Weary, too, she watched him from her window go out of sight. In the morning her father announced that Henry had left for the city—his work was done well!

"And will he not be back?" Lorette asked with ill-restrained interest and anger combined.

"Not unless something breaks," her father replied.

"Something will break," murmured the girl to herself.

That morning she stood a long time looking at the colt in the orchard. She indulged his appetite with a lump of sugar—when he rubbed his nose affectionately in the bend of her arm!

A week went by. Lorette's father often spoke of the new pumps. "They're the slickest big machines we have going anywhere in the whole region," he would say, contentedly. The girl strove to put down the pang as a woman must that hunger for a man that is sometimes called love. She made an idol of her memories, and worshiped them, sometimes with adoration pure and simple, often with a sublime hatred that was worship only because it was not forgetfulness.

It was Saturday night when she walked slowly across the lawn, to gather fresh flowers for the altar in her parish church on the morrow. The evening train puffed up the river bank under the hill—the train that had so often brought him out from the city during the summer. The chickens were heavy dark spots in the trees as they had been that other night in June; and the colt was a blur in the corner of the pasture lot, as he had been then; the breeze whispered of showers to come, and——

She turned at a sudden step.

He stood before her almost before she knew his coming—before she cared! Why had he come—only as a figure in the dream into which he had melted as the fowls and the sunset and the colt in the corner of the lot!

His hand's grasp was warm—it awoke her from the dream of pictures. She turned from him, the darkness hiding the scarlet that rushed to her cheeks for pleasure, for anger that he had left her without a word, bitterness of the intervening days, scorn of his return—the justice of retribution!

"I know how it is with you," he said, gently.

"You know nothing," she answered, bravely.

"I know how it is with myself, then," he corrected.

"That does not interest me."

"But it must."

"I can't understand why it should."

"Because I can't help looking out for my own interests; long ago I made up my mind your interests were to be mine."

A short breath that was almost a gasp escaped her caution and control.

"You see, girl," he was saying, "you always called me a machine, a sort of pump—like most pumps, I can't run smoothly without running duplex."

"You know I understand nothing about pumps." For the first time she faced him. The night did not seem so dark now, but a purple mist seemed to have arisen "What is duplex?" she questioned.

"Well," he explained, "duplex, referring to pumps, means two pumps running as one."

"Then you want another pump," she teased.

"You know I told you this work at the pumping station was my first effort out of the shop. The tests with the report came today, with better results even than the specifications called for. The Governor kept his word with me, released me from the binding pledge of seven years ago, told me I was henceforth my own master in matters of head and—heart and——"

"You still want another pump?" she broke in.

"Every machine needs some wise hand to run it,' Lorette," he said—"I want an engineer."

"And I'll take the throttle," she answered, surprising him for once with the proper use of a technical term in mechanics.

ALOYSIUS COLL.

Making a Dictionary.

GREATEST LITERARY WORK OF THE CENTURY.

From Tit-Bits.

PROJECTED fully half a century ago, founded upon the contributory labors of more than a thousand readers of English works of all periods and branches of knowledge, and now being produced by three highly-trained staffs, "The New English Dictionary on Historical Principles" has an undoubted claim to be The Dictionary. In no other age, in no other language, has the publication of a dictionary on so stupendous a scale been undertaken.

As early as 1857 the work originated, when Dean (afterward Archbishop) Trench read two papers before the Philological Society, "On Some Deficiencies in Existing English Dictionaries." In these he emphasized the necessity of producing a dictionary on historical principles, in which the rise, progress or decay, and use of words in their various senses might be clearly set forth and illustrated chronologically by quotations. The honor of producing this work which the Philological Society thus contemplated has fallen to the Oxford University Press, and all the material collected by the society from 1857 was placed at the disposal of Dr. (now Sir) James Murray, the editor appointed by the representatives of the University Press and the society.

Dr. Murray commenced his editorial duties in 1879. Three years were allotted to the immense task of arranging the 4,000,000 quotations (now augmented by nearly twice as many more) collected during the previous twenty-two years. Much of the material had been in the hands of literary gentlemen throughout the kingdom, who had volunteered to be sub-editors. In 1889—so vast is the enterprise—Dr. Bradley was appointed as joint editor, and eight years ago Dr. Craigie received a similar appointment, that the production of the dictionary might be hastened and brought to a speedy completion.

Owing to the light which the various words throw upon one another, the dictionary-maker finds it convenient to take in hand a group or "family" at a time. The material already collected for such a group consists of hundreds of slips of paper, seven inches broad by four and a quarter long, each bearing a quotation from a standard English work. These extracts range from the earliest stages of the language down to the present date. Much skill, only to be acquired by long experience, is necessary to sift and classify the evidence, to reduce it to its proper form and dimensions, and to arrange the senses and subordinate senses in due order.

So great were the difficulties presented by the verb "do" that a sub-editor, after laboring with it for over six weeks, finally gave up in despair the task of arranging it. In the hands of an expert staff, the mass of material was at length reduced to shape. The uses were so numerous that the word was divided into fifty-four main and sixty-six subordinate senses, which occupy sixteen columns of small type in this dictionary.

The word "cheer" provides an excellent illustration of the results obtained. As is shown in the work, the word originally signified "the face," being so used as early as 1225. Hence, in due order, evolved the various senses: (2) "the expression on the face;" (3) "frame of mind, as showing itself by external demeanor;" (4) "cheerfulness, mirth, gaiety;" (5) "hospitable entertainment; (6) "what is provided by way of entertainment; fare, food;" from which naturally arises the sense; (7) "that which gives gladness; comfort, encouragement," as also (8) "a shout of encouragement; approbation or congratulation."

Perhaps nothing strikes the dictionary worker or student more forcibly than the number of English words or uses of words which once flourished vigorously and have become quite obsolete. The verb "refel" ("to refute, repel, reject,") for example, which appears in our literature from early in the sixteenth century, was in common use in eight senses for fully 100 years. It then began to decay, and survived only in a single sense until about 1734. The history of the verb "resent" commenced early in the seventeenth century, and diverged into eleven different senses. Most of these fell into disuse after a short period of probation, and the verb is now represented in only one sense.

Words likewise lose part of their intensity of meaning. From at least the year 800 the word "rother" (now only in dialect use,) signifying "a horned beast," has been in currency; but its full significance became lost, and the form was strengthened by the addition of "beast." Hence the combination, "rother beast," in use from 1480 to 1700. The large number of old words preserved in the vernacular, but especially in the northern counties and in Scotland, is remarkable. Whenever a dialect use throws light upon or continues the history of a literary word, it is given an appropriate place in this gigantic work.

The preparer of "copy" works up his material by amplifying it with quotations from the numerous works in the office or in the Bodleian Library. After the mass of evidence has been divided into words and their senses, and the illustrative quotations have been chosen, the material undergoes thorough revision by the editor. Immediately before the "copy" is sent to the printer the titles of the various books quoted are compared with a register and contracted uniformly, and doubtful quotations are verified by comparison with the work in question. The printer's proofs are thoroughly revised in every stage, and the greatest possible care is taken to exclude errors—typographical, lexicographical, literary, or otherwise.

A City of Processions.

CONSTANTINOPLE AT THE ADVENT OF THE NEW ORDER.

By a Special Contributor.

"FOR heaven's sake don't talk so loud!" said my friend, the local resident, in answer to a question regarding the existence of the Young Turks, as we sat in the smoking-room of the Pera Palace Hotel and drank coffee.

This was three years ago. In December of 1908 I was again in Constantinople. But there was no need then to lower one's voice in speaking of the Young Turks. The drums of one's ears were in danger of being damaged by the cheers of Young Turkey, while, from being a city where political demonstrations were unknown, Constantinople suddenly became a place where political processions were the order of the day. In fact, there was a regular processional epidemic.

I was met by the new order of things at the very frontier. The Turkish official who took my passport said: "Sir, you belong to a country which is a good friend of Turkey. I shall ask the customs officers to put you to no inconvenience with regard to your baggage." And all the way to Adrianople that official talked to me about the new order of things. At Adrianople a Turkish general boarded our train, and among the crowd of military leaders who saw him off was one who had been once a pillar of the old régime and who had been transferred to Adrianople on the success of the revolution. He was not degraded; he was simply removed from the capital and carefully watched. "In Ireland," remarked a fellow-traveler, "we would have such a man as that running up and down the platform tarred and feathered." In Turkey, however, they act differently, for no disrespect was shown to this former tool of the Padishah. Of course if he intrigued against the state of things, his end would be sharp and sudden. On the very day that I was at Adrianople, Gen. Ismail Pasha, one of the worst of Abdul Hamid's spies, was shot dead in Constantinople. When his master fell, Ismail was detained for a short time, but a few days later he was released and allowed to return home. Here he seems to have immediately begun intriguing for a restoration of the old régime, and he was apparently alive to the danger he ran, for he gave strict orders to his servants not to open the doors to any one. On the night of December 3, 1908, a messenger came with a letter from the Ministry of War, but the porter would not admit even him, though he, the porter, afterward confessed that by the dim light from a neighboring lamp he saw that the messenger wore a military uniform. Finally the message was handed in through the window, and proved to be a notice from the War Office asking Ismail Pasha to go there immediately. Without suspecting that the letter was forgery which it afterward proved to be, the general left his house attended by an armed servant, but in a dark lane near the tomb of the Sultan Mahomet he was stopped by a man wearing the uniform of an officer, who first put the servant out of action by shooting him in the arm and leg, and then sent a bullet through the heart of Ismail Pasha.

Turkish Patriotism.

Between Adrianople and Constantinople, I was awakened one night by a succession of short, sharp cheers and cries of "Long live the Ottomans!" while the train halted at some station, and the next morning I learned that we had taken on board some newly-elected Deputies. At Constantinople these Deputies were met by a tremendous crowd with bands and banners, and I saw the first of the great processions which were later a daily feature of life there. Of the size and enthusiasm of these crowds enough has already been said, but what struck me most about them and about the city generally was the extraordinary awakening of the national self-consciousness which had taken place. This was shown in a thousand ways, but I shall speak of only two—the very profuse use of the Turkish flag, which had evidently become the idol of the Ottomans as the tricolor was the idol of the French revolutionists, and the fact that the newspapers and the people spoke of Turkey's past glories, of her advance to the gates of Vienna and of her conquests in three continents, as of a thing which belonged to them personally, whereas formerly the Turk displayed as little self-consciousness of this kind as the Russian moujik. In this matter of a reawakening or, rather, a creation of a national self-consciousness, the Turkish revolution produced results curiously different from those produced by the recent revolution in Russia. A tremendous sensation was created among all classes of the population one day when some drunken foreigners pulled down the Turkish flag, and great enthusiasm was always caused by the playing of the national anthem. In St. Petersburg, on the contrary, the Russian flag was detested by the revolutionists, and so strong was the prejudice against the national hymn that, after an officer had shot a student dead for refusing to stand up when it was played in one of the leading restaurants of St. Petersburg, the Chief of Police forbade the playing of it as likely to cause trouble. The explanation was, of course, that Abdul Hamid had himself become a revolutionist, while Nicholas II was always an enemy of reform.

My first day in Constantinople was a delirium of processions culminating in one grand historical march-past of all the Deputies, of ballot boxes crowned with flowers, of carriages containing Greek priests, and Mahommedan mullahs, imams clad in the picturesque costume of Mecca, the holy city, sitting beside dark-clad Armenian monks and Jewish rabbis, representatives of a still older law. Just arrived, as I had, from lands in which Germans, Czechs, Austrians, Serbs and Italians were quarreling like madmen to fly at each other's throats, I I saw those scenes of peace and love, giveness and brotherly affection in

"I have reigned thirty-three years," proceeded the captive, now trembling in every limb, "but I have wrought harm to none. Why do you seek my life?" His voice had become a scream in the panic of their unbroken silence. "I made war with Greece!" he shrieked; "why do you want my life?"

A thought of his brother, at that very moment assuming the sovereignty of which he saw himself despoiled, now crossed the mind of Abdul Hamid. "For thirty years I treated my brother with love," he cried. "Any other Sultan would have had him slain. So why do you seek my life?" Another pause, as silent as any that had preceded, wrought Abdul Hamid into another frenzy. Then he shed tears, his next utterance being a mere whine. "Only let me live," he begged. "I will do whatever you wish." The Sultan, white as a ghost, sank upon the sofa, from which he leaped again quickly, evidently fearing the sword of the executioner. "Take me to the Palace of Cheragan, with my family," he begged. "There I was born! There let me die!"

Few spectators witnessed the departure of the fallen ruler as the carriage—a simple hack—bore him from Yildiz Kiosk to Cheragan, or Palace of the Tulip, lying along the shore north of the splendid pile within which Mahomet the Fifth had so long been held in captivity. Not even the favorite son of Abdul Hamid witnessed the departure that brought this ignominious reign to its ignominious anti-climax.

Asiatic Turkey, during the fortnight that elapsed between the counter-revolution at Yildiz Kiosk and the proclamation of Mahomet the Fifth, was a scene of carnage. The fanaticism of the Moslems had been wrought to the pitch of frenzy by the reactionary agitation ramifying from Constantinople. Dead bodies strewed the fields around for miles about Adana. The river bore the corpses of men, women and children to the sea. The whole Armenian race seemed for days on the eve of extinction. The first step of the Young Turks, when they had resumed their power at Constantinople, was the dispatch of forces to Adana and Mersina, where the carnage soon subsided. When all the details are submitted to the judgment of mankind, this last general massacre of the long reign of Abdul Hamid must prove most sanguinary of them all. He made his way through slaughter to the throne and he departed from it in a sea of blood.

EDWARD HARRELL.

David Lloyd George.

A Brief Autobiography Written for a London Paper.

From M.A.P.

My father was a schoolmaster and a Unitarian, and he left Wales to follow his profession in England. He was stationed at Manchester and Liverpool. In Liverpool, he was master of the Hope-street School; the manager of the school was the Rev. Dr. Martineau, and so this great divine was one of the early influences, in many ways, on my life and that of my people. He was a friend of my father, and we have several memorials of their friendship.

I was born in Manchester in 1863.

My father died when I was but 2 years old. He left a very small fortune to my mother, and she had to make a hard struggle to bring up her children. She was a fine character—gentle, unselfish and courageous. She never complained, and never spoke of her struggles. It was not till long after that her children fully appreciated how much they owed to her, and how fine her spirit had been in the hard task of bringing up her fatherless family. She took little interest in things outside her family, knew nothing of politics, but was profoundly stirred by religious questions.

She owed much to Mr. Geoffrey, a Liverpool solicitor, who was a Unitarian, and a friend of my father. He helped to protect and realize the small property my father had left.

My life and career, after my mother, I owe mainly to an uncle who was more than a parent to me. My mother was the daughter of a Welsh Baptist minister; it is her religion I have followed.

Where I Spent My Boyhood.

The death of my father ended all our ties with England, and my mother instinctively turned to our home in Wales, where her brother lived. This was the village of Llanystumdwy, South Carnarvon. It was a typical Welsh village, both physically and socially. It was the center of an amphitheater of hill; had the sea in the near distance and abundant woods; was picturesque, beautiful, and inspiring.

Socially, it was at that period in my boyhood entirely under the yoke of the village squire and the village parson. The land was strictly preserved, which did not prevent us youngsters from having our joyous days in the woods, searching for nuts and cherries. Whenever we were on one of these marching expeditions, we used to have some of our companions to keep watch, lest we should be caught by the keepers.

Our dread of the keeper was not without cause. A boy who had killed a hare had to be sent away by his widowed mother from the farm which she occupied. If she had not done so, she would probably have been turned out of the farm. The other farmers dared not take the lad in. He left the village, and, I think, he died early.

The only school in the village was a church school. There were not half a dozen church children in the school; but all the atmosphere and the government of the school were of the church.

I was regarded as a promising pupil; and I was especially strong in the church catechism, in which I usually got the first place. Our teacher was all right, but the managers of the school varied according to temperament. Some were broad-minded, and respected the views of the Nonconformists; others were bigoted, and asked questions which were insulting to the faith of the parents of the children.

But even weak people can devise means of meeting oppression. I had not then heard of the Russian Nihilists, nor of the starvation strike by which they conquered their jailers. But we had a mild imitation of that experience. I organized a boycott of the examinations as a protest against this type of question, and we refused to answer. This put an end to this style of question.

My Uncle's Influence.

I was receiving, meantime, a good deal of education at home—education both in books and in the controversies of my time. My uncle kept a shoemaker's shop. His shop was a rendezvous for the village—the center of gossip, of disputation, of all the conflicts of religious and political creeds. He was himself a man of mild and broad temper, and he acted as a mediator among the combatants when conflict grew too warm.

I can never tell how much I owed to this good man. His home was comfortable, but thrifty and pinched. Our bread was home-made; we scarcely ate fresh meat, and I remember that our greatest luxury was half an egg for each child on Sunday morning.

My uncle never married, and he set himself the task of educating the children of his sister as a sacred and supreme duty. To that duty, he gave his time, his energy, and all his money. There was no opportunity of learning French in the village school; and yet French was necessary. The way we got out of the difficulty was for my poor uncle and myself to sit together for hours, and laboriously spell out of an old French dictionary and out of a grammar, the rudiments of the language. It was a painful and difficult way of learning a language, but it fairly succeeded.

I Start My Career.

After the village school, I went to the University College at Aberystwyth—now a university, then only a school. This was the end of my school education. At 16 years of age, I was articled as a clerk in a solicitor's office. I had passed the preliminary examination, which is necessary before entering on the profession, when I was 14.

I was articled to a solicitor at Portmadoc; and I lived with a nice old couple whose children had all gone out into the world in search of a livelihood. They were most kind to me, and, indeed, treated me as though I were a child of their own.

For five years and a half I remained an apprentice; at the end of that time, my uncle's small fortune was exhausted, and I had not money enough left even to buy my robes. In Wales a solicitor has to appear in robes before he gets audience, a thing, I believe, unknown in the English law courts, in the case of solicitors. The robes cost, I think, three guineas, and, if I remember rightly, I had to wait till I had got one or two cases before I was able to meet this outlay.

A Famous Case.

I daresay I should have remained many years longer a country solicitor if my name had not been brought into some public notice by what is known as the Llanfrothan burial case. It was one of those peculiarly harsh cases which excite passion and attract public attention. The circumstances were these:

A quarryman, in dying, had asked to be buried by the side of a daughter whom he had greatly loved. The daughter was buried in the parish churchyard, and the quarryman was a Dissenter. The vicar at first was ready to comply with the prayer; but, being served with a notice under the Burials Act passed by the late Mr. Osborne Morgan—a notice which compelled the vicar to give the body a place in the burial ground—he became angry. He replied that he would bury the body in the churchyard, but that he would bury it where he liked; and he chose as the spot for the poor quarryman, not the place he had asked beside his daughter's grave, but a spot, bleak and sinister, in which were buried the bodies of the unknown drowned that were washed up from the sea in this region of shipwrecks, or of suicides, or of the few Jews that died in the district.

The people came to me; I advised that the gates of the churchyard should be forced. They were forced; there were fines for trespass, and then long litigation. By the time the struggle had come to an end, my name was known all over the principality.

How I Entered Politics.

This is, perhaps, what led partly to my selection to fight the Carnarvon boroughs in 1889. My brother had entered into partnership with me, and I was free to take up political life. In April, 1890, I was returned. My opponent was Mr. Ellis Nanney, the squire of the small village in which I had passed my boyhood, representative of the class and the creed with which I had been brought into conflict from my earliest year. In the second contest I had as my opponent Sir John Puleston, and in the third Mr. Nanney was again my opponent.

I may mention, as the most agreeable incident of my political life, that I spent a couple of days in the society of Mr. Gladstone in Sir Edward Watkin's châlet on Snowdon. They were the most delightful and instructive days of my life. I had an opportunity of seeing that wonderful versatility and that extraordinary range of knowledge which was one of that great man's most marked characteristics.

I will give two instances that come back to my mind. The châlet was roofed with zinc. Mr. Gladstone described to us all the processes through which zinc passed in manufacture. Then he spoke of sugar candy; of the tax on sugar which existed in the days of his youth; and described the surprise he felt on going into a shop at Nantwich when he found the vast difference in the price of sugar candy now and the price in his early days.

Here I end this brief record of my life.

Love, the Chauffeur.

THE VALENTINE STORY OF A DIFFICULT YOUNG WOMAN.

By a Special Contributor.

"THERE," said the girl in white who sat in the light of the big double windows, her hands on the keyboard of a typewriter, "somebody has borrowed my 'Tommy and Grizel;' but if I can't quote precisely, the heart of the thing is Pim won't be hurried by his publishers. When they urge him, he exclaims: 'I will begin the damned thing at 9 o'clock!' That is exactly my attitude. I refuse to be egged on by you, Belle. You may have no moods and tenses in your illustrating, but I have to run the entire scale before some one note will start me off."

"In the meantime," said her sister, as she rubbed the lead from her stomp, "in the meantime, the day approaches when you must have your valentine story in, or it will be turned down in favor of slush sent in by some self-respecting pencil pusher who gets her copy in along about Thanksgiving."

She shoved her finished sketches toward her sister. "There, that is done. It ought to fit in on any of the conventional valentine stories you are likely to evolve. Now I must get to that stuff for the comic Sunday supplement. That is what galls me, Flo—to be a part and parcel of the colored comic supplement—which same I detest from desire and principle."

A clock slowly and solemnly tolled 9. Florence put out a pair of red lips at her sister. Taking a pencil from her hair and drawing a pad of paper to her, she began to write.

"Florence," cried Belle, "it gives me the horrors to see you go at your work in that impious way. And a story of sentiment, too!"

"Sentiment nothing! A pot boiler; if I am to have a new gown for Easter I must get it from the proceeds of a valentine story. Where is the sentiment in that? I must sweat out my Christmas money on the Fourth of July. It is delightful."

"Of course it is. I happen to know that there is nothing you so love as this 'sweating' process. If you couldn't make fun of it you would lose your zest in life. You live to write."

"And write to live," laughed her sister; "and it's high time I began, seeing I am weeks behind." And she laid in a row the last of the twelve slender red pencils which she had just been sharpening to her liking, albeit rather lop-sidedly, with an ungainly butcher knife.

"I'll sure buy you another pen knife if I sell this sketch. It gives me the horrors to see you use that awful knife."

"Then you might offer me the loan of yours, dear," said Florence sweetly, as though the idea were a new one and they had not already threshed it out every few days for some years.

"Florence, I would if I could; but it's a physical impossibility. I can't loan my knife or tooth brushes or stomps, and there's an end of it."

"Save your breath, dear," smiled her sister. "I couldn't use a conventional pen knife to save my reputation, which, paradoxically, I may say, I should certainly lose were I to use one. It's against all precedent of women scribblers. I believe in keeping to the convention of the craft. Now I am not at all afraid of a mouse; but I jump on a table just the same, and squeal and gather up my petty skirts. I might count up my cribbage in my head; but why should I, when there are my ten idle fingers under the table? I dare not lose my femininity. However, after all I'll use the machine."

"Pouf, pouf!" exclaimed Belle with exasperation. "You make me wild! Do take your lop-sided butcher-knifed pencils and begin your story—you've lost time enough already."

"Not at all. I have the first two pages in my head."

"Well, do cut out the stereotyped lost letter. For three years you have hacked that over—all of them over age and wrinkled and parted for 'steen years, and brought together in this soggy antediluvian way! Can't you introduce some modern improvement? What you need is some experiences of your own. You won't allow an unchaperoned young man in our front yard, and yet you expect to sit year after year and write about them. It may satisfy you, but it doesn't me. A man on paper making love to suit you doesn't do me any particular good. I'd like to see one right now in the flesh and blood."

"They're much less trouble on paper," said Florence; "they're not always suiting themselves then."

"Poor, henpecked paper men!" sighed Belle. "Do give this poor fellow the bit. Give him a hard mouth. Suppose he does act up a bit? Let him lead the woman a dance." Looking over her sister's shoulder she sighed: "The same old rot!"

"I have a mind," said Florence, rubbing out the title in order to write in another, "to take you at your wish for once, and see what comes of it. Now I'll close my eyes like an idiot and then look around, and the first thing I see that could possibly suggest a man and a woman I'll write about; but—adieu sweet Easter gown, adieu!" and she blew a kiss from her finger tips.

Both of the sisters turned in their chairs, and both exclaimed in a breath, as an automobile, big and red and stunning, drew up to the door.

Florence automatically wrote in: "Love, the Chauffeur," and Belle, her cheeks red and her eyes narrowed, leaned over to read.

Scarcely had the machine clicked the last of the three words, when the young man who alone occupied the car brought it to a standstill and sprang to the ground. There he drew off his dust coat and his long gloves; removed his goggles, then his leather cap, dusting it with an immaculate handkerchief.

"He means to storm the citadel!" cried Belle softly.

"Somebody lost his way," Florence answered. "What a bore! Please see to him, honey. It's ninety miles to Los Angeles. Take the first road to the north."

"Never. He's a newspaper man. He has a camera, a pad and a row of pencils. He has ink in his blood. Oh, Florence, perhaps——"

"Fudge!" But her machine faltered as it clicked down her name and address and spaced for the number of words, and she was compelled to rise and go to the door as her sister bent over her drawing board, feigning deafness.

"You are Miss Kingston?" the young man said, lifting his cap. "Allow me to give you this letter of introduction from Knowles of the Eagle. He thought that you, because of your long newspaper work here, might help me in running down a story that has turned up here. You know people and places as I couldn't in months. I see that you are busy; but they will make it well worth your while. As it's a pretty serious business, they don't care to have any inkling of why I am down here get out, so the old man suggested that it would be best if you do not object (and he vouches for me personally) if I were to be considered an old friend of the family come out from the city to see you. As I have a car, it would be only natural that I should take you about the country. He thought your woman's wit would suggest ways and means of approaching the parties without their taking fright——" His voice trailed off and stopped as he noted her dubious face.

Belle was then introduced, and hastened to say: "Of course she can do it nicely. We are neither of us driven, and I can go as chaperone. The ride itself is, of course, very obnoxious to me." She raised a pair of merry brown eyes to the responsive gray ones of the young man. "Step in and wait a moment, will you, please?" She seated him in the chair by the double windows, where the title of the story in the typewriting stood up above the roll.

In her hurry and flurry and anger at her sister, Florence failed to note the young man's eyes upon her paper. He knew something of her by her work on the journal for which he also rustled.

"'Love, the Chauffeur, a Valentine Story,'" he mused. "Evidently an automobile story. I'll remember to look out for it in the February issues. I never saw such eyes! I wonder what the little one does." He fell to looking about the room. Books almost everywhere. Two desks, a typewriter—he smiled at the row of lop-sided pencils, looking instinctively among the litter of paper on the desk for the butcher knife—and found it.

The restful walls soothed him with their few fine pictures; he liked the freedom from fol-de-rols and whatnots and cosy corners—even of obstructing window draperies—for through the sweep of the windows were the blue, mystical mountains, and reflecting them the quiet waters of a lake. That the little room was different from all other rooms in the village, he felt sure. He had known something of the place from other journeys—a typical western village made up of people from every State in the Union—back numbers, most of them; but interesting, he felt sure these young women would assure him, and kind and good as gold.

When he informed them of this surmise, as they came hatted and veiled for the ride, they were quick to assent.

"It makes you think of 'A Window in Thrums,'" said Belle. "There is always some 'Jess' at her window who can gain the whole story from one small circumstance, and can put any Sherlock Holmes to shame. Why, even now it has traveled the village over that 'the Kingston girls have company in an auto from the city.' By noon one or both of us will have eloped with you, and there is no telling what the evening will bring forth."

"Belle," said her sister, "did you say you would get the tripod for me? Mr. Wellington has forgotten his." When the younger girl had gone, Florence said: "I do hope that my sister will not be misunderstood. We are so secluded here—see so few strangers, and are so well known that we forget ourselves and are not to be judged by your hemmed-up city judgments."

"Your sister is charming," said Mr. Wellington, and would have added an appreciation of herself but that there was a line which this young woman set up and beyond which he did not dare to venture.

"What did I tell you!" cried Belle, entering breathless and dimpling. "Old Mrs. Brown has just sent Mildred over to see if they might lend us plates for dinner. She said she knew we were short, and they haven't forgotten that we loaned them chairs when Alice had her party. Bless old Grandmother Grey's heart! She wondered if it was your beau, Florence, or mine. She told Milded to ask."

Florence flushed and frowned, but the young man laughed.

"Well," continued Belle, "as we were to lie a little, anyway, I considered it right to do it artistically, so I told Mildred to tell the folks——"

"Belle," said Florence, severely, "will you kindly look to the locking of the back door? Yes, we will close these doors, too, and the windows. I don't want the stories lying around to have premature circulation. We go a few miles north, and then west. It's a dreary place—a sort of cañon. The old people live there alone when the boy is gone, as he is supposed to be now. Nobody has seen him for some time; but I remember that the postmistress wondered that they didn't have a letter forwarded to him, but took it out, though occasional letters go to him some place in the North."

"I see, I see, I think I have the whole thing," said Wellington. His eyes narrowed, and he fell to discussing the matter in his quick, jerky way, his mind grappling with the solution of the problem before him.

"Florence," said Belle, as they waited in the machine while he reconnoitered the little mountain ranch, "we have known him always!"

"Belle," said Florence cuttingly, "we have known him just two hours according to my watch. Please see that you remember it."

. . . . ~ . . . .

"Well," said Belle the next day as she resumed her work and watched her sister preparing to take up the thread of her story, "you see the story [illegible] enough. The title couldn't have been [illegible] you leave to use me as the heroine and to let the hero run off with me in his red devil. You may give your fancy wings, for it's clear to see that he thought of us only as instruments in helping him with his 'story,' and not as charming young women. That's what comes from having brains. You see it every time. It's the brains and not the femininity that attracts. For my part, I believe that I'll give up work and go and sponge off Uncle Will's, as they want us to. In that way some nice young man like Mr. Wellington would fall in love with me."

"Belle, you make me weary! Miss Independence sponging, indeed! Methinks I see her eating humble pie and breaking the bread of charity! As for the young man—of course he was here to attend to his work, not to hamper himself with trying to charm young girls. As to the story, I thought it out last night. I intend to use the thing and make what I can of it—as he will. Any fool woman can turn it into a love story."

"Exactly—on paper. It would take a wise one to—" And Belle fell to laughing at her sister's anger.

For an hour there was the uninterrupted click of the typewriter. Then Florence threw the loose pile of manuscript to her sister with a short laugh.

"Surely as unconventional as you would wish."

"It's all right," said Belle after a swift perusal, "but the idiot forgot to send her any valentine at all!"

"Oh, that's all right. They don't send those [illegible] things any more." She slipped the pages into a [illegible] envelope for mailing.

On the morning of February 14, when Belle [illegible] at the little wicket of the village postoffice for the package which was indicated by a card in their box, the little postmistress was all agog. Her eyes were [illegible] with curiosity, her sharp nose scented news as a pointer's scents game; her thin lips were half-parted as though just ready to repeat what she could [illegible] It was with reluctance that she raised the little [illegible] and poked the long package through, for she had [illegible] had time to thoroughly pinch and poke and smell of it and so get a fair inkling of what it contained, and Miss Belle she knew of old.

The handwriting, although it seemed familiar [illegible] way, Belle could not place. The package was [illegible] sister.

"You know who sent it!" cried Belle, as her [illegible] flushing, cut the string from the box and [illegible] view hundreds of violets, exquisite, long-stemmed [illegible] fragant as the bed they must have so lately [illegible] dew still on them.

Under a few layers of tissue paper and to one [illegible] a little book bound in soft leather like [illegible] Bible, and hand-illuminated, as Belle soon [illegible] It was the Fitzgerald edition of Old Omar—[illegible] one; just from the shop, obtainable with a [illegible] silver; but one slightly worn, a little dog's-eared [illegible] lines and interlines, and verses marked, and [illegible] notes, even written-in bits from Stevenson—[illegible] mance" and "Prayer"—and now and then a verse [illegible] Henley, with that barrier-breaker, "Each in His [illegible] Tongue," which the girls loved.

The writing was strong and characteristic. The [illegible] had evidently been one prized and carried about [illegible] spare moments of reading. Belle turned the [illegible] rapidly, thinking to find a card, but none was there. [illegible] the bottom of the box, however, she found one of [illegible] lace paper trifles such as a schoolboy sends to [illegible] sweetheart—a modern one, however, for an [illegible] tooted across the embossed front, with two [illegible] figures on the back seat and Cupid at the wheel. [illegible] the same strong hand was written underneath: [illegible] the Chauffeur," and as though inadvertently [illegible] filling, the story she had written—an advance [illegible] knew, for the magazine was not yet out.

Belle was blushing furiously from the [illegible] her first breath of real romance.

"You will see," she said "that we shall have Mr. Wellington here this afternoon. Oh, Florence [illegible] me go to the city with you! I will go as [illegible] —anything——!"

"Belle," stormed her sister, "I am surprised!"

"And so am I," said Belle, the irrepressible. [illegible] me tell the poor little postmistress. She is [illegible] of unsatisfied curiosity, and it would be [illegible] thing to have to put down in her obituary."

"Hush your foolishness, Belle. I have [illegible] and I feel like writing. So let me be!" But [illegible] watchful, noted with well-concealed pleasure [illegible] little book weighted down the front of the [illegible] waist, where it had been surreptitiously slipped [illegible] new owner.

It was perhaps 2 o'clock when the motor [illegible] into sight; but Belle tucked her tongue in [illegible] and held it there to keep herself from [illegible] sister of what she had said.

There were two women in the tonneau [illegible] the young man talked with them for a [illegible] he came to the house. It was Belle who [illegible] knock and asked him in.

"I wished so much for my mother and sister [illegible] you two," he said, shaking hands, "that I [illegible] bring them with me, hoping that you would [illegible] in and entertain them while I finish up [illegible] in the country."

"Why, certainly," said Belle. "Florence, Mr. [illegible] ton is here and wishes us to meet his mother [illegible] ter. Will you come?"

As the two went slowly through the long [illegible] threw all prudence to the winds as she [illegible] per to the eager young fellow beside her: [illegible] my blessing," and as he, flushing, pressed [illegible] she added shyly: "She will be, oh, so [illegible] whispered back boyishly: "I would not [illegible] wise."

To Oblige a Lady.

CHAUFFEUR WHO BECAME AN IMPERIOUS LOVER.

At underwent a reception that was so so- disconcerting; and when in the servants' hall under the scrutiny of several young women his name was requested for the purposes of formal introduction, he very nearly gave himself away.

Only just in time did he remember to call himself John Percival—his first two Christian names—and under this incognito he made the acquaintance of half a dozen new friends.

Of course the coronet on his Daimler had not escaped observation, and he had to run the gauntlet of a good many leading questions about the noble person in whose employment he was supposed to be. But he managed to avoid pitfalls, and was comparatively at ease when he sat down to dinner between the cook and the upper housemaid.

With the meal came the butler, now free from attendance on his betters. He wore an air of suppressed excitement, patent to everybody but St. Garth, who was too occupied with the novelty of his position to notice it.

"Any noos, Mr. Lawrence?" inquired the cook curiously, as she helped him to an undercut of the sirloin.

"Ah!" exclaimed the butler, winking at St. Garth, "Ask our friend 'ere. I warrant 'e can tell you the noos better than me!"

All eyes turned on the wondering visitor.

"I'm afraid I——" He hesitated.

"Oh, come!" deprecated Mr. Lawrence. "It ain't such a secret as all that. Leastwise, among friends. Though I must say, takin' one thing with another, as it's a bit sudden."

"Whatever do you mean, Mr. Lawrence?" asked the upper housemaid 'Do tell us."

"Well, if Mr. Percival won't let on, I suppose I must!" The butler paused impressively. "I 'ave the pleasure to inform you of a piece of family noos as will gratify you one an' all. It's the breakin' off of Miss Eileen's engagement to Mr. Manby."

"No!" was the general ejaculation.

"You're certain sure?" queried the cook incredulously.

"Mrs. Wall, does anythin' ever escape me—inside the door or hout?" reproved the butler. "The engagement, as I say, is broke off. And why? Because our young lady 'as bettered 'erself by acceptin' a more temptin' hoffer"—he bowed across the table to the guest—"from our friend's noble guv'nor, Lord St. Garth."

John Percival, Viscount St. Garth, dropped his knife and fork into his plate with a startling crash.

. . . .

Shortly after 4, St. Garth was on his way back to the Hydro with the incomprehensible young woman who had professed to be engaged to himself. He was dumbfounded. He had looked at her once or twice, hoping to gather from her face some clew to her strange conduct, but all he read there was an irritating calmness of demeanor.

Yet dimly he saw that a climax to the day's adventure lay somewhere in the near future, and his philosophic mind induced him to possess his soul in patience and wait for it. So he made no further effort to solve the mystery—only kept the car going at a round speed.

A few yards from the Hydro Eileen called upon him to stop.

"I'll get out here, please, and walk the rest of the way," she said.

St. Garth pulled up and opened the door of the tonneau.

"You've driven very well," she went on, and then paused, compunction stirrring her. "I hope your master won't think I've kept you too long."

With that she held a sovereign toward him. St. Garth accepted it with a surprise that Eileen thought meant satisfaction at the magnitude of the tip.

"Thank you, Miss. There are times when my master is always ready to oblige a lady!" he smiled cryptically.

"Was that meant for cheek, I wonder?" mused Eileen as she left him.

. . . .

As Eileen, in a cloud of white lace and tulle, came downstairs the strains of the "Ballsirenen Waltz" told her that the dance had already commenced. Mrs. Charteris, waiting for her in the hall, came forward with a rush.

"Come along, Eileen, I want to introduce you to somebody," she said, and began piloting her among the groups gathered round the ballroom doors. "Here he is!"

Eileen was inattentive. Reaction had followed her morning's escapade. She did not look up as the man indicated came toward them.

"Lord St. Garth, let me introduce you to Miss Grant."

Mrs. Charteris prattled on conventionally. Eileen did not hear a word. She was staring blankly into the face of the man whose car she had commandered, and—dreadful thought!—whose name she had appropriated as that of her affianced husband.

"We're engaged, are we not?" teased St. Garth, pausing long enough to complete Eileen's consternation. "For all your waltzes," he added.

Eileen knew that she was found out. She was being laughed at, and she dared not resent it. She allowed him to appropriate her programme and remained impotent while he scribbled his name across its virgin surface.

"I think I deserve the whole boiling!" he declared, as he led her among the dancers.

All through the waltz Eileen struggled to remain her composure, and at the first pause began an incoherent string of excuses and apologies. But St. Garth cut her short.

"Oh, I don't mind a bit!" he interrupted, wilfully misunderstanding her. "They did me jolly well in the servants' hall. What fun it will be when they see me next time."

"Next time?" echoed Eileen in alarm.

"Next week, I mean," corrected St. Garth mischievously. "When you introduce me to your people."

Eileen gasped in mingled fear and stupefaction.

"Please, please take me out!" she implored.

St. Garth conducted her to a quiet corner of the hall.

"Why did you do it?" he asked.

Then she poured out the agonized confession that could no longer be held back. She went into reasons; urged the temptation of a name on an envelope; she pleaded expediency; she expressed contrition; she was almost reduced to tears; and when her humiliating admissions came to an end she looked imploringly at St. Garth hoping for forgiveness, but not daring to expect it.

"You're in a tight place," he said judicially.

Eileen nodded dolefully.

"What about me?" he went on. "I'm in a hole as well—compromised!"

Eileen looked penitent.

"And unless you promise to take my advice I can't get you—or myself—out of the mess."

"I promise—anything," she faltered.

"Come on, then," said St. Garth, rising. He led the way to the deserted writing-room, and opened a book of telegraph forms.

"Will you write it for me?" he asked. "My fist is so rotten."

Eileen sat down with a pencil in her trembling fingers.

"To Mrs. Grant, the Grange, Ottersham," dictated St. Garth. Eileen caught her breath.

"Go on!" he ordered, and she wrote the words.

"Percival and I motoring down tomorrow. Wedding arranged for next month. Now, sign it."

"Oh, I can't!" she cried weakly.

"You must! You can't get out of it!" he protested. "You took my car, you've taken my name, and now, by George! you've got to take me as well."

"But—but—next month[" faltered Eileen.

"It is a long time," he admitted. "I'll get a special license. Do you indorse that?"

Eileen wavered between inclination and pride. Pride "ran out of juice."

"I think I'd better indorse this—first," she murmured shyly, her face all rosy as she signed the telegram.

"Great Scot! won't old Lawrence have a fit when he sees me!" laughed St. Garth as he kissed her.

ARMIGER BARCLAY.

THE WRECKING TRAIN.

RAILROAD MEN WHO GET BUSY WHEN AN ACCIDENT HAPPENS.

[New York Sun:] It takes just about five minutes for the New York Central wrecking crew at Utica, N. Y., to get under way when a wreck happens somewhere east of Kirkville or west of Albany, which is the usual territory covered by this crew, a distance of thirty-eight miles to the westward and eighty-seven miles to the eastward. Five minutes is the time required if the wreck happens in the daytime. If the accident happens at night the use of the telephone gets every member of the crew out of bed, in which case it requires about fifteen minutes to get the crew together and the engine hitched to the seven-car train. The wrecking aggregation located at Utica is typical of the wrecking outfits of the Central Railroad.

When two trains run into each other and mess things up and hurt somebody, the wrecking crew's first business is to care for the wounded. In Utica the New York Central has the names of four physicians on its list, and when the wrecking crew hears that some one is hurt, one of these doctors is notified. If the wreck is a large one, not only are all four doctors taken along, but also all others who can be obtained. The wrecking train is also supplied with first-aid-to-the-injured outfits.

The wrecking train consists of seven cars, the steam crane, the idler, over which the boom hangs, with a cabin on the other end in which ride the crane engineer and the rigger; a dining and sleeping-car combined, in which the crew eats and sleeps; a tool car, a blocking-car, which carries the blocks used in blocking up cars, and two cars loaded with trucks which may be placed under cars when wheels or axles have been twisted.

An ordinary wrecking crew consists of the wrecking master, a crane engineer, a rigger and eight wreckers. The assistant train master accompanies the crew to learn how the wreck happened and to attend to other matters. When the wreck is large, the size of the crew is increased.

The steam crane constantly keeps steam up ready for business, and the fire is never drawn without the permission of the superintendent. When the wrecking crew learns of a wreck, the first available engine is hooked to the seven cars, and no time is wasted in arriving at the scene of action.

The first thing the steam crane does is to hoist the débris off the track. Just as soon as one of the tracks has been opened the wrecking master reports to the superintendent and gives him an estimate of the length of time it will require to open the other tracks.

The wrecking master is in full command at the wreck. One of the wreckers acts as a clerk and takes note of every bit of damage done, for it will be his business to make a detailed report of what happened in the mix-up. If the nature of the wreck indicates the cause, he will report that also.

The crane has a lift rating of sixty tons, which is sufficient to hoist a freight car bodily upon a track. When it tackles a passenger car it can lift one end at a time. Whenever the crew goes to the electrified West Shore Railroad, the members wear rubber boots and rubber gloves as extra precautions, although the current is supposed to be turned off from the third rail after a wreck has happened.

"Analyzed" by Three Chemists.

APROPOS of President Taft and his recent decision about whisky, Richard Le Gallienne said at a dinner at the St. Regis:

"While I was living in Liverpool, there arose a hot whisky discussion. Was pot-still whisky the only wholesome one, or was patent-still whisky the one non-poisonous drink? Chemical analyses were applied to every whisky going.

"A Liverpudlian entered a public house near the Albert Docks one night and said:

"'Is yer whisky pure?'

"'Well, I should think so,' the publican answered. 'It's been paralyzed by three anarchists.'"

* * *

The Napkin.

PROF. CHARLES ZUEBLIN, the sociologist, said at the end of one of his suggestive and amusing lectures in New York:

"These so-called society people have their theory of life all wrong. Hence you can't argue with them. Begin an argument, and they answer you with the complacent wrong-headedness of the Pendleton waiter.

"A salesman, after visiting the Pendleton glass works, entered a small restaurant and ordered a steak and potatoes. Then he looked at the napkin beside his place, and to his horror discovered a number of yellow egg stains on it.

"'Waiter,' he said, in a shocked voice, 'look at these egg stains on my napkin!'

"'Beg pardon, sir,' the waiter answered, turning the napkin over. 'I folded it the wrong way, sir.'"

* * *

Dressed Down.

"THE late D. Ogden Mills," said a veteran San Franciscan, "had, in his younger days, a keen sense of humor.

"I remember once, back in bonanza times, a chap named Biltong. Bill came in to 'Frisco with a bag of gold and a swelled head. But young Mills dressed him down.

"Mills told him he was almost as conceited as the new Mayor of Tin Can, who, when the crowd cheered him, held up his hand and said reproachfully:

"'Now, boys, remember, I'm just a mortal man like yourselves.'"

* * *

Rather Unflattering.

"RUDYARD KIPLING is a good-looking chap," said a Chicago journalist.

He looked about him doubtfully.

"Kipling," he went on, "is very good-looking indeed. A solid, squat, substantial, square-headed figure of a man.

"Of course he is no Mowgli, no hero of romance. I must say, though, that the young Chicago girl at Engelberg—she was a great admirer of 'The Brushwood Boy' and other Kipling pieces—I must say that this girl acted rather foolishly when, on being introduced to Kipling, she cried reproachfully, with tears in her eyes:

"'Oh, I thought you were tall and handsome!'"

* * *

The Right Spirit.

APROPOS of Valentine's Day, a passenger on the Bermudian said:

"Mark Twain once told us, in a little Valentine Day speech on this boat, of an Irish wooer who had the right Valentine spirit. Acceptance or rejection he could take with equal grace.

"'Will ye be my valentine?' he said, on February 14, to the girl he loved.

"'No,' she replied. 'I am another's.'

"He heaved a sigh and said:

"'Shure, thin, darlin', I wish ye was twins, so that I could have at laste the half of ye.'"

* * *

His Rats.

M. PAULHAN, congratulated by a correspondent on his record-breaking flights, said:

"Flying conditions are so perfect in this beautiful city that I could, I believe, fly up to Paradise from here—unless indeed the Wrights, besides owning the air, own Paradise, too.

"The Wrights, much as I respect them, claim to own too much. They are as bad as Monsieur Paul.

"Monsieur Paul was a grocer. Rats overran his city, and a price of two sous a head was placed upon them by the Town Council. Monsieur Paul's errand boy, working early and late, managed to slay ninety rats in the cellars and attics of the shop. The boy took his prey to the City Hall, and, returning to the grocery jubilant, showed Monsieur Paul the nine francs he had gained.

"The grocer held out his palm.

"'Hand the money here,' he said. 'You know very well those rats were mine, not yours.'"

* * *

Father Tabb on Poe.

THE late Father Tabb was one of the few literary Americans who really admired Poe.

Father Tabb, at a dinner in New York, once said of a monument to Poe:

"Poe used to be despised. Prof. Woodberry wrote a contemptuous biography of him. Emerson dismissed him with a sneer as 'the jingle man,' and that is the only Emersonian phrase that is immortal. William Dean Howells in 'April Hopes' made fun of him.

"Poe is the only American who has written things really worth while, really permanent things, and to Poe America denied a living.

"But now," Father Tabb concluded, "we put up monument after monument in his honor. Verily, it may be said of Poe:

"'He asked for bread and they gave him a stone.'"

The Brave Absentee.

T. P. O'CONNOR, during his recent visit to America, told many a story about absentee landlords.

"One of these men," said Mr. O'Connor at a dinner in New York, "wrote to his Kerry steward from a Piccadilly club, in the troublous days of land league and moonlighters:

"'Tell the tenants that no threats to shoot you will frighten me.'"

A Valentine to the Faculty.

"A FAIR western co-ed got last year, by way of valentine, notice to quit, from the faculty. She and a senior had fallen in love. Both, therefore, were fired."

The speaker was Dr. Charles L. Russelman of Bangor, the noted writer on co-education. He continued:

"The co-ed on being fired wrote this interesting reply to the faculty:

"'Gentlemen: You have expelled me for neglecting my studies, yet I have learned at your institution more than you will ever know. I have learned the meaning of love.

"'What is the use of studying botany if I am not allowed to gather roses? Why should I devote myself to astronomy if I may not look at the stars? What does it profit me to spend years on mathematics and neglect my own figure?

"'You have expelled my fiancé also. Do you think he is unhappy? We were married last evening.'"

The Frank Cabby.

MISS MAUD ALLAN, the well-known dancer, said on the Lusitania, apropos of comic valentines:

"They are too frank, and frankness is a bad thing. There is nothing more dangerous than to encourage it.

"A prince in London last year went about incog. You'd see him chatting with a waiter in Frascati's, or playing dominoes at the Café Royal, or arguing heatedly with a cabman over a shilling fare.

"Prince X, feeling very good one night after supper, said to his cabman, as he paid the reckoning:

"'Do you know this Prince X, Cabby?'

"'Yes, Yer Honor,' the cabby answered, touching his hat.

"'Well, what sort of a chap is he?'

"'Why, sir,' said the cabby, 'some says as he's a good 'un, and some says as he's a bad 'un; but I say he's only a hass.'"

Father Might Have Waited.

FATHER was running on the Democratic ticket for District Attorney in Greene county, New York, in the fall of 1904, and his canvass for votes took him to one of the river towns among the farmers. He found in the field, plowing, a hard-working farmer, one of several brothers, who took much more interest in the subject of agriculture than in politics. Father broached the subject of his candidacy to the farmer, requesting him to come out to election and asked to be remembered. He then spoke about the other boys and was told that if they got along well with their fall work all of them would be at the polls and cast their votes for father. It then occurred to father that he had heard that the boys' father had died a short time before, and he said to the farmer: "Let's see, your father is dead, isn't he?" "Yes, sir," answered the farmer, assuming a very solemn tone and expression, "he died here last summer, right in haying time, when we were just as busy as we could be."—[National Monthly.

Miss Smith Sings.

"WON'T you sing something?" asked the hostess.

"I am afraid I can't," said Miss Smith.

"Oh, Miss Smith," said lady number one, "you have a perfectly charming voice."

"I'm all out of practice."

"Nonsense!" emphasized lady number two. "It's lovely. You must sing."

"Yes, you must," said the hostess.

"Come now," said lady number three, "be a dear, do! I'm just dying to hear you; I simply can't wait."

"Some other time."

"If you persist in denying us all this pleasure," broke in lady number four, "we shall never forgive you. I've just been longing to hear you. You simply must."

Whereupon, Miss Smith, sighing deeply to herself, went to the piano and started her song, while ladies number one, two, three and four continued their conversation where it had been broken off.—[New York Herald.

Troubles of a Humorist.

MARK TWAIN once approached a friend, a business man, and confided the fact that gems of thought were forming in his brain with such rapidity that they were even beginning to sparkle in his eyes, and that he needed the assistance of a stenographer.

"I can send you one, fine young fellow," the friend said. "He came to my office yesterday in search of a position, but I didn't have an opening. I am sure you will find him all right."

"Has he a sense of humor?" Mark asked cautiously.

"Oh, I am sure he has—in fact, he got off one or two pretty witty things himself yesterday," the friend hastened to assure him.

"Sorry, but he won't do, then," the writer said, with a disappointed shake of his head.

"Why, er, why not?" was the surprised query.

The would-be employer assumed a confidential air.

"I'll tell you," he said. "You see, I had one once before with a sense of humor, and it interfered too much with the work. I can't afford to pay a man $2 a day for laughing."—[New York Times.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

FIRST CLASS FLOWERS PROPAGATED FROM NEW CUTTINGS ONLY.

By Ernest Braunton.

CLUMPS of old chrysanthemums, that have already flowered for one or more years will now begin to send up vigorous young shoots and from these should be propagated a supply of plants deeded to furnish the coming autumn's stock of flowers. Nearly all our amateur growers use the old clumps year after year, or at most divide them and replant, though no first-class flowers can be produced from any except plants propagated from cuttings early in the same year. So many continue with clumps for the reason they do not know how easily young plants may be propagated.

From now until April, cuttings or "slips" may be taken with every chance of successful propagation. Get a box six or more inchs in depth; bore holes through bottom for drainage and scatter a little coarse gravel, small stones or broken pots over the bottom so that water may easily percolate toward the numerous drainage holes. Fill the box with clean, sharp sand and wet it down thoroughly. The young chrysanthemum shoots are so tender you may break them off, as very few but gardeners expert in the matter will properly cut them, and unless a knife is kept clean or constantly dipped, the cuttings may be injured. Pinch off with thumb nail and finger all the leaves from each slip except the tuft on the end, and if these are inclined to droop, cut off the upper one-half of this end tuft. These slips should be from three to four inches long and be planted in sand from one to two inches deep. When you have broken off your slips allow them to stand in fresh water until next morning so to prevent wilting during the first day—the most important of all days in propagation. Use a piece of lath or other straight edge to lay across the top of the box to mark lines for cuttings. Use an old table knife or a small thin paddle to make a sharp cut or groove in the sand along the straight edge. Insert the cuttings in this cut; never force them into the sand, for this will bruise the tender ends and induce decay. After pressing the sand against the cuttings, make another cut about two inches from the first and proceed as before. Use boxes small enough so that you may cover them with panes of glass (unless you have a glass house,) and these must be painted or shaded slightly to prevent too much light and heat. Never allow the glass to fit down closely upon the top of box, but put under the edge little chips of wood a quarter or half inch thick so that a free circulation of air may be had above the cuttings. Keep the boxes in a sunny position and never allow the sand to get dry. In from three to four weeks all will be rooted, though they need never be taken out until a couple of weeks (not more) later. Set out in rich, mellow soil, but one containing no fresh manure. A few should be potted up or replanted in the box at some distance apart so they may replace any in the field that may perish. When young plants are eight inches high, their training should begin by pinching out the terminal growth, or if they are much higher, cut them off to eight inches, and then they should be allowed three or four branches from the upper part, and these in turn must be pinched or cut until a perfect bush, well balanced, is built up. Never do any topping after July, for this is the last month for restriction of growth. Of course if plants are to be trained to single stems for one to five flowers, they should not be made to branch into bushes. The disbudding and feeding make another story and need not be told at this time.

CALIFORNIA SUGAR PINE.

Our Sugar Pine.

PINUS LAMBERTIANA, the sugar pine, is the finest of all our California pines, for it attains a height of nearly 200 feet, and sometimes has a diameter of from six to eight feet. The longer, slender cones are often sixteen inches long, with a diameter of less than three inches. These hang pendant at the tips of the branches and several may plainly be seen in the cut of this remarkably beautiful tree shown on this page. The upper limbs are usually best developed and the lower ones scant or absent. This peculiarity makes it a good subject for park massing.

Garden Work for February.

AN early spring impels us to do things thus early that usually may be left until another month. Lawns should be fertilized at once and a commercial fertilizer is much to be preferred to stable manure full of weed seeds. Also seed the places now bare or where weeds are so thick that no grass remains after their removal, though such places should never be.

Plant agapanthus, amaryllis, cannas, caladiums (Elephant's Ears,) dahlias, iris, gladioli, and all that class of bulbs, corms and roots. Do not plant all gladioli at once, though earlier plantings give the better flowers. Plants of pansies, salvias, stocks, verbenas and all "bedders" may now be set out. Deciduous trees and shrubs should be planted at once, and all hardy seeds and plants should be rushed, for growing weather is with us and only those plants that get a good start in spring come to greatest perfection. Carnation cuttings may be rooted in precisely the same manner prescribed in this issue for chrysanthemums. Hardwood cuttings of roses and all deciduous shrubs such as crepe myrtle, deutzia, hydrangea, lemon verbena, lilac and weigelia should now be made and put in sand or soil.

The Back Yard.

GIVE your back garden a chance to prove what can be accomplished there. Start in early to plan for the arrangement of the little garden spot, choosing the flowers which seem best adapted to it. If the space is large, have it dug for you, though, if possible, take the time outdoors and accomplish the work yourself. You will enjoy it, and it will pay you a thousand times in health and strength. Do not try elaborate designs, for it will mean enlarged expense, besides taking more time, and the chances are ten to one that it will disappoint you after all. Instead make the flower arrangements as simple as possible, blending two or three pretty flowers and vines, and giving them plenty of room to grow and spread themselves. This will aid in counterbalancing the disadvantages of shade and poor soil. Give your back-yard garden a fair chance, and see if it does not repay all your care of it, by filling your days with brightness.

Flower Better Than Fly Paper.

MIGNONETTE a substitute for fly paper! Surely, of any remedy for any bad condition, that announcement has a delightful sound, says the New York Press. A woman living in the country asserts that in a room where pots of mignonette are set, flies will not linger. "Instead of placing those annoying sticky sheets of paper about the room," says an experienced woman, "or "undergoing exhausting exercise of driving the pests out of the place through windows, the blessed plant just seems to blow them out on a wave of what you and I would call its fragrance."

Red California Poppies.

NEARLY every one is familiar with the varieties of our California Poppy (Eschscholtzia Californica) that range from a light cream to a deep orange, yet very few know the late introductions in shades of pink and red. All of these prove a curiosity to those seeing them for the first time and some of them are very beautiful. These are not, save one, Burbankian introductions, but nearly all have been obtained by European growers through selection (the only way in which they could be secured.)

St. Patrick Carnations.

THOSE who wish green carnations for the 17th of March should note that white carnations put in a simple harmless die will quickly turn green. Get a few cents' worth each of analine blue and analine yellow, mix and bring to a boil. Ten cents' worth of each dye will make a gallon of the mixture. Do not use until cold. These dyes are harmless, for they are used by candy-makers. Better cut this out for future reference.

STREET-TREE PRUNING.

MUCH THAT IS DONE IS NOTHING BUT VANDALISM.

TO properly trim street trees is somewhat of a problem, and none that the writer has noted in Los Angeles could be called by any other than "hacking." Sawing off the ends of large branches is not pruning, and is at all times detrimental to any tree. Nevertheless, this rude vandalism passes with most people for pruning.

The removal of a large part of the top, as above outlined, results in the growth of a lot of mistletoe-like, slender branches which can never go toward the upbuilding of a large, well-balanced top. Such trees never again become beautiful, though from the outside they may present a cloud of green. When it becomes necessary to cut back a large branch it should be amputated just above a thrifty branch, this branch preferably upon the upper side. This branch may in turn be treated in like manner and the task of heading-in" accomplished in an intelligent manner and the tree left looking quite its natural self. Avoid all forks if possible. If two branches are of equal size, remove one at its junction with its fellow, and allow its place to be filled by [illegible] branches on the remaining limb. Forks or [illegible] are always a prolific source of damage through [illegible].

Tree of Heaven.

[illegible] where deciduous street trees are in vogue, the "Tree of Heaven" (Ailanthus glandulosa) is much [illegible] and is often used for massing in parks for this [illegible] "massing" is accomplished by the free suckering habit of the tree.

[illegible] said that no lumber from this tree is now to be [illegible]. No dealer or manufacturer of lumber ever saw it [illegible], and would not recognize it if seen. Yet it is [illegible] wood, resembling white ash, and capable [illegible] a high polish. The tree is a native of [illegible] Islands, just south of the equator and not [illegible] Borneo. There it forms a large forest tree. [illegible] brought from China during the first decade of the [illegible] century and has gradually spread over the [illegible] States. It is planted for shade only. The male [illegible] very offensive while in blossom, but the female [illegible] no such odor. They have a tropical appear[illegible] spread by underground roots, suckering like the [illegible] so as to make them a nuisance on the lawn. [illegible] has run wild in some places. Groups of [illegible] are quite frequently found where apparently [illegible] have taken the clusters of winged seeds for lining [illegible], some of the seeds thus escaping them.

[illegible] keeping up a tirade for several years [illegible] the billboard nuisance, it is very pleas[illegible] that some drastic measures are about to be [illegible] to the curtailing of this most offensive [illegible] eyesores. The vacant lot is another present [illegible] with or without the billboard. Ash heaps, piles [illegible] broken dishes, bailing wire, old bed springs, [illegible] and perambulators, bottles without num[illegible] cast-off shoes are a few of the decorations noted [illegible] our vacant lots.

[illegible] is indicative of cleanliness, just as surely in [illegible] of a municipality as with individuals. While [illegible] a little to some one to secure this cleanli[illegible] of maintenance of a high standard would [illegible], and assurance of such desirable condi[illegible] brought about by the passage and enforcement of suitable ordinances. Neatness has its own reward, for aside from improved appearances, a decided menace to health is thereby removed. The value of cleanliness to the city-beautiful movement is simply incalculable, for it is not to the eye alone that the offense of dirt and rubbish comes; beautiful surroundings have a decided effect upon the character of our lives. Clean characters come only from clean conditions and clean surroundings. That city is not a desirable place of residence in which many evidences are seen of slovenly municipal housekeeping. Uncleanliness is not a valuable asset.

Three Famous Old Trees.

THERE is a tree in Cheapside, London, which may literally be described as the most expensive of its kind on earth. If $5 gold pieces filled the entire trunk and $5 bills fluttered in the place of its leaves, it would not buy the ground it occupies, for the land on which it stands is worth $4,500,000 an acre. The tree has stood on the spot for 200 years. There have been several hard-fought law suits over this plot of ground, the fight having been carried even to the House of Lords, but so far, the lawyers have never been able to break through the legal enactments which preserve the tree.

Two great oak trees in the garden at the White House are known as the "Peace Oaks." They were planted previous to the Civil War by John J. Crittenden and James B. Beck of Kentucky. These men, who were representing the State of Kentucky in the United States Senate, attempted to defer the war by means of a peace conference. Their failure was symbolized by planting two acorns from which grew these carefully-guarded trees. Two small seedling oaks—"Peace Trees," sprouted from acorns, the fruit of the "Peace Oaks," have recently been sent from the botanical gardens in Washington to be planted in one of the public parks in Kentucky.

Oaks for Streets.

IN the matter of the choice of trees there is a popular notion that oaks grow slowly, and for that reason these trees are not planted. People will say that it takes a lifetime for an oak to reach any considerable size. Such an idea is easy to overcome by showing what oaks will do when properly planted and cared for. Some of the finest streets in the city of Washington are planted with oaks, notably Pennsylvania avenue, planted with pin oaks, and Twelfth street, planted with pin oaks four years ago, and they have grown in many cases even more rapidly than the other species with the exception of the oriental plane.

Neglected Street Trees.

FEW things are more important in the care of trees than proper pruning. The cut should be made close to and even with the trunk. When pruning is properly done, the scar will heal. When short stumps are left they dry and rot, prevent the wound from healing, and carry decay into the tree.

A matter that is neglected when trees are left to the individual to look after is the placing of guards around them. Of all mechanical injuries to shade trees, those by horses are most fatal. On any street having trees may be found scores of examples of trees which had been barked by horses. The annual layers of wood fail to cover up the portion where the bark had been stripped. The exposed wood dries, checks moisture, causes it to rot and the decay is soon carried to the heart of the tree.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

RATIO OF FEED TO PRODUCT.

ONE HUNDRED POUNDS OF FEED TO THIRTY POUNDS OF HEN FRUIT.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

IF we are to believe the last farm census, the average output of the American hen was 60 eggs per annum. In some States where poultry culture has commanded widest attention, the average was better. As for instance, in Maine it was 101 eggs; in New Hampshire, 96; in Missouri and Iowa much the same, while in California it fell below this number. In many individual cases the average output per hen was much larger, due to careful management in both the breeding pens as well as with the general flock. But we are now considering averages, which appeal strongly to our sense of economy, since the present high prices of living have become a serious matter to the average family hen. It is more than probable that the coming census will show higher averages, because of better management and the introduction of trap-nesting.

These figures are interesting from the fact that the average poultry breeder and fancier, be he a small or large breeder, can easily augment a larger output of eggs by more intensive culture, and by the elimination of the poor layer from his flock. As has before been stated in these columns, the Australians have carried egg production to a higher average per hen, than the Americans—an accomplishment made possible only by more careful and intelligent caretaking.

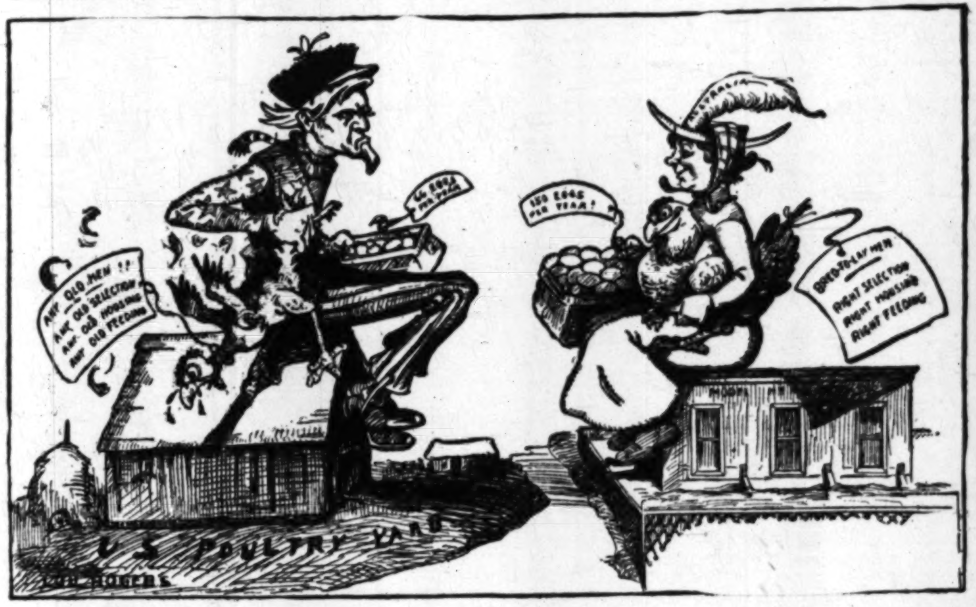
Many of the agricultural experiment statisticians have done some good work of an educational character calculated to show where wear and tear can be lessened, and the output materially increased. In a late bulletin the Oregon statistician gives the result of experiments, proving that the well-bred and well-managed hen can be made to convert 100 pounds of food into thirty pounds of eggs. Allowing an average of eight eggs to the pound, would give us twenty dozen eggs—a showing that is not impossible, but decidedly improbable with an average flock with the best of care. But even with an average product of only twenty pounds of eggs to the 100 pounds of feed, the profit is still a handsome one to the breeder. Indeed, is it not evident that even with the present prevailing prices for the grain foods that poultry is a profitable industry? Thirteen dozen of eggs at 30 cents—present price—yields $3.90 against the 100 pounds of feed, say, at $2.50. To be sure, fixed charges of plant must be added to cost feed, but even then the margin under careful management will show a net gain of about $1 per hen, allowing her only the average, 150 eggs per annum.

All this implies better method, better appliances, and the exercise of brain and brawn in the poultry yard. Where large numbers are raised annually, no one with a view to the main chance will think of big success without the use of incubators and brooders. The improvements and advances made with these modern adjuncts of the poultry industry render their use of less care than hatching and brooding in the natural way. To these should be added other implements, and especially a green bone and an alfalfa cutter.

There is no probability that the prices for poultry products will be seriously depressed within the immediate future. The great tourist and health resorts of California will take all the product that the California poultry industry will furnish for years to come.

Selecting a Breed and Variety.

With the advent of spring and its attendant house-moving and housecleaning many people other than fanciers and breeders will experience an attack of the "chicken fever," coupled with a desire to possess a few good hens for family uses. To the novice in web and feather operations, the selection of a breed or variety is often more or less perplexing. To ask advice of breeders is good in its way, only that each will be extolling the virtue of his own birds to the exclusion of all others. "Which is the best breed" is a stereotyped question that is propounded to every poultry writer almost every day of the year. To the beginner records of remarkable performances in egg-laying and rapidity of development can have but little significance. Almost invariably these are attained only under the most favorable conditions, and then always in the hands of experts. Stock or eggs for hatching secured from such a source are liable to prove a disappointment in the hands of inexperienced, because supposed to duplicate the record of their parents under much less favorable conditions, though, of course, the stock is always to be preferred, and if afforded any care at all, will do better by the beginner than mixed or inferior strains. Hence it is advisable to get good foundation stock.



"KEERFUL TENDIN'" MAKES THE HEN PAY.

Uncle Sam: "Say, Austrayle, how did you git that tarnul hen of yourn ter lay so many more eggs a year than this hen o' mine'll lay?"
Australia: "Jest keerful tendin' of her, Sam, keerful tendin'!"—[Orange Judd Farmer.

Obviously, for family use, the utility breeds have first choice. These are divided into four classes: The Mediterranean, the American, the English and the Asiatic. The first comprise the Leghorns, Minorcas, Andalusians, etc., all of which are more or less addicted to flying, and on this account are not so suitable for small quarters. The English and American class embrace the Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, the Dorkings and Orpingtons, all of which are rated as both egg and meat breeds. They stand confinement well, are usually good layers of brown-shelled eggs, mature rapidly, and can be safely commended for the city-lot breeder and fancier. The Asiatic give us the Brahmas, Cochins and Langshans, distinguished from the American class because larger and all have feathered legs. For the most part they furnish a larger carcass, lay as well as could be expected of heavy birds, stand confinement well, and are on the whole desirable for family purposes. There are many other breeds, also good, but to the beginner, any one of the above will prove interesting and of utility value.

To all who contemplate growing a few chickens this spring, we suggest that they select the breed and variety that strikes their fancy on grounds of form and color of plumage. The Mediterraneans afford a wide range in color of plumage from the pure White Leghorns to the Black Minorca, with the Anconas, Brown Leghorns and Andalusians as the parti-colored varieties. The same also holds true of the English, Asiatic and American classes. It is also well to remember that it costs no more to care for standard-bred fowls, than it does for mongrels or "mixed" flocks. For there is always the sense of the beautiful that the formed gratifies in addition to economic values. Another point to remember is to limit your operations to a single breed or variety. One such bred to perfection will tax your ingenuity much beyond what a beginner would deem possible. A flock of chickens is not without its cares, but for the person possessing a love of bird life and the outdoor life that is possible under a Southern California sun, it can certainly be made a source of pleasure as well as profit.

large sums have been received from the various about the country to be added to the fund is being raised. It takes approximately $600,000 the expenses of the society each year and the that the officials expect to receive through gift will be considered in the light of a something to depend on in financial depres- slacking-up of contributions.

In the salesroom are to be seen single books from the Bible, printed in clear type and bound in cloth, which retail for 2 cents apiece, those in foreign tongues at 3 cents. The New Testament costs 6 cents. The complete Bible may be had for 17 cents, the foreign versions costing 25 cents. The most expensive Bibles printed for the holiday trade, with soft covers of scarlet leather, cost only $1.80, the object of the society being to furnish these volumes as cheaply as possible and eliminating editions de luxe and Bibles in expensive bindings, except in rare instances where a direct call is made for them. The low prices, many of them much below the actual cost of production, are interesting in connection with the statistics furnished by Dr. Dwight in regard to the expense incurred in earlier times.

"Before the art of printing the Bible was reproduced exclusively by briefmen or copyists who wrote it out with the pen, and it was then the most expensive book in the world," he said. "In the thirteenth century a copy of the Bible with a few explanatory notes cost $150. The wages of a laborer amounted then to 18 cents a week and it would take a workman about fifteen years to earn enough to purchase a volume.

"Even after the invention of printing the Bible sold at fabulous sums. In as late a period as that immediately following the American Revolution the dearth of books was so great that the possession of a Bible ranked with that of the other treasures of a household. The cheapest volume cost not less than $2."

Altogether, through the efforts of the society, translations of the Bible have been made into about 450 languages and dialects. These translations are generally made by missionaries, who in the countries where there is no written tongue find themselves confronted by a work that oftentimes takes anywhere from two to five years and is attended by very great difficulties. As soon as a missionary has formulated a written language from the spoken sounds and has taught some of the natives to read and write he wants to translate the Bible and requests the Bible Society to print the translation and send him the books for distribution.

At the present time, the Bible Society is printing the Bible in three of the languages of Africa which have never been used for writing. It is also printing Bibles in five of the languages of the Philippines and slowly completing the printed list of thirty languages used in the islands of the South Pacific.

A great many of the books intended for distribution in the Far East are printed in places other than New York. For example, there is a fine printing establishment at Yokohama under the auspices of the Bible Society, which employs Japanese workmen under contract. From this place distribution is made to the Philippines and to Korea. The society also prints in Shanghai and Chen Tu and at Bangkok in Siam, and at Beirut in Syria similar work is done, some of it on presses belonging to the Presbyterian Missionary Society, with which the American Bible Society coöperates.

All the books for South Africa are printed here, and those for the Gilbert Islands, the Kusaie and Ponape Islands too, as well as many other far-away points. The packing of Bibles for these points requires great precautions, which means usually that they are placed in tin boxes which are made airtight and soldered and then put in wooden boxes, so that if they should be dropped overboard on their way from a ship's side or in voyaging up rivers and through canals the books will not be damaged.

The United States is divided into sections, and from the agencies established in each colporteurs cover certain allotted territory.

"We are apt," continues Mr. Dwight, "to think that the missionaries of South Africa, of the Philippines, among the Basques and in Iceland, as may be, must necessarily meet with strange peoples and strange adventures, but we do not have to go beyond the confines of our own country to parallel them.

"Many of the colporteurs, particularly those in the Northwest, speak at least twenty different languages, and continually requests are coming from them and from outside people begging that the Bible may be translated into some dialect or language spoken in far-off points, the very names of which are unknown to the majority of New Yorkers. In the agency which distributes the Scriptures from the city of San Francisco in California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington are Spanish-speaking Mexicans, Portuguese, one-half of all the Chinese in the United States, Japanese, Koreans, Hindus, Malays, Hawaiians and Filipinos.

"The agency established in the Northwest during the year ending in March 31, 1909, distributed Scriptures in thirty-five different languages, including, in addition to French, German, Scandinavian and Finnish, such tongues as the Lettish, Slovak, Lithuanian, Croatian, Slovanian and Arabic. One of the Bible Society colporteurs was sent to Indianapolis to distribute books among the Hunyaks. The name was unknown to him. When he went among them he found that the people so designated were a medley of Servians, Croatians, Bulgarians, Macedonians, Turks, Roumanians, Greeks, Albanians, Germans and Hungarians.

"In Haughville, a suburb of Indianapolis, he found Slovanians, Polanders, Slovaks and Lithuanians. These foreigners live togethed in groups; in one instance, fifty-three men were living in five small rooms. The colporteurs employed by the American Bible Society during the last year numbered approximately 662; of these 163 were in the home agencies and the remainder in the foreign agencies and as missionary correspondents.

"The revisions of the various translations and editions of the Bible already printed is also an important branch of the work." For example, we have been at work since last spring in getting a Spanish revision and expect it will take six years to complete the work. For this purpose we brought here three American missionaries from Mexico, three men who have lived in South America for thirty years and know the literary language perfectly, and to assist these three native scholars.

"They are expected to keep close watch on each other's work and prevent either provincialisms or the stiff old Castilian tongue from predominating. When the revision of the existing Bible is completed, a thousand copies will be sent through the Spanish-speaking countries to get the criticisms of the people. This is called the experimental publication, and when the books return to us they will come with many new ideas, valuable as well as useless suggestions and criticisms of the translators' and revisers' work.

"In China there has been working for twelve years a committee composed of Americans and British, who are revising two Chinese dialects, and these men will stay there and dig for several years longer, for it is a tremendous piece of work. Another equally difficult task is the revision of the Zulu Bible. A task of less work, but of importance, is the Portuguese.

"The Arabic reference Bible is now being printed at the press in Beirut, Syria, and the completion of the Mandarin Chinese reference Bible continues, slowly progressing to an ultimate perfection. The revision work is considered of tremendous importance in the society.

"In regard to the work nearer at hand, in New York there are several auxiliaries which help in this work, and there are in Manhattan between thirty-five and forty spoken languages. Agents from the society are sent daily to Ellis Island. During the eighty years ended October 1, 1906, the society distributed 2,030,088 copies of the Bible in this way.

"Early in its history the society made arrangements to supply Bibles at half-cost to hotels, steamboats and railroad cars, and at the principal seaports, with New York in the lead, a large number are regularly sent among the naval forces and among seamen generally. About a million and a half books have been distributed by the marine committee."

Even the dignified seriousness of Dr. Dwight is not proof against the attack of mirth that seizes him as he relates the introduction of what a barker described to the merry-makers at Coney Island last summer as "the wash-tub" edition of the Bible.

The Bible at Coney Island is brought into competition with fascinating and novel forms of amusement and entertainment and the hoarse voice of its own energetic colporteur is one of many crying special wares such as the "Loop the Loop," the "Ride Into the Whale," and the "Voyage to Heaven and Hell," and even those members of the society who deprecate the apparent loss of dignity involved in this rivalry are obliged to admit that while it is eminently necessary to maintain the serious character of the Holy Book at the same time it is equally necessary to yield a point in doing so and to take into account the prevailing moods of the thousands who stroll by the stand—moods of recreation and enjoyment.

The colporteur at Coney Island has a ready tongue and wit. He has a more difficult proposition to handle than his competitors, and he handles it deftly. To one he says reprovingly, in answer to a jest: "This book will keep you from sin. Sin will keep you from this book." On the cards he distributes and among the printed posters decorating his well-stocked stall the passer-by may read:

"Satan trembles when he sees Scriptures sold as cheap as these."

With his megaphone in hand, John Henry Way, a lifetime devotee of this special branch of work, calls out to the moving multitude: "Don't forget the Bible," and some are singled out for special comments adapted to their special needs. The small boy whose greedy mouth is open to receive a large chunk of ice cream sandwich is, for instance, arrested by the statement: "You can have a book that will last you for years for the price of a sandwich that is lost in a second." Probably the sandwich is lost and the book is not gained, but the boy has been made to think.

Boys' Intensive Farming.

More than 12,000 Southern boys less than 13 years old planted and cultivated an acre of corn each last year under the direction of the Department of Agriculture. Persons interested in the experiment in Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina and Virginia offered to pay the expenses of a trip to Washington for the boy in each State who raised the greatest amount of corn on his acre. The winning boys will soon visit the national capital.

The average yield of corn to the acre in 1909 was a little more than twenty-five bushels. The South Carolina boy, who made the best record, produced 152½ bushels. The winning Mississippi boy raised 147 bushels, the Arkansas boy 135 and the boy in Virginia 122. The average raised by each of the 12,000 was sixty bushels.

The instructions given to those boys by the Department of Agriculture are available to every farmer in the country. If they should be followed exactly the yield of corn to the acre could easily be doubled in a single year.

Intensive cultivation is worth while on all crops. The average yield of potatoes to the acre in 1909 was 107 bushels, but the Maine farmers averaged 225 bushels, and some of the most progressive of them dug 400 bushels to the acre. The yield of corn and potatoes depends more upon cultivation and fertilization than upon the soil, and there is practically no part of the United States in which these crops cannot be raised successfully.

It is beyond doubt that larger crops can be produced from ten acres thoroughly tilled than from two, or even three, times ten acres cultivated as they usually are. The fact that the South Carolina prize winner raised more corn on one acre than the average farmer produces from six tells a story that should not be lost upon those for whose benefit the experiment was made. —[Youth's Companion.

CONDUCTED BY J. W. JEFFREY, STATE COMMISSIONER OF HORTICULTURE.

FIELD NOTES.

Blazing the Way.

THE fruit growers and shippers of Placer county are inaugurating a system of fruit inspection which for novelty alone will be of interest to every orchardist and fruit man in the United States. At least four other counties in the Sacramento Valley are advancing similar plans of general inspection of commercial fruit packages, but Placer county has nearly completed the system contemplated, so we may now consider it in effect. As stated to the readers of The Times in former notice of this broad movement, three mass meetings and several committee meetings were held in this county before the plan was shaped into acceptable form. At these meetings a standard in package, size and quality was adopted for peaches, plums, cherries, apricots, pears and grapes. These standards were adopted unanimously at a meeting of several hundred leading growers and shippers of the county, and the same standards have since been reported for Solano county. If these two counties inforce the plan, it will practically cause every other deciduous-fruit county to follow, or suffer in the markets.

I had the pleasure this week of attending the last meeting of the Placer County Committee of Fifteen, appointed by the mass meeting to complete the standardization plan. This committee is composed of eight fruit growers and seven shippers, and is most thoroughly representative of the horticultural progress of the county. This committee labored all day long to perfect the machinery for inforcing the terms of the standardization previously agreed upon by the big meeting. It was one of the liveliest and most intense discussions I ever witnessed, almost breaking up in despair at noon, but finally coming to unanimous action and most hearty confidence at the close of the day.

Involving, as this action may, the destiny of thousands of cars of inferior fruit, and the rehabilitation of the entire deciduous-fruit business, the responsibilities of that committee may be imagined, for many other counties will adopt the plan we threshed out under such stress. The most astonishing thing I witnessed at this committee meeting was the declaration of every commercial shipper present that he was ready when the agreement was drawn up to bind his firm not to accept a pound of fruit at his house unless it had first passed the public inspector's hands and certified as packed in accordance with the standards previously adopted. When we consider that all these houses buy fruit, ship on commission and deal f. o. b., we can see the courage required to confirm the acts of the committee, for scores of growers will not agree to have their fruit inspected at all, and many of these men are old customers of the different fruit houses. These objecting growers will be lost to the shippers signing into the standardizing plan and will go to houses remaining outside the movement.

Placer county now has a board of control, authorized to employ inspectors to pass upon the status of every box of fruit owned by the growers who sign the agreement to standardize. These inspectors are paid from a fund provided by an assessment of not to exceed one-half cent a package, and the growers have agreed that the shippers shall hold back this assessment from the returns and pay it to the board of control, which shall be the manager of the inspecting service. A board of arbitration is also provided for each of the shipping centers of the county, to which the growers may appeal in any difficulties they may have with the paid inspectors, the latter being the only salaried help connected with the service. This inspection has nothing to do with the work of the county horticultural commissioner. The progress I have noticed in this work seems too good and too great to be true, knowing as I do the chaotic condition that prevailed in the deciduous-fruit business last season. There will no doubt be difficulties to overcome, as is always the case where the whole way is new, but I never saw a more determined and continuous effort to improve conditions than I have witnessed in this important movement.

Swallowing New Things.

ONE who writes for the agricultural press and attempts to say anything worth while must occasionally advanced opinions that do not meet universal approval. Some years ago, I advised against the use of the trifoliate—orange stock on which to bud the ordinary commercial orange varieties. This advice was based in part upon a conservative policy in general that may have made this department of use to The Times readers, and in part upon my observations upon the behavior of the trifoliate stock in the orchard. In two young groves of navel oranges I have had the favor of examining, the trees budded on the trifoliate seemed dwarfish and not erect or vigorous in appearance. It was thought that this was caused by the influence of the roots upon the navel tops, but this seems now to have been the wrong conclusion as to the cause of the slow growth of the trees. Here is the explanation given by the Bureau of Plant Industry, after years of experimentation in a wide range of soils and situations:

The trifoliate is naturally a small tree, and of slow growth. It will not succeed well in every soil, consequently the broad claims made for trifoliate stock have been discounted. It succeeds best on heavy soils with clay subsoils, and has not made any progress upon alluvium or miscellaneous soils, consequently this is the reason that the two trifoliate orchards I have observed did not produce good trees. The experiments made by the Bureau of Plant Industry demonstrate that the Satsuma orange is the only orange that succeeds better on trifoliate stock than on any other, and the same experimental source advises the use of sour or sweet orange stock for navels and other varieties.

The value of conservatism has been shown so frequently in horticulture with us that it should become the rule not to adopt new things for commercial enterprises just because some one publishes colored and often flamboyant claims of merit. It is not necessarily done in bad faith, but nurserymen and dealers often allow their self-interests to enthuse them to the disadvantage of safe and conservative policies, and, I am sorry to say, the more unscrupulous publish pursuasive and untruthful commendation of new varieties the effect of which is loss to the planter and wide distrust of the nurserymen. Time is gradually eliminating the reliable from the questionable in the planting of fruit varieties, and we are getting more conservative every year in our attitude toward the new creations that are offered for commercial cultivation.

New Quarantine Office.

CITRUS-FRUIT growers will be interested in the appointment of William Wood of Whittier as quarantine officer of the State Horticultural Commission. Mr. Wood will have special charge of the quarantine work in Southern California, although his official connection is with the division at San Francisco. For years the danger of an invasion of the Mexican orange maggot has been feared, but the State commissioner has not had the means to place a special deputy on guard, till the beginning of this year. I think Mr. Wood's selection for this important work will be approved by every citrus-fruit grower who knows his worth and his adaptability to the duties he will have to face. He will give his entire time to the work, and I am sure will prove of great value to all the fruit interests of the State.

Wine Grape Decision.

IN a letter recently sent to the Collector of the First Internal Revenue District of California, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue says:

"Sir: At the time of your recent visit to this office, you submitted the following question: 'A grape grower delivers grapes to a winery, in which he is not interested, to be crushed and made into wine. The grape grower pays to the winemaker a stipulated sum of money for the crushing of the grapes and the making of the same into wine, and receives in return the identical wine made from these grapes.' And you ask whether under the conditions stated the grape grower would be subject to the special tax for the sale of the wine so received by him.

"Vintners who sell wine of their own growth, or manufacturers who sell wine produced from grapes grown by others, at the place where the same was made or at the general business office of such vintner or manufacturer, are not subject to special tax.

"In the case in point the grower of the grape sends his grapes to a crusher or wine manufacturer and employs the latter to press the wine from the grapes and complete its manufacture, paying for such service and having the manufactured product returned to him.

"The decision of the office is that the place of manufacture is where the grapes are crushed and the wine fermented, and that the grower of the grapes cannot be considered as the manufacturer of the wine nor exempt from special taxes as wholesale or retail liquor dealers if sales of the wine so received are made."

Fumigating for Mealy Bug.

FREDERICK MASKEW, an authority upon fumigation, hands me the following observations upon the mealy bug:

"An article, 'Combating the citrus mealy bug,' by E. O. Essig, published in the Pomona College Journal of Entomology, contains on Page 91 the following statement: 'I have found it harder to kill the larva of the Cryptolaemus with the cyanide gas than the mealy bug.'

"That statement is directly opposite to the recorded observations of every other investigator along these lines in California covering a period of many years. Mr. Allen, of Bonita, in a bulletin published by the Claremont Horticultural Club, gave a very graphic account of the havoc wrought among the larvae of Cryptolaemus by the fumigation of his orchard at Sunnyside.

"The writer of this article once had occasion to visit a lemon orchard in San Diego county that had been fumigated for citrus mealy bug. The amount of the dosage used had been so small as not to have had any effect whatever on the mealy bugs, yet the ground beneath the trees was covered with the dead larvae of Cryptolaemus.

"It has been repeatedly proven that a large percentage of the adult Coccinellids that are caught beneath the tent when the tree is fumigatd, and which invariably fall to the ground, survive the treatment, but the contrary has always been observed with the larvae.

"The cleaning-up of an orchard infested with mealy bug by the employment of beneficial insects is naturally a slow, although generally a permanent process, and the owner of such an orchard who has decided to adopt this method may rest assured that once he has the predators established in his orchard their good work will never be accelerated by fumigation."

Wonderberry.

is the style in which H. W. Collingwood, editor Rural New Yorker, handles John Lewis Childs issue of January 8, regarding the "Sunberry:" Lewis Childs's new catalogue, just issued, contains over eight pages and nearly 15,000 words devoted improved Wonderberry.' We proved by the authorities that the Wonderberry as sold by was the old black nightshade. In the face exposure even Mr. Childs seems to lack the nerve required to repeat the claims made for Wonderberry.' It is now the 'Sunberry.' The 'improvement' seems to have come from one year's growth Long Island. One might expect Mr. Childs to be at least. On one page he repeats Mr. Burbank's well-worn statement that the plant 'always exactly true from seed!' Right on the next page Childs says his 'Sunberry' is liable, being a hybrid, 'sport' in many ways. Mr. Childs is something sport himself, for he offers $10,000 in cash for a Sunberry.' Now it is evident that if Burbank is Childs must be wrong in saying that the plants ry. His offer of $10,000 may mean just as much bank's celebrated bluff did. If Childs is right— because of Burbank's statement? If the 'Sunberry will 'sport' as Childs says it will, why is it not to go back to the poisonous or non-edible qualities of its parents as it is to improve? Dr. Greshoff the nightshade poison in plants grown from seeds from Mr. Childs. If we accept the statement in this catalogue, why is not one who buys this liable to have a 'sport' back to a poisonous as to have a 'delicious fruit?' Personally we the chances favor the former!

We were told last summer that Mr. Childs intended to spend $20,000 in advertising the 'Wonderberry.' We judge that he has stocked up with a large of seed and intends to unload it. We believe against the advice of the best and most honorable in the seed trade. We do not believe there is seedsman in America who would offer the berry and stand for the odium which accompanies Mr. Childs does not appear to be troubled scruples. By changing the name he evidently to sell his seed. How can he do so in the the facts? The answer is found in that $20,000 appropriation which was suggested to the summer. That can do two things—bring the claims of the 'Sunberry' before the people any editorial criticism. We were told a few by one of Mr. Burbank's partners in the booming business that a 'knock' is a 'hold- reverse is true—silence or a pat on the back of a 'come-down.' The magazines and papers may be expected to print anything of that is offered. When we come to the farm naturally expect to see that $20,000 as far connections as we have been from Burbank. We feel such confidence because these know the facts in the Wonderberry case know the motive and principle at stake. not possibly plead ignorance as any excuse this 'Sunberry' advertising. Should they they would be obliged to stand up and admit have sold their influence and accepted a price silence. The issue is so clear and the facts that it does not seem possible that any farm paper will accept money to aid in promoting great bluff. Here is their chance, and we expect to see them rise to it and line up on of their readers and of the honest, legitimate Atamasco Lilies.

THERE are two varieties of this popular flower grown on this coast—the one pink, the other white. The common names applied to them are zephyr lilies. The proper name of the white variety is Zephyranthes candida. It begins to bloom about September 1 and continues for three months. It is a native of Brazil, and grows along the marshy banks of the La Plata River. We know of no plant that increases so rapidly, and we think it within the bounds of truth to say that tons of the bulbs are thrown out annually in this State.

The pink variety is popularly known as Atamasco lily —properly it is Zephyranthes carinata. It is a native of Cuba, Mexico and Central America. It is both exquisitely beautiful and fragrant. The flowers are borne on scapes six to twelve inches high, but one flower to a scape. As a border plant, it has few equals and no superiors. It responds to good culture, the flowers being larger and the stems longer. It is fine for cutting.—[Pacific Garden.

Chrysanthemum's Origin.

THE Japanese have an interesting legend in connection with the origin of the chrysanthemum.

In a garden, bathed in the soft moonlight, a young girl picked a flower and commenced to strip the petals to see if her fiancé loved her truly. Of a sudden a little god appeared before her and assured her that her fiancé loved her passionately.

"Your husband will live," he added, "as many years as the flower, which I will let you choose, has petals." With these words he disappeared.

The young girl hastened to search the garden for a flower which should have an abundance of petals, but each one appeared to promise but a brief future for her beloved.

At length she picked a Persian carnation, and, with the aid of a gold pin, taken from her hair, she separated each of the petals of the flower, so as to increase the number of years accorded by the god to her fiancé.

Soon, under her deft fingers, one, two, three hundred petals, thin, pliant and beautifully curved, had been evolved, and the young girl cried for joy to think of the happy future which her ruse had assured her fiancé.

So, runs the legend, was the chrysanthemum created one moonlight night in a Japanese garden, where silvery brooks murmured softly as they ran beneath the little bamboo bridges.—[Green's Fruit Grower.

Clean Up the Garden.

MANY gardens are now full of dead plant tops, dahlias, cannas, caladiums, golden rod, golden glow, chrysanthemums and a host of such material needing removal. If one has a place where this may be composted, it should be so used by putting down a layer of vegetation, then a light covering of soil, and so on to the top. In a few months, this will have rotted and may be returned to the garden, a most valuable addition to any soil. As decomposition is dependent upon moisture, it will be necessary to keep such heaps well wetted during our dry season.

Selection of Buds and Scions.

AFTER still further experience in the propagation of trees through the selection of buds from trees of certain fixed characteristics and quality, I am still further confirmed in the value of the principle. During the past year, while there has been a generally tight yield of apples in all sections of the country, the quality of which has been much below the best standard, we have been able to take fruit not only of very fine yield, but of the highest quality to be desired from trees that have been grown from the principle of top working through bud selection.

There is, without any question of doubt, as much value in selecting buds from strong, typical trees from which to establish orchards, as there is in laying the foundation of a superior herd, or of building up any class of animals from carefully-selected animals. Not only have the trees thus propagated shown vigor and vitality, but they have been able to resist the unfavorable conditions which so often attend the period of blooming. The apple crop generally over the country was exceedingly promising in the spring. The set of blossoms was exceedingly heavy, but there came unfavorable winter conditions during the period of bloom with the result that a very light set of fruit resulted with a consequent light yield at harvest time.—[G. M. Powell, in American Cultivator.

Some Habits of the Fly.

Concerning his experiences while studying the life and habits of the house fly, Henry Hill, the well-known lecturer, states: "I wish I could explain why a fly never walks down, but always up, a clean window pane, and why on the other hand it will walk down the slanting glass front of a picture. It is also a mystery to me why a fly always rests head downward on a wall. These are habits of the house fly which offer a field for interesting study."—[London Evening Standard.

American Extravagance and High Cost of Living.

CONGRESS is to make a determined effort to dig into the bottom facts in regard to the present high cost of living, which is working so much hardship on people of limited incomes. The subject is to be tackled by the Senate and the House. A dispatch from Washington says: "The inquiry will include an investigation as to the cost of the necessaries of life, with a special view to determine whether there has been an increase during the last ten years."

What a most absurd statement! This shows how very far a great majority of our United States Senators are from the knowledge of conditions affecting the great mass of the people, who have to make every dollar, or even every dime, count. Let them go out on the highway and ask the first housekeeper they meet whether there has been an increase in the cost of living.

Bradstreet's price tables are recognized as thoroughly authentic. Bradstreet's tables show that since 1896 prices of all commodities have increased over 61 per cent. The American price index number for January 1, 1910, is the highest even recorded. It surpasses the previous high record—that published on March 1, 1907—by 1.1 per cent.

January's index number is 11.7 per cent. higher than the number for January 1, 1909.

These price-change indicators conclusively show that the prices of both raw and manufactured articles in the United States have increased 61 per cent. since 1896, and that prices are at this moment higher all around than they have ever been before. As a result of this, it costs us 61 per cent. more to live today than it did in 1896, and prospects are that prices during 1910 will advance even more rapidly than they did during the past three years.

The most serious feature of the question, to people of moderate means, is that wages and salaries have not advanced at the same rate as prices and cost of living. Indeed salaries of many persons are no higher today than they were fourteen years ago. In other words, a man who in 1896 was receiving $100 a month, and is today receiving $100 a month, is to all intents and purposes getting only $62.50 a month, for that is all his salary will purchase, as compared with the hundred dollars in 1896.

It seems that this increased cost of living does not affect poor people only. A firm of New York brokers who recently failed for a million dollars stated as one of the causes leading to their failure the increasing difficulty of selling bonds, because the high cost of living has driven investors to search for securities that bring a higher income than bonds. So you see, it is a sort of an endless chain.

In writing last week in the Care of the Body on the subject of the causes of the increased cost of living, the editor of the department said that the two chief causes were the increased production of gold and the movement of population from the farms to the city. There is another important cause that should have been included as number three, namely, the general extravagance of the American people. It has frequently been said—and with truth—that a French family will live, and live well, on food that the average American family wastes.

Young Americans nowadays are not content to follow the example of their parents, and start in a modest way. They want to start where their parents leave off. The poor imitate people of moderate means, and these again seek to imitate the "400."

We are extravagant in food, in clothes, in amusement, and in everything else. The fine clothes which foolish mothers permit their children to wear in school lead to envy, jealousy, hatred, and even to theft, or, perhaps, to the house of prostitution.

Take, again, our recklessness in regard to the loss of property and life. Uncle Sam's fire bill last year amounted to nearly $200,000,000. That is much larger than the fire bill of the whole of Europe. In America the fire losses averaged over $2.50 per capita, while the figures for France were 30 cents, Germany 49 cents, and Italy 12 cents.

In diet alone an immense saving might be made by the American people, with great benefit not only to their pockets, but also to their health. It is a conservative estimate to say that the average American eats at least twice as much food as is necessary, if he would eat the right kind of food and thoroughly masticate it. This surplus food injures his health and depletes his purse. Fortunately for the poor man, the best foods are the cheapest.

One of the leading reasons for the prevailing high price of meat is the fact that a majority of Americans insist on getting what they call the "best" cuts—steaks and roasts. Dealers buy an entire animal at a certain price. The choice parts are usually sold at 10 to 15 cents per pound over the price of the whole. If American housewives would learn to utilize the coarser parts of the animal, as they do in Europe, it would soon be found that far more appetizing meat dishes could be concocted at a much lower price than that of the chunks of quivering flesh which are now regarded as essential to a "square meal."

Every European country has some specialty of this kind—a stew made of chopped meat, with all kinds of vegetables, perhaps thickened with a little rice or corn, and flavored to taste. The main secret of such cooking lies in the long, slow simmering and steaming in a closed vessel, which retains all the essence of the food, instead of letting it go up in steam. This is the main secret of French cookery. In France a favorite dish is "bouillabaisse," mentioned several times in "Trilby." In Great Britain, "Irish stew" is a favorite dish. In Hungary they have a dish that has become quite popular in American restaurants, called "gulash." In Turkey there is "olla podrida"—a "mixture of everything"—which Capt. Marryat used as the title of one of his books. "Alamagoozlum" is a popular dish among western miners. In North Germany, the Jews, on their Sabbath eve—that is to say, on Friday—serve a palatable dish known as "mummelhey," composed of the leavings of the table during the past week. This might not work well in a warm country.

It is certainly high time that the American people should begin to get back nearer to the simple life, or we shall drift into deep waters physically, morally and financially. The following extract is of special interest just now, as it is taken from the January-February number of Eugenics, which the veteran reformer, Moses Harman, had not completed publishing at the time of his death in Los Angeles on January 30.

"Between the years 1840 and 1845, the people of Missouri and most of the then western and southern States of the American Union, practicalized home production to an extent previously almost unknown. I can testify from actual experience and observation that there was far less real suffering on account of lack of the necessities of life than now, with all our inventions and our artificial methods of living. There was plenty of hard work then, but by exchange of work, and by fraternal coöperation, there was far less of the slavery of toil than now, and while I would not advise going back to all the crude devices of home manufacture of 'ye olden time,' in order to get away from the artificiality of the present, I certainly hope to see a revival of the old spirit of fellowship, of comradeship, and of simple manners that characterized the years and the people of the then pioneer States of the American Union."

A Premature Death.

AN extraordinary break was made by that excellent magazine, What to Eat, in its February number. A page was devoted to a description of a noted banquet given some time ago to Francis Joseph of Austria. The opening paragraphs ran as follows:

"The death of Francis Joseph of Austria calls to mind that one of the most noted banquets of modern times was that given at Vienna on the occasion of the diamond jubilee, commemorating the sixtieth anniversary of his reign.

"The banquet was served in three communicating apartments in the Palace of Schonbrunn, Vienna, and 250 guests were present. Most of them wore many orders. The late Emperor sat at the center of the table, with Kaiser Wilhelm at his left, and the Kaiserin at his right. The Austrian Emperor was attired in the German uniform, while the Kaiser wore the uniform of Austria."

If Francis Joseph is dead, it is strange that the enterprising press of America has not even devoted a "stick" of space to the subject. At last accounts the old gentleman was quite lively, although he has surely been a "man of sorrows." One of his latest exploits was to purchase a fine palace in Vienna for an actress. He ought to begin to give up that sort of thing.

For half a century it has been predicted that when Emperor Francis dies there will be a scramble among the adjoining powers to grab the fragments of this patchwork empire, whose small paper currency is—or was—printed in thirteen languages. Meantime, the loyal subjects of the much-beloved Emperor will continue to sing:

"Gott erhalte Franz den Kaiser
"Unser lieber guter Franz."

The Traffic in Babies.

A CURIOUS case has held the boards in a Los Angeles court during the past few weeks. It is that of a woman who was stated to have become the mother of quadruplets, having previously given birth to triplets and twins—eight in all. It appears that none of these children were hers, she being unable to conceive. Yet it is said that her husband believed them all to be his own children. A strange blindness, surely. The woman had an intense craving for offspring—a craving with which we may well sympathize. She need not, however, have gone about it in such a wholesale way.

... and bequeathe my physical body to and for ... advancement of medical science, and hereby ... as soon as life is extinct, in heart and brain ... body be taken in charge by Dr. E. B. Foote ... or by Dr. Joseph H. Greer of Chicago, or ... other competent physican of similar medical faith and practice, and that it be used for the instruction of classes in anatomy, or in any way that may be desired by the physician in charge.

"After being thus utilized, I direct and request that whatever remains of the dissected body be cremated in the least expensive manner, and that the ashes be scattered over lawns, flower beds, meadows, gardens or fields of growing grain, so that Mother Earth may again utilize in new organisms the elements stored in what will then be my cast-off physical body.

"If not convenient, or if too expensive, to have my body disposed of in the way just mentioned, I direct that no costly casket or coffin be bought, in which to put my body for inhumation (burial,) but that instead my mortal remains be given to Mother Earth without coffin or shroud. Wrapped in an inexpensive sheet, let it be placed on evergreens and flowers (if flowers are not too expensive) at the bottom of an ordinary grave. Then let the body be covered, first with flowers, leaves, or evergreens, then with earth, so that, by natural process of absorption, flesh, blood, bones and integuments be speedily and healthfully (to the living) restored to the realm of use, instead of being selfishly locked away, embalmed, in a vain attempt to preserve from decomposition the mortal form which has ceased to serve the purpose for which it was organized as a human body.

"Then, as Mrs. Sigourney has so beautifully said, in her poem, 'The Dying Boy,' I would say:

> " 'Plant there some box or pine,
> Something that lives in winter and will be
> A fragrant offering to my memory,
> And call it mine.'

"And let this be the only monument erected to mark the spot where, for a short time only, the abandoned tenement-house of the departed individual named in mortal life Moses Harman, was hidden from sight, soon to reappear as component parts of a multitude of vegetable and animal forms.

"The story of what happened to the body of Roger Williams—eaten up, bones, hair, teeth, everything, by an apple tree, teaches the futility of trying to cheat Mother Nature by our puerile, not to say idiotic, burial customs.

"As to funeral: I direct and earnestly request that no funeral ceremonies as such, be held over my mortal remains, either before or at time of cremation, before or at burial, or at the time of "urning" the ashes—if my surviving friends should prefer such disposition of what remains after the fire has done its work. Let none of the usual insignia of 'mourning' be indulged in; no black crepe, no funeral anthem, no hearse, no train of carriages and no procession on foot; and especially let no fulsome eulogies be spoken in my honor—no funeral discourse or oration as such, but if my personal friends choose to come together at or near the time of my decease—my 'transition'—to celebrate my release from the limitations of mortality by singing a few cheerful songs, telling a few cheerful stories, reminiscent stories apropos to the occasion, or, if some one of the group should feel moved to read a few passages from Emerson, Thoreau, Bryant, Barbauld or Ingersoll—such as I shall probably have selected and marked as voicing my own innermost thoughts and life purposes—for and by or all such kindly tokens of remembrance I shall probably feel pleased and gratified, provided, of course, I should then be cognizant of what my surviving friends are thinking, doing and saying."

A Human Tank.

IT is astonishing what an immense amount of alcoholic beverages some people who have accustomed themselves to their use can absorb. The German students furnish an example of this. Their favorite beverage is beer. In America, whisky is more popular. In Pittsburgh, recently,, William Thaw, a cousin of Harry Thaw, consumed, it is reported, sixty-eight brandy-and-sodas at one sitting, in a fashionable club. Reckoning the usual size of drinks, this would amount to about a gallon of brandy and four gallons of soda water. He will probably soon join his cousin in the "bughouse"—that is, if he does not die first.

There are probably several hundred men in Los Angeles who consume regularly, during the year, more than a quart of whisky daily. These people should remember that it is much more dangerous to consume a large amount of alcohol in a dry, electrical climate like that of Southern California than in a cool and damp section.

Measles.

THERE has been quite an epidemic of measles in Los Angeles during the past few weeks. There have probably been several thousand cases. The doctors talked of quarantining, but fortunately it was too big a job for them to tackle.

One of the three children of a Los Angeles woman was recently attacked by measles. The other two, with whom the child played and slept, were not affected. If the disease is "contagious" or "infectious," how do you account for this?

As previously shown here, measles and other epidemic diseases are due to certain conditions of the atmosphere, which influence those whose resisting power is lessened by wrong living—by wrong eating, or breathing foul air—or who may have inherited a weak constitution. The exceptionally cold spell during the opening days of the year was doubtless the proximate cause of this epidemic.

Ordinary cases require little more than care and good nursing. The comfort of the patient is greatly increased by frequent tepid sponge baths or packs. If the eruption does not appear promptly, or is repelled, put the patient into a hot pack, with a woolen sheet, for thirty minutes. Keep the head constantly wet with cool water, and bathe the face every few minutes when there is considerable fever. If the throat is sore, give treatment for sore throat as already described. Also lemon juice and water to drink. Give the patient abundance of fresh air, but do not expose him to draughts. The diet should be as simple as possible, and very light. It should be mainly confined to fresh fruits in season.

See that the bowels are kept open, if necessary by means of enemas. It is most important that the patient should be kept warm, therefore, in the early stages of the disease it is better to stay in bed. A chill, throwing the poison back into the blood, may result in deafness, or other troubles.

Dr. W. L. Woodruff.

DR. WILLIAM LAWRENCE WOODRUFF died at Long Beach, where he had resided for five years, on February 4, as the result of a fall two weeks previously, causing rupture of a blood vessel. Deceased was an advocate and exponent of the law of vibration, as the primal law of the universe, and an important means of treating disease. His book "Therapeutics of Vibration" was reviewed here two years ago. He had received attention in the local press, owing to his ideas in regard to the raising of high-grade children, by letting them live next to nature—wearing light clothing, taking air and sun baths, etc. He carried this theory out with his infant daughter and an adopted son, both of whom are sturdy and well developed.

Salt.

OF all the teachings of the Care of the Body, the one which the average reader finds it the most difficult to believe in, or carry out is abstention from the mineral, chloride of sodium (table salt.) Yet, on the other hand, there is no one health rule that has produced such notably favorable results as this when it has been tried.

The idea that chloride of sodium in the inorganic form is a necessity for health is a superstition. Chlorine and sodium are only two of the dozen minerals found in the human body, also in natural foods that have not been spoiled by overcooking, or emasculated as in the bolting of flour. If we should take chloride of sodium, why should we then not also take in the inorganic form, potassium, and calcium, and magnesium, and iron, and phosphorus, and sulphur, and silicon, all of which are found in the body? Following is an extract from a letter from Seattle to the Pittsburgh Dispatch:

"When the government school teachers first went into the Arctic, they were told to teach the natives how to cure their meat. Liberal supplies of salt were taken in and the good work was begun. But the strange Eskimos refused to eat the salted meat and promptly spewed it out of their mouths. Then the government pedagogues made a discovery. They found that all that was printed in the little old text-books that they had passed examinations on was not just exactly so. These books had told them of the wonderful yearning for salt that they said was a common attribute of mankind. But here in the gray Arctic world was a race of men who positively hated salt and had never used it in any way. For they had found a way of curing their meat that was far superior to the white man's salting process. They simply froze it."

The Young Doctor's Mistake.

FOLLOWING is an extract from a paper on "The Mistakes of Doctors," read before the Christian County Medical Society in January, 1909, by B. A. Caudle of Hopkinsville, Ky., and republished in the May number of the Kentucky Medical Journal, and in the August Medical World:

"A few years ago, a young doctor friend of mine called me up and wanted to know if I wanted to assist him and another old physician in an operation. This young physician told me that a certain doctor had called him up to consult with him about a lady patient of his, who had an enlarged prostate gland. He supposed that it had been one of the most stubborn cases he had ever treated; that he had given her everything he had ever heard of; he knew he had given his patient a barrel of sammeth, and he had been told that sammeth was almost a specific for enlargement of the prostate gland and the symptoms that accompanied this enlargement, but in this case it had done no good.

"So he had advised the lady to have a portion of the gland removed, which she readily consented to, if the doctor, in his wisdom, thought the operation was the only thing that would relieve her.

"The young physician modestly told the doctor who had called him up to consult him about this unusual case, that no anatomy that he had ever seen spoke of a woman having a prostate gland. The doctor took the hint and I suppose, for the first time since he left school, consulted his anatomy.

"The doctor told his patient some risk attended the operation, and advised that they postpone it a while."

Stealing Time.

FOLLOWING editorial recently appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal:

"It is an interesting idea that is proposed: to change the clock from May 1 to October 1 of each year so that time will be advanced one hour. In other words, on May 1 we would all move the hands of our clocks at 5 o'clock in the morning, say, to 6 o'clock and go about our day's work. We would stop work at the usual hour, say, at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. But instead of getting dark at 7 or 8 o'clock, it would not become

But where we would gain is in an earlier hour in the cool of the morning for work and an additional hour of daylight in the evening. The only point at which there would be a loss is during the night of the last day of April, when we would lose an hour's sleep. One can easily figure out what this would mean to the business man coming home, especially if he lives in the suburbs. It would make outdoor exercise possible, too, after the evening meal. It would certainly be an untold benefit to school children in May, June and September. The idea, at its first glance, seems foolish and impossible, but one cannot study it long before the tremendous advantages gained by the change become apparent. Of course, it is like cheating at solitaire: you cheat only yourself. But inasmuch as we must live by the clock, as we judge every action by it, it is certainly a pertinent question that asks: Why not change the clock, particularly as we do not actually change Time?

"It looks as if both the British and Canadian Parliaments would pass the bills for one more hour of daylight, and it is an interesting question: Why shouldn't we do likewise in America?"

That was surely a clever man who first thought of this plan to cheat Old Father Time.

Rather Vague.

"THE PHILOSOPHY OF OUR EXISTENCE, OR LIFE, HEALTH AND HAPPINESS ONLY THROUGH OUR OWN BLOOD," is the title of a booklet of ninety pages by Bernard Plummer of Los Angeles. (Published by the author, No. 2170 New Orleans street, Los Angeles.)

The book is deeply impregnated with religious ideas and quotations from the Bible. The author fails to indicate what course he believes a person should pursue in order to secure pure blood, except that in a general way he recommends right living, which, of course, is very good, but somewhat vague.

In his preface he says: "This book is the first of a series which I intend to publish on the Origin and Destiny and Fall and Redemption of Mankind, and in them we shall find a practical solution of the problems of life."

The author will have to be somewhat more specific if he expects to furnish that "practical solution."

A Hygienic Device.

MANY devices have been introduced to safeguard, from a health point of view, the use of the telephone. Most of these are antiseptic devices for covering the mouthpiece. Without being a crank on "bugs," it is certainly not a nice idea to use a public telephone into which hundreds of people, many of them with rotten lungs, stick their lips all through the day.

One of the latest of these devices is a glass mouthpiece. This inexpensive innovation possesses advantages over the ordinary rubber. Rubber is porous while glass is not. Glass is more easily cleaned, and it admits light, which we know is a great destroyer of germ life.

At the Table.

FOOD is not the only thing to be thought of in connection with eating. You should also consider appearances and conditions of mind. A snowy table cloth, bright tableware, and a few well-arranged flowers in the center of the table go far toward promoting good digestion. Also cheerful conversation. Some writers recommend that one should eat alone and in silence. The editor of the Care of the Body does not at all agree with this. Carnivorous animals steal into a corner and devour their carrion food in silence, but the herbivora, the gramnivora, and the frugivora—to which latter class man properly belongs—eat in company, chatting together each in their own language. Never eat when you are angry or worried or over-fatigued. In such cases your food, however wholesome it otherwise may be, becomes a poison.

Another point to be observed is table manners. The meal of a sensitive person is often spoiled by sitting at the same table with one who shoves his knife into his mouth, or makes unpleasant noises while swallowing his food.

These to some people may seem little things, but it is the little things of life that count, and eating is a function that in the case of most people occurs twice a day every day in the year—sometimes three times a day.

Nature Study in Schools.

THE Department of Public Instruction of Minnesota has issued a thirty-page bulletin on "A course in nature study for elementary grades of public schools." This course emphasizes at the outset the view that a nature-study course should not be planned as an introduction to elementary science, or even as a basis for future high-school science and agriculture; "into one or the other it should gradually blend; but that is not its object." The work as planned in this course is carefully classified as to the plants and animals to be studied each term, to avoid uninteresting repetition and the frequently just criticism that nature-study work is "scattering and disconnected."

The Student's Eyes

Every now and then we hear of some brilliant young fellow blighted in his career because his eyes gave out. Parents should see to it that before permitting their children to take up any prolonged course of study the eyes are in condition to stand the strain, and the surest way to determine this is to have them examined by a competent optician, so that if glasses are needed, they are worn before it is too late.

IT MATTERS little how exquisite the material a mother may choose, or how beautiful may be her children, there is little to be hoped for in the final result if a certain childish simplicity of outline, a requisite neatness of finish and an almost total absence of elaboration be not adhered to throughout the wardrobe.

More than ever are these points essential in kindergarten dresses for little ones. A black and white linen, adorned with red, is peculiarly suited to the everyday occupations. The material is staple, is becoming to all alike and will stand an intimate association with the washtub. The bit of plain red percale has been used, in this model, for covered buttons and side tabs. Red and white cotton braid suggests long buttonholes, and a strip of more ornate cotton braid in red, black and white supplies a front and back decoration, extending over the shoulders beside the bretelles. The disposition of stripes in the little sleeve is a noticeable feature.

A sailor dress of blue linen suggests the regulation navy cut, although it is belted and box-pleated. There can be no more satisfying model than this from the child's viewpoint, from the mother's and from the teacher's. The tub dress on the small child has become, to the sensible mother, "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Scallops on white pique are possible when a not-too-heavy quality has been chosen. All of the simple models cut over a normal pattern, and requiring a few scallops done by hand, may be made of either linen in its heavier weights or else pique. In these weighty qualities undue ornamentation is avoided, gathers are scant and pleats are none too close, but they are highly satisfactory for better occasions and suitable for school.

The pretty challis—blue with a white stripe—is a delicate little frock, not launderable, but quite cleanable. Its kilted skirt fastens beneath a folded girdle of black satin, and the same material, run through black embroidered eyelets, laces the side. Sleeves and bodice are tucked in an unusual way. The color and delicacy of the frock recommend it, even although it is not one of the beloved tub dresses.

And now the coats. Blue broadcloth, with beaver collar and cuffs, suggests care, but few of the prettiest garments may be worn carelessly. For rougher usage a those heavier tweeds and serges. Th coat in question is for "very best," a with it ranks another, that of rose-colore bengaline decorated with buttons and fa tened with a frog. Collar, lapel and cu are piped with bias silk, as is the bel which appears only at the sides. Roses match it in color make the black velvet h more childish, and the pink facing and bo add color and elegance.

It is not an easy matter to provi successfully for little girls of varying ag and outline, but present-day garments reac more nearly the ideals of the thoughtf than ever before.

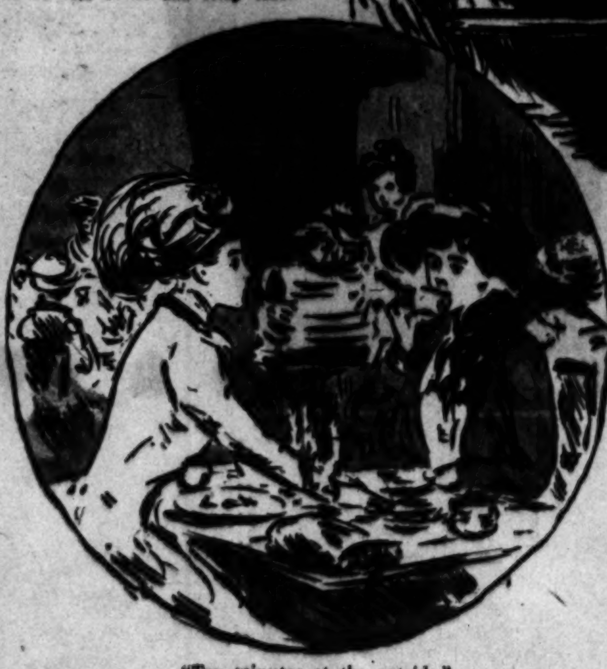
Our papers with alluring advertisements of ban freeholds, and rising rents emphasize the expediency of e house one lives in. I love cottage the year through. Yet I reflect sadly, sometimes, upon the probabilities that the growing custom of commuting is responsible for the increase of what nobody now hesitates to name "the national dyspepsia." Hundreds of families have adopted the sensible continental breakfast where one held to it twenty years ago. Thousands partake lightly of hot breads and viscid "buckwheats," acknowledging the superior healthfulness of cold bread and crisp toas.



"Ten minutes at the outside."

whose fathers ate hot cakes and fried potatoes and heavy meats in the morning, with no misgiving, and without after repentings.

And the victims of dyspepsia and a dozen cognate diseases multiply every year. How can it be otherwise? Our pater familias bolts fruit, cereal and cream, boiled eggs and toasted bacon, muffins and toast, and washes them down an eager throat with a torrent of scalding coffee, inside of ten minutes after he drops into his chair at early breakfast time. One eye is upon the watch laid by his plate. (Did ever any man but an American time each mouthful—and this habitually?) He gulps all in silence. To talk one must have his tongue and jaws free for a minute, and he is eating by the job—not the hour. His whole body is as tense as the foot tiptoed for the jump that will answer the distant whistle of train or trolley. His final gulp is in his throat as he runs down the avenue at the top of his speed. His head throbs madly and his heart thumps dangerously for ten minutes after he has caught the car. He never gives a thought to the fact that the outraged stomach is rising and beating against heart and lungs. When his head aches all day and an ugly purple flush suffuses his face if he stoops suddenly to pick up a fallen book or pen, he sets it down to nervous worry, or a heated office, or the pressure of business cares; to anything and everything except to the violence he has done to the most valuable organ of his body and the least respected.

Within a month three prominent business men of New York city died suddenly after a breathless rush up the stairs of the elevated railway. One fell dead upon the platform; another as he was entering the station; a third after seating himself in the train. Of each it was said that he "seemed to be in his usual health and had eaten a hearty breakfast." "And then ran for the train." If the sentence had been added it would not have been necessary to summon a coroner. The story tells itself.

One exceptionally judicious mother, born fifty years ahead of her age, teaches her children from babyhood that every article of food taken into the mouth should be chewed. They masticate oatmeal and swallow the crumb of a roll with deliberation that amuses some people, and is a promising sign to others. I heard a playfellow declare that they "chew their milk." They assuredly have never been allowed to toss it down by the glassful.

"His heart thumps dangerously after he has caught the train."

"Because, you see," said the 10-year-old who was laughed at for taking his milk in sips, with a breath between, "mamma says that there are juices in the stomach that will turn a great big swallow into a hard curd, but they can take care of the little ones."

"Sensible woman!" breathed the unseen listener.

The school luncheon, devoured in one-tenth of the intermission hour—choked down in hot haste as one would pitch coal into a furnace—is responsible for more childish ailments than parents suspect or than they would be willing to believe. Then, with the stomach surprised into inaction by the hunks and chunks thrust within the soft walls, the unconscious criminal tears off to the playground to complete the damage.

The humane practice prevails in a majority of large city schools of supplying a bowl of hot, nourishing soup to any child who can pay 5 cents for it. And mothers, who appreciate how much more easily warm food is digested than cold, see to it that their children shall get the broth daily. At least, there are no lumps in it to be tossed from side to side of the agonized organ in its futile attempt to reduce them to the pulpiness which should have been their form when consigned to gastric juices.

The "quick lunch for business men" is another form of Americanitis. The sight of the vulgarly audacious placard in the window of an otherwise respectable eating house moves me to wrath that may seem unreasoning, but certainly is not. It was interest in the unfortunates for whom the snare is set—and not idle curiosity—that led me one day to ask: "What would you say is the average time the shopgirl gives to her luncheon when she gets it here?"

I had already learned that two-thirds of the habitues of this cheery, neat dining room were salespeople and business women.

The answer was prompt, and uttered with modest pride in the fidelity of the "house" to the pledge displayed in the window:

"Not more than ten minutes at the outside, madam. It needn't be more than five. For, you see, everything is ready the instant they take a seat. Hot coffee and tea are boiling all the time."

"And what is the most popular dish?"

The reply was as ready as before: "Pork and beans for a solid. Pie of some kind as a dessert. Some few drink a glass of milk. Nine-tenths of them take tea, particularly the delicate ones. It's a good bracer."

Stewed tea! Which by the time it has "boiled" half an hour is a decoction of tannin as rank as the wash of the tanner's tables and troughs! After imbibing the "bracer," the delicate creature goes back to the afternoon work.

What remedy would I suggest for the train of evils I have touched upon all too lightly when one considers the extent and the peril of it all? Begin at home! Impress upon the children the impropriety and the risks of eating fast. Do not hurry family meals. Try to persuade the commuter to rise fifteen minutes (half an hour would be better) earlier in the morning. If he shaves himself, coax him to do it the night before; and if he will let you handle his clothing, look to it that his studs are in place and clean linen laid out, even to a fresh handkerchief, by the time he rises.

And do you set the example of eating leisurely and masticating thoroughly. Example is more potent than precept.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

Her Plum Pudding is Correct

I READ that recipe for plum pudding carefully, and I find no mistakes in it. It is the English plum pudding my husband used to eat in his old home over the water. You ask "what makes it rise?" I don't know, but suspect it is the potatoes or the carrots—or both of them. If you like plum pudding, try it!

I also make Yorkshire pudding to his taste. I use one egg, one-half pint of milk (a liberal measure!), salt and flour to make a batter as thick as for cake. Thin this gradually until of the consistency of griddle cake batter; pour into a pan with hot dripping enough to cover it. The batter should be a quarter of an inch thick, or a little more, in the pan. Bake quickly. When the underside is done, cut into squares, turn, and brown the other side. Serve with a rich gravy. I generally bake in a frying pan like pancakes, but with plenty of dripping. The batter should not be too thick, but if too thin it is difficult to turn it. Like Jenny Wren, the doll's dressmaker, I "just gobbled and gobbled until I learned how to do it."

I have sometimes served cold roast beef in the following way: Slice, and fry in dripping. When browned, add a little boiling water, cover and steam until the water is gone, stirring occasionally; or chop and put in with a little of the dripping; add hot water and stew tender until the water has evaporated. Make a gravy by thickening with flour, or add tomatoes. Of course, season to taste.

When stewing beef, or making soup, boil a few cloves with the meat. We like it!

After freshening salt pork, put slices in the hot frying pan, pour a teaspoonful of milk or of cream upon each slice, and sprinkle with black pepper. This improves both pork and gravy. My mother used to freshen pork in milk slightly sour but not thick.

To hasten the cooking of beans, add a pinch of soda, and parboil. Drain, and add boiling water.

I fry a "big" onion, add tomatoes, and when the beans are nearly done, add the onion and tomatoes, and cook together. I also boil a few cloves with my beans, and sometimes a tiny pinch of garlic. I always use red pepper with tomatoes.

I cook macaroni in like manner, with tomatoes, onion and garlic, if you like.

I agree fully with you as to children getting plenty of sleep. Mine are generally in bed by 7 o'clock, and wake at 5 or 6 o'clock, as it may be. I do not awaken them. If they wish to sleep in the daytime, they do so, sometimes out on the ground in summer weather, sometimes on their bed. I throw a light covering over them, but do not awaken them, if it can be helped.

"ONE OF THEM" (Redondo, Cal.).

A capital letter! It makes us proud of tered the fine art of seasoning that makes all the difference between the good and the mediocre cook. Your macaroni under your hands grows into the genuine Italian dish one seldom gets on this side of the water except in a first-class Italian restaurant. Much depends upon the deft addition of the "pinch" of garlic and the single clove, that touches rather than imbues the dish with spiciness. I dread to instruct an American cook to use either garlic or spices in the preparation of meats or vegetables. Her inexperienced hand is too lavish with both.

Wanted—White Fruit Cake

I should be very grateful if you will give me a recipe for a white fruit cake.

C. H. (Bolton, Ga.).

Not having one on hand that I can confidently recommend, I pass along the request. I am sorry to keep you waiting, but I want to get one you need not fear to try.

Vegetable Fruits

I beg leave to answer a query published awhile ago relative to what is known as "vegetable oranges" and "garden lemons."

Horticultural catalogs call them "vine peaches" and "garden lemons." They grow very much as melons do. The seeds are like those of the cucumber and muskmelon. They are planted in hills five or six feet apart. They grow and ripen on the vines, as melons do, but the fruit is not larger than the orange and lemon. When ripe they are peeled and sliced and preserved as one would put up peaches. If a few peaches are added, the effect is good. You can hardly tell the real from the "vine peach" in the finished product, except that the preserve made from the latter is very white and clear. On this account it makes pretty sauce and preserves.

Let those who have gardens try the vegetable fruits and they will always raise them afterward.

A. K. G. (Seattle, Wash.).

I am sure that other amateur gardeners besides myself have been deeply interested in the accounts of what is to most of us a new "fruit" for preserving. I have "made a note of it," a la Eschewing, as I do, canned fruits that are put up by the help of chemical "preservatives," my canning and preserving are no inconsiderable item in the summer's work. But it pays when the winter comes, and in more ways than one.

Men as Cooks

I think I can reply to your question about men cooks. They are more successful than women because they adhere strictly to measurements in every particular. They never vary an iota. There are probably other reasons, but this is the most important. I have friends who say, "O, I just throw things together, and they always come out right." They believe it, for they forget the failures. These average fairly well with the successes.

Will you accept my directions for steaming custard? I have never seen them in our Exchange. The recipe never fails. Three fresh eggs will do for a quart of milk, though if eggs are plentiful and cheap, more may be used. Break the eggs into a bowl or an agate pan; beat just enough to break the whites thoroughly—no more! Pour in milk, season to taste and set in a pan and cover. Do not cook too fast. In about ten minutes, begin to watch it. When it looks thick in the center, try with a silver knife, and if no custard sticks to the blade, it is done.

All my friends say I have delicious custards.

Mrs. I. L. A. B. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

As, I have no doubt, you have! Suffer a query or two. You say "season to taste." That implies sweetening as well, I suppose? I allow a tablespoonful of sugar to each egg. What is your rule? Again, you say, "Set it in a pan." I bake my custards in a pan of water. It is warm when they go in and heats to boiling by the time the custard is done. Do you mean a pan of water?

By putting these questions, I contrive to get a second letter from you, you see?

Wanted—German Recipes

Can any of the members of the Exchange tell me how to make liver pudding, or liver wurst? I should be very grateful for the information.

L. L. (New Jersey).

Our German housemothers will answer

Is it a happy coincidence that lays to my hand at this very instant the following letter?

I have received so much that is valuable from the Exchange it is but fair that I should offer something in return.

Do you ever eat sauer kraut? And do you know how delicious is the German dish liver dumplings when served with the kraut?

Chop one pound of calf's liver and grind it fine. Break into it one egg, with half a teaspoonful of pepper, and stir in enough flour to make the mixture stiff. Drop from a spoon into boiling water or into stock, which is better, and cook half an hour.

Here are two recipes which have been called for in the Exchange:

Schweizer Brechru.

(Swiss breads.)

One pound each of butter, flour and sugar, four eggs, quarter of a pound of shelled and chopped almonds, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, the rind of two grated lemons, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

Drop in small lumps on buttered tins and bake in a quick oven.

Springerlie.

(Will keep for months.)

Four eggs (whites and yolks beaten separately). Add the grated rind of one lemon and beat in gradually a pound of pulverized sugar. Lastly, add one pound of flour which has been sifted with a quarter teaspoonful of salt and one small teaspoonful of baking powder.

Knead into a dough; cover closely and let it chill three hours. Roll into sheets one-eighth of an inch thick; sprinkle lightly with flour; press with a springerlie mould; cut into little squares with a knife and place upon a board until next morning. Then sprinkle with anise seed and bake in buttered pans in a quick oven to a light straw color.

Date Bread.

(Good for breakfast.)

One egg, half a cupful of brown sugar, two cupfuls of graham flour, one cupful of white flour, two cupfuls of sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half pound of well-floured dates. Salt to taste.

I offer also a recipe for heavenly hash, altogether different from those printed in your columns.

Two pounds each of stoned cherries and currants, two oranges, pulp and juice; the juice of two lemons, four pounds of sugar. Boil until it is a thick jam.

This is a nice accompaniment for roast meats in winter.

That's all I have for you at present, but I have many stored away for future ref-consisting of steak, green peppers, tomatoes, onions, and potatoes (the latter cooked whole), and all served upon one platter? The dish was served in a hotel and was delicious. The steak seemed to be fried, but of this I am not certain. Can't you get me some good old German recipes? E. H. R. (Fort Wayne, Ind.).

Yes! to the last query. Probably! to the one that preceded it. We have a splendid corps of German housewives who will load you down with good and tested recipes. Some of the remainder of us may be able to identify the "delicious" hotel dish. I wish you had asked for the name after you had eaten it. It reads somewhat like beefsteak a la jardiniere, but that steak is broiled, not fried, and green peppers are seldom served with it.

Somebody will let us have it, if only out of gratitude for your contribution to the Exchange.

Kumyss

Some time ago you asked for a recipe for kumyss. The one I send is "tried and true." It came to me from a physician, who used it in his hospital dietary. It is advisable to put the quantity for which the formula calls into two pint bottles, unless the quart is all used the day it is opened.

Kumyss.

One scant quart of milk; half a cake of compressed yeast; one tablespoonful of sugar. Dissolve the yeast thoroughly in a tablespoonful of the milk, and the sugar in a tablespoonful of boiling water. Mix all together with the remainder of the milk.

Bottle, and cork tightly. Set in a warm place, near the fire, for three hours, or until it beads. Then remove to a cold place. It will be ready for use within twenty-four hours after making.

R. S. (Richfield Springs, N. Y.).

You have our sincere acknowledgments for the favor done us. The recipe given by a former issue of the Exchange was pronounced unsatisfactory by competent judges. You have repaired the breach in the walls we would make trustworthy throughout.

A PASSPORT TO BOGYLAND

THE CRUEL LORISES

PERSIAN-LEAF BAT

UGLY FELLOWS: GORILLA, BOAR AND SHARK

I all of them?" Tommy Tubbs asked himself, while examining the pile of addressed envelopes before ... envelopes contained valentines to be mailed that evening; and I ... say that most of the valentines were of the kind that Tommy's ... call "horrid."

"I've got them all ready—'cept ... and Billy Jones," continued ... "I don't like Billy, an' I ... he'd push me in a mud ... other day? I know what I'll ... through my Animal Book ... ugliest beast I can. An' then ... mark it 'Billy Jones' and ... him. I guess he'll say a few ... gets it!"

Tommy had a deal of talent for ... He was highly satisfied with ... he looked at the huge figure ... drawn with much care. ... gazed upon the gorilla ... admired it.

"... an ugly looking brute, but ... see some of the others who ... Bogyland," boomed a deep ...

... was startled to see a huge ... him. At the same time, ... red ape, which ... to be an orang-outang, ... the other side, with the ...

"We'd better take him to Bogyland ... he has his passport ..." ... to the drawing, the orang-outang looked at it approvingly. He motioned to the gorilla. Then the beasts grabbed Tommy's arms, and the very next instant he was being bundled out of the house, across fields and woods. At last the trio arrived in a country entirely unknown to the boy. When Tommy asked if it were Bogyland, the gorilla grunted:

"Yes; but before we show you any of its people we are going to give you something to eat. The orang-outang has been gathering some nice fruit—he lives on fruit and leaves, you know—and he has hidden it in a pleasant cavern, where you shall dine. You must be very hungry after this long journey."

Soon the black mouth of a great cave yawned before them. As the beasts politely waved for him to precede, Tommy stepped bravely across the entrance. Suddenly the dark walls were lighted by a ghostly radiance. Weird, pale lights of phosphorus flickered here and there. The boy shrank back, appalled, but the others shoved him forward.

"Pooh, don't mind the long-drawn-out Proteus. He's only a blind, pallid creature. But I must say that he and the other cold, clammy, slithering things that cling upon the walls do succeed in giving us a mighty good light."

As the orang-outang spoke he signed to the lad to seat himself upon a rock. The host darted to another boulder, and from a hollow at its base produced a handful of choice tropical fruit.

For at least once in his life Tommy did not feel hungry. Perhaps this was because he observed several bats, which were hanging to the walls, slowly begin to stir. Almost immediately a number of them—a thousand, Tommy thought—began to flutter around his head. He threw up his arms to shield his face, but the gorilla scolded him, saying:

"Don't be foolish. The bats are merely welcoming you. Why, our friend here—the Flower-Nosed Bat—has come all the way from the Solomon Islands just to see you; and that Persian-Leaf Bat has traveled from Aden. They're not bad fellows. Don't mind them if they do flap a little too much in their welcome."

But Tommy DID mind them. He was ever so glad when the three gained the outside of the cavern, where they found it to be now as dark, almost, as within.

"So much the better," said the orang-outang, "because I can show you my chums, the lorises, at their best."

The lorises, Tommy quickly learned, were ugly, monkey-like creatures, with big round eyes that gleamed in a most uncanny way. These lorises were engaged in the cruel pastime of terrorizing birds. They would creep upon the poor feathered things, frighten them out of their wits through the unearthly stare of their big eyes and then eat them.

"I call that a beastly shame not to give the birds a single chance to fly from their nests!" cried Tommy. But the orang-outang nudged him and whispered:

"Don't try to prevent the bird hunting or you'll have all the lorises down upon you, together with their allies, the specter tarsiers."

Tommy did not know that the specter tarsiers were harmless little beasts. They were so horrible in appearance that he shrank in dread from them. Whereupon the gorilla observed:

"You don't seem to be enjoying yourself. We folk of Bogyland pride ourselves upon our splendid ugliness, and we thought that, judging from your liking for ugly valentines, you would be fascinated with our company. However, let us take a voyage upon the back of this immense sea monster. Maybe such an amusement will please you better."

They had come to the shore of a great body of water. The lad ventured timidly upon the back of the giant creature, whose tail stretched out of the water. His companions talked so cheerfully that he felt less alarmed. Yet, as soon as the monster swam from land, leaving just enough of his back above water to keep the voyagers from being washed into the sea, Tommy was very much afraid. For the waves gleamed and glowed with the phosphorescent light of a million of tiny creatures, which, as the beasts explained to him, jerked up and down near the surface of the water, being checked in their descent by many hairy, feather-like bits of fringe that extended from their bodies. Every now and then the sea monster would open his mouth and swallow countless numbers of these minute creatures.

"They are SO sociable; they delight to travel together," murmured the monster, "therefore, I would not think of separating them when I gobble them—I eat them all together, so'll they be company for one another."

Tommy began to think that the monster was a kindly fellow, after all. Yet he thought it a greater kindness when he was finally put ashore in a day-lit country. His adventures were by no means over, nor were his shivers ended. He trembled at the sight of the ugly frilled lizard, at the threatening attitude of the caterpillar of the lobster moth and when a caterpillar of the puss moth shot two long, vibrating threads of a dangerous, reddish color from its tail. He was watching the changing hues of a chameleon when the gorilla remarked:

"Here comes the Bornean wild boar to take you upon a ride!"

Tommy gave one look at this fierce, bearded fellow. Then he turned and fled with a yell. The boar followed, snorting angrily and drawing nearer and nearer. Just as Tommy believed the wicked fellow had him he awoke.

Tommy Tubbs didn't send a valentine to Billy Jones. And he destroyed all of the other "comic" valentines. He had had enough of ugliness for a time.

How the Snake Became Enemy to the Bird

ON THE lowest branch of a blasted pine tree perched a Crow. Age had dulled the gloss of his black plumage and flecked it with gray.

With head sunk deep upon his breast, the old fellow dreamed. His sleepy eyes barely opened when little Robin fluttered up to him.

"Oh, my! I'm SO frightened," chirped Robin, plaintively. "Big Snake saw me in the grove yonder, where I was hunting worms, and he crawled toward me. Really, I was too scared to move. I surely would have been gobbled up had not Rabbit dashed between us. Then, while Snake was trying to catch Rabbit, I got away."

"Yes, yes," croaked the old bird, peevish because he had been disturbed; "but what of it?"

"Well, I don't think it's very nice," said the Robin, in an aggrieved tone. He added: "I don't see why Snake should be after me all the time, anyway. I've never done anything to him."

The Crow chuckled and opened his eyes a little wider. "Have you never heard of the noble Crow of a past age who offended a snake, thereby making the serpents enemies of the birds for all time?" he asked. And, without pausing for Robin to say "no," which he WOULD have said had he been given time, old Crow continued:

"It happened so very long ago that I myself did not see it—nor my father, nor my grandfather. Only the story has come down, from Crow father to Crow son, about this celebrated Crow.

"The famous bird was traveling through the air one day, when far below him on the ground he saw something quite strange.

"'It may be something good to eat,' said the Crow to himself.

"So, in order to find out, he quickly descended. As he came nearer and nearer to the earth he saw that the thing was long and round and wriggly. And the more he looked the more it seemed to him like something VERY good to eat.

"Mr. Crow soon made up his mind what to do. Like a flash he pounced upon the squirming thing. With his strong, sharp bill he bit off a good-sized piece. Then, as he started to bear away his prize, he observed the other end of the squirming thing coming toward him. Longer and longer it grew, while Crow now saw that it was drawing itself backward out of a hole in the ground. Instead of holding a big worm, Mr. Crow had the tail of a Snake in his bill! Mr. Snake had simply crawled into a rabbit burrow in search of a tender young Bunny for dinner.

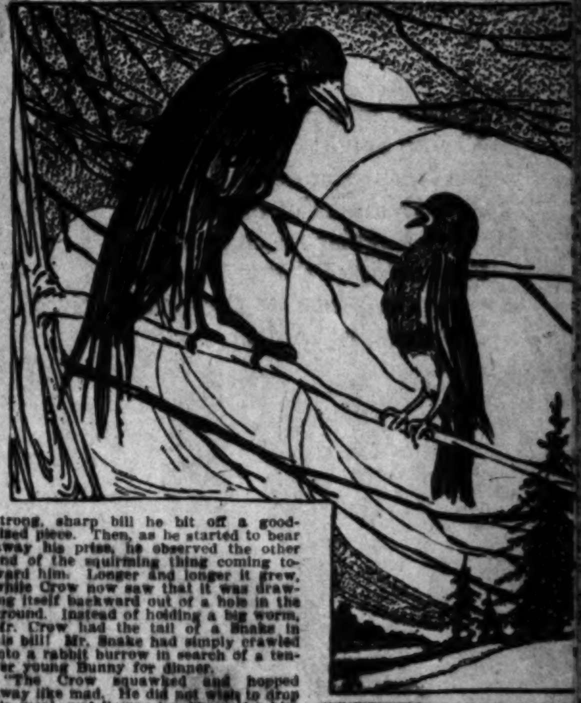
"The Crow squawked and hopped away like mad. He did not wish to drop his meal, and it was too heavy for him to carry while on the wing. After him crawled Snake, hissing fiercely and as angry as could be. He didn't enjoy having a part of himself eaten by a bird.

"Finally Snake gave up the chase. He retired sulkily to hide himself and to grow a new tail. Whereupon, Crow stopped running, and calmly ate the Snake's tail, which he found very good.

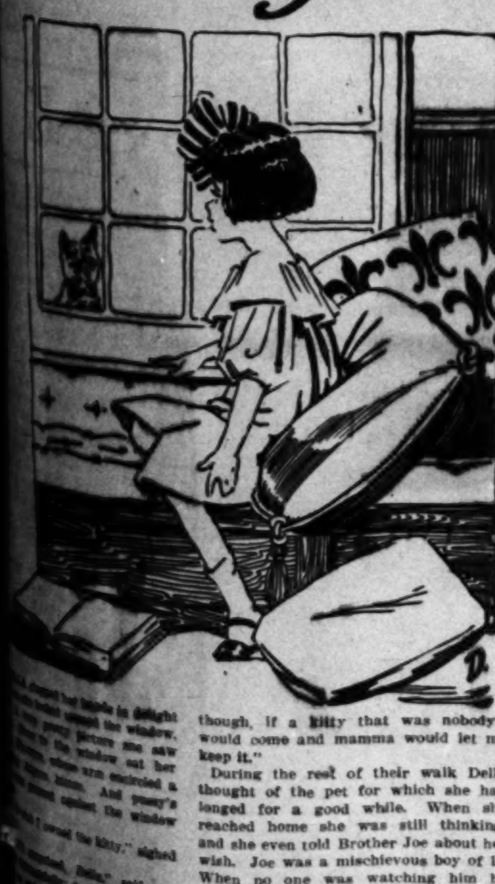
"Thereafter, the Snake and all his kin bore a grudge against the birds. But Rabbit told his parents and brothers and sisters and all his friends how the Crow had saved him from the wicked Snake just as Snake was about to drag him from the burrow. So the Rabbit folk have ever since been friendly to the birds.

"You see now that Rabbit, in saving you, was repaying his ancestor's debt to a bird. And you understand, I am sure, why the serpents will always try to do you harm."

"Yes; I do understand—and thank you," said the Robin, gratefully. But the Crow had already closed his eyes and seemed fast asleep.



Nobody's Kitty



though, if a kitty that was nobody's would come and mamma would let me keep it."

During the rest of their walk Della thought of the pet for which she had longed for a good while. When she reached home she was still thinking. She even told Brother Joe about her wish. Joe was a mischievous boy of 11. When no one was watching him he scribbled great letters upon a large sheet of paper and tacked the paper under the window at the front of the house. This is what the passersby read:

CAT WANTED!
None but NICE cats need apply.
Della wants a cat for her VALENTINE!

It was St. Valentine's Day, you understand. Joe believed he had played a splendid joke upon Della, especially when the lassie took her place at the window right above the sign.

"It's a dandy ad, too," chuckled the boy, as he peeped round the corner to see if anything would happen.

Presently, while Della gazed out upon the people, a thin, starved-looking cat crept from the hedge near the garden gate. It looked affrightedly this way and that, as though expecting some one to give chase. Then, as it espied Della, the cat walked slowly toward the window. Pausing just a moment, it crouched—and with a bound had gained the windowsill.

Della's eyes opened wider and wider, until they were 'most as big as saucers—doll's saucers, anyway. I'm afraid her mouth opened, too. Certainly it did when the cat gently tapped with her paw at the window pane. Della screamed her joy as she flung open the window and hugged the cat to her breast.

"Now, if mamma'll only let me keep it!" she whispered excitedly.

And mamma DID, after the family had laughed over Joe's story of how the cat had come to Della in response to the "advertisement."

"I don't care! It was the very nicest valentine that could have been sent!" said the lassie stoutly as she gave her pet another fond hug.

Could See Many Miles

A COUPLE of English "boy scouts" started to climb a hill, but when they reached the top they were disappointed to find that they couldn't see very far because of the mist. There was a countryman sitting on the hill and they thought they would have some fun with him.

So one boy said: "You can see a long way from here when there is no mist, can't you?" "Oh, yes, my lads, I can see a very long way," replied the man. "Can you see as far as London?" asked the boy scout.

"I can see further than London," returned the countryman. "Can you see America, then?" he was asked.

"Yes, I can see much further than America," replied the countryman. "Further than America!" exclaimed the boy scouts, and they laughed heartily.

"Yes," quietly explained the countryman, "when the night is clear and there is no mist, I can see all the way to the moon."

The boys stopped laughing.

A VALENTINE MIX-UP

AS CUPID flew about, betimes—
'Twas day before St. Valentine's—
He found a postman sound asleep,
A bag of letters in his keep.
"He careless was, to stop to rest,"
Said Cupid, in a tone suppressed.
This naughty lad then opened wide

The bag, and straightway beamed with pride.
"Aha! a thousand notes here show
How straight and swift my arrows go!"
And while he cried there came a smile.
"I've now," said he, "a joke worth while."
And quick, by magic known to him,
He opened envelopes most trim,
And valentines poured in a heap.
Some were expensive, others cheap;
Some were like lace and flimsy quite;
Some spoke of love and some of spite.
"I'll mix them all! I'll change them all!
And then we'll see what will befall!"
Sly Cupid chuckled loud and gay;
With task complete, he went away.
Next morn the people were surprised,
As knowing Cupid had surmised.

Some folk were pleased, and others not;
Some rushed for guns, with anger hot.
One lad received a tender note
For a better one a lassie wrote;
And she, instead of sweetest verse,
Received a comic one, perverse.
A boy had meant to play a joke
Upon his teacher, but she broke
The envelope to be quite charmed.

Poor Granny, though she was not harmed,
Was sore insulted and alarmed
When words of malice she had read.
But naughty Cupid, it is said,
No sign of penitence would show.
Said he: "It would not happen so—
No word could reach me in complaint—
If valentines were free from taint
Of spitefulness, and girl and boy
Sent words of only love and joy."

A Funny Story

ON ONE of the rivers in China a passenger boat had just started when a man came running up and called out, "Stop, stop! and take me on board."

"You are too late," replied the boatman.

"If you will let me come I will tell you a tale," the man called out.

Now, everybody likes to hear a story, and so the passengers persuaded the captain to take the man on board, and he began:

"Once upon a time a famous general led an army to the south to fight an enemy. On their way they came to a river which they had to cross. They were only able to build a very narrow bridge, so that they had to cross over one by one. Tramp, tramp, tramp, tramp; one after the other—tramp, tramp, tramp."

The man kept on saying, "Tramp, tramp, tramp," for some time, until the people grew tired of it. At last one said: "Yes, but go on with the story."

"You must let them get across the river," the man replied. "One after the other—tramp, tramp, tramp."

Presently the people stopped him again and asked him to miss all that part of his story, but the man replied: "They cannot cross the bridge in a short time; they must go slowly and carefully, one after the other—tramp, tramp, tramp," and so the man kept on and would say nothing else.

At last the boat reached the end of its journey, and the story was never finished.

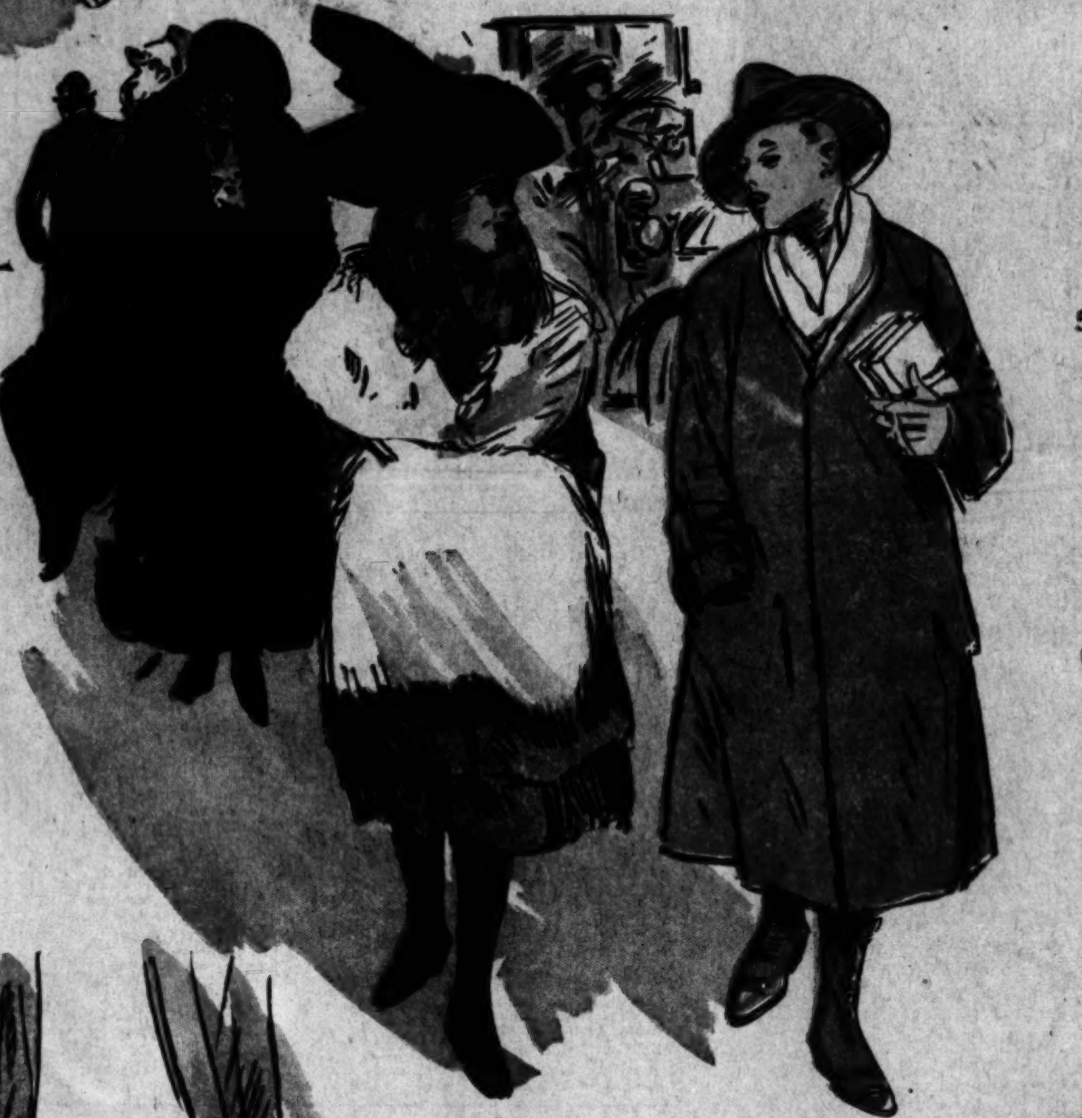
1.- Our Cynthia purchased valentines
For all her little friends,
But had a task selecting one
For Seymour Dividends.
She found a "Freshie" one at last—
Contemptible and base—
But even then not bad enough,
She thought, to fit his case.

2.- 'Tis strange, but Seymour Dividends
Was searching at this time
For one to send to Cynthia,
Entirely "unsublime."
A "Stuck up thing" engaged his eye;
He purchased it in lieu
Of something that would fully meet
His very biassed view



3.- He purchased still another one,
Embossed with Cupids rife
And arrow-punctured throbbing hearts.—
For charming Miss de Fife;
And Cynthia bought a lovely gem
Of ultra-bilious hue
To cheer the erstwhile pensive soul
Of gentle Cyril Drew.

4.- And then, with pulses all athrob,
Young Seymour wrote his name
In smallest script beneath a heart,
And Cynthia did the same:
But, by singular mischance,
Perplexing to define,
They mixed them up and each received
Another's valentine.

5.- Young Drew was sure that Miss d
The "Freshie" one had mailed,
And figured how he best could sh
Her little joke had failed;
And Miss de Fife to Cyril laid
That "Stuck up thing" design
(This soulful chromo being one That Seymour didn't sign).

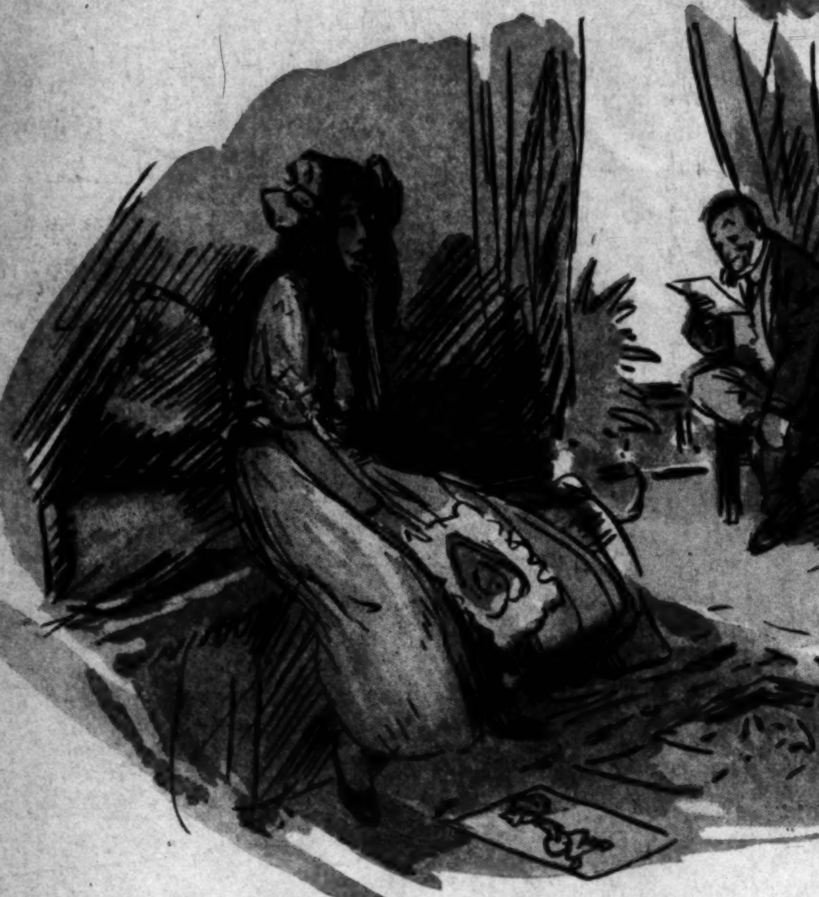
6.- Concerning Seymour Dividends—
When Cynthia found his name
Upon her gorgeous valentine
She didn't feel the same.
"I hope, with truth, concerning
He'll never come in touch.
I never knew before," said she,
He cared for me so much."



7.—And Seymour murmured, "Golly gee!
I can't believe my eyes!
To get a thing like this from her
Is sure a big surprise.
She's got that 'Gwen' de Fife stood still
And beaten by a mile.
Just think! When I have been so mean
She's liked me all the while."

8.—With Seymour walking by her side,
Her books beneath his arm,
Dear mamma viewed her child next day
With feelings of alarm;
When questioned how unto this lad
Her feelings had been warmed,
She said, "I did dislike him once,
But mamma, he's reformed."
